To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—The second Grit Campaign at Dundas, Major General Turner holding a Council of war on (Pons Assinorum) or Bridge of Asses; Colonel McPherson mustering up the 42nd Highlanders, numbering two; General McDuff recruiting a troop of Sepoys; Major General Turner shouting his war cry, commenced the skirmish on the east side of Wordock Brook. General Turner and Duff were sadly defeated with their Cavalry Brigade; a battle grim, and strong was raging for a brief period, when General Turner's army was sadly defeated and retired to the jungles. General Steele holding the fort with triumphant victory; Commander Morson lost his boxing gloves in the skirmish. The Highland bag-pipes playing the Dead March in Saul, when General McDuff reconnoitered his force and the firing ceased pro tem.—Com.

which were shown to Cetewayo.

THE LONDON TRUTH says that a speculator in New York has resolved to tempt Professor Huxley across the Atlantic by the offer of £100 per lecture for a series of two hundred discourses on popular science, to be delivered during 1883 and 1884.

THE venerable Marshal Canrobert lives in a small house in Paris, in the Rue de Marignan.
It is plainly furnished, for, like most French soldiers, he is careless of luxury, and pays little attention to the fine arts. The Marshal, now seventy-three years old, is a man of medium size, with curly grey hair, a snowy beard, a high intellectual forehead, and keen, brilliant eyes.

THE Emperor William is a man of iron if not of blood. He was present for nearly two hours at a grand reception in Breslau a fortnight ago. He occasionally leaned on his great cuirassier sabre as if it were a stick, but otherwise showed no signs of fatigue, though he had been in the saddle two hours, reviewed 23,000 troops, received deputations, and presided at a State banquet during the day—not bad for a man of eighty-four.

THE death is announced of the Right Hon.
Charles Stuart Aubrey Abbott, Baron Tenterden, Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs of Great Britain, an office which he has filled since 1873. He was a nephew of the second Lord Tenterden and grandson of the first lord, who was for many years Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas and afterwards Chief Justice of England. He was born in the year 1834.

THERE is an honest young man in New Jersey named William Walter Phelps. This honest young man declared that he did not want to go to Congress, and thereupon somebody spent ever so much money to secure his nomination. Poor old John Hill was beaten out of sight. Mr. William Walter Phelps is very sorry for this, for really he did not want the office, but he feels bound to accept, so that the money that was spent to secure his nomination may not be entirely wasted.

A FEW days ago, Victor Hugo made some apocalyptic utterances to an Italian journalist relating to the future course of civilization in France, Italy, and Spain, he said, are destined to be representatives of civilization. The Turks are to be driven out of Europe. The twentieth century will see Africa civilized by means of the Mediterranean Powers, including England, owing to her possessions at Gibralter. As for the English campaign in Egypt, that, said Victor Hugo, is "only a transitory incident, a repugnant episode of modern