The Haunted Glen.

I.

Oh! sweet's the breath of dewy eve,
In Woodburn's fairy glen,
Where wild flowers blow and streamlets flow,
And the Mavis pours his strain.
'Tis there the wild dove sings of love,
Her partner to retain,
And trusts his glowing breast she'll move
To warm her nest again!

II.

'Tis there that Spring unfolds her robes,
And decks the groves in green,
While choral strains, from bowers of bloom,
Proclaim the matcheless scene!
There Nature wears her sweetest smile,
How sweet that eye can tell,
That woo's her fair romantic charms,
By forest, flood, and fell!

III.

'Tis there the Woodbine sweet intwines,
The Monarch of the grove,
And there a Fair one oft delights,
At evening tide to rove;
Till late, with weary wandering tired,
She sought the Sylvan shade,
When slumbers in a dream of Love,
Did every sense pervade.

IV.

There oft by Luna's midnight lamp,
Trip Fairies too and fro,
With flowing reins to cheering strains,
They merrily round do go;
When lately seen, all decked in green,
As was their Queen arrayed,
While music, from a source unseen,
Came softly,—sweetly played!

V.

I sought her where the spreading birch,
Had formed a rural bower,
Where bloomed the rose in Beauty's pride,
The hawthorne, white in flower!
There came a voice, the Cuckoo's call,
In playful, taunting strain,
Oh! could he wake my dreaming Love,
Her radiant smile again!

VI.

I sought her where the Turtle builds
Her home, within the shade,
And where the torrent leaps in foam,
And rolls adown the glade;
I sought her where the Primrose sheds
It's sweetness 'neath the Pine,
And drew her to my throbbing heart,
Now she's for ever mine!

Temperance at Hermitage, Lot 48.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—Mr. George Gay, of this place, lectured on temperance, in the Hermitage School House, on Thursday, the 22nd instant, to a large and intelligent audience. Amongst those who came from other places were J. R. Bourke, of the City Hardware Store, Charlottetown; J. W. Young, John Acorn, W. G. McDonald, Angus McKenzie and Edward Gay, from Mill View. The Chairman, James Acorn, Esq., introduced the lecturer, and stated the subject. Mr. Gay's lecture was delivered extempore, without reference to either books or notes, and occupied nearly an hour. The evils of intemperance were very graphically portrayed by the learned lecturer, and as he pointed out the shame, disgrace and ruin of the drunkard, I am assured that many — very many — were deeply impressed. He counselled his hearers to wholly abstain from that terrible curse, which had the vilest treachery lurking in its most winning smile. He concluded by saying that he knew the time was not far distant when the day would dawn and usher in the glorious morn of temperance, and he fancied he could hear the voices of the assembled thousands, sending over hill and valley the words of that beautiful temperance hymn, "Temperance forever; hurrah, friends, hurrah!"

Flattering speeches were delivered at the close, and a vote of thanks tendered to the lecturer. We may add that this lecture was delivered under the auspices of the Hermitage Debating Society, which is doing good work.

Yours, etc.,
ONE WHO WAS PRESENT.

Hermitage, Feb. 24, 1883.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

MY DEAR SIR,—In addition to what I have previously written to you, upon the text "In the last days perilous times shall come," I now beg your permission to add the statement that the Almighty truly foresaw and foretold all that is now come, and coming to pass, inasmuch as HE gave many warnings and intimations of the future, or rather of what was then the future, both in the Old Testament and the New. I protest against any tampering with that Bible which has guided the lives and cheered the deathbeds of so many Christians during so many centuries.

'Timeo Danaos, et dona ferentes." I dread Colenso, Mackonochy, Huxley, Darwin, et id genus omne, of innovators and infidels; they really remind me of a bit of doggrel and wood cut, in the window of a London tobacconist, representing by way of illustration, an Englishman, a Scotsman, and an Irishman:—

"We three is engaged in one cause!
"I smokes," "I snuffs," and "I chaws."

But, to be serious; let us refer to the revelation of St. John the Divine, ch XXII verses 18 and 19:—

"For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, if any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this Book."

"And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book."

I am, Sir,
Your obdt. servant,
VICH DHOMNUIL NAN ORD.

Revolt at Sing Sing.

THE INSURRECTION SAID TO BE SPREADING—FIGHTS BETWEEN THE CONVICTS.

SING SING, Feb. 22.—It is stated that Superintendent Baker told the warden that the Governor urged upon him the necessity of using most vigorous measures to restore and maintain discipline. "The revolt," he said, "must be suppressed at all hazards." It is said that the plan agreed upon is to give the convicts a chance to-day to reconsider their determination not to work, and if they still hold out to remove as many of them as the place will accommodate to the old female prison, and there confine them in bare cells without bedding, upon half a pound of bread and a cup of water a day. The long term men and those who lost their commutation are for carrying the revolt through to a desperate end, and the short term men are opposed to the plan. Yesterday there were fourteen fights between the representatives of the two classes. Several non-revolting convicts were severely injured and three were carried to the hospital. Wynn and Snyder were selected to lead the revolt. Four hundred convicts in the foundries yesterday stopped work, but Wynn said he had had trouble enough and Snyder said he did not want to risk a revolt. The men, after ten minutes delay resumed work. Three convicts headed by Alfred Miller attacked Suyden, and would have killed him had not Texas Jack gone to his rescue. Suyden was badly beaten, and was in a weak condition. Last evening the assailants were all locked in the cells as revolters. In the mounting shop, John Callahan and another convict unmercifully beat Richard Elliot. George Phelps, the convict who refused to lead the company of revolters, who knocked and trampled by several others. To-day it is expected the whole foundry will go out with the rest. Keeper Thies received ugly cuts on the head yesterday, but the manner in which he got them could not be ascertained. He was taken to the hospital too weak to stand. Warden Brush is confident he can cope with any ordinary outbreak. In the arsenal there are 50 new Winchester rifles, and the guards on the walls are armed. The Wardens says the majority of the convicts wish to maintain order and discipline. In all 244 men are locked up for refusing to work, and of these 232 are employed under the contract system. The Warden expects before the end of the week the whole may be in revolt. Later accounts show a more favourable state of affairs. The men are now quieting down.

Wynn, the long-term desperado and ringleader in several riots in the State Prison, who was to have been leader in the general strike yesterday received early in the day a telegram from friends in Ulster county, who expressed confidence that pardon would shortly be obtained for him. Wynn then put on his good behaviour at once, and refused to have anything to do with the strikers, who being deprived of a leader doggedly went to work. In the afternoon the gangs which revolted in the forepart of the week were brought out from the dark cells, and after being fed returned to work. The ringleaders Roney, Doyle, Ryan, and Smith, will be punished before being allowed to return to their regular duties. With one exception the convicts who testified before the Examining Committee have not yet been punish. It is estimated that the present revolt cost the taypayers $10,000,000, and it will take several years to regain the lost ground.

The Stipendiary Magistrate of Yarmouth N. S., has fined a local druggist ten dollars and costs for selling alcohol. Several lads testified to buying alcohol from his clerk, and one of them had got into a row from its effects upon him which cost him seven or eight dollars fine. The defendant proved by his own and his clerk's testimony that he had given orders to the clerk not to sell alcohol in his absence, and two doctors called as experts, as well as himself, testified that alcohol was not an intoxicating liquor but a poison, and the defendant had only sold it himself as a medicine. After a day's deliberation the magistrate said that to give a decision for the defence would establish the most dangerous precedent that alcohol was not an intoxicating liquor, and alcohol shops would be opened up all over town and liberally patronized by some people. He regarded the liquid as an intoxicating liquor within the meaning of the act, and looked upon the evidence of the medical gentlemen as merely a professional technicality, and he imposed the fine mentioned above. "The druggist's claim," says a local report, "that if this decision is held to be good law they will have to shut up shop, as essences, tinctures, liniments, chloroform and its preparations and countless other articles generally sold by them contain large percentages of alcohol." The defendant will therefore appeal to the Supreme Court, being supported in doing so, it is understood, by the Nova Scotia Pharmaceutical Society.

All who joy would win must share it. Happiness was born a twin.
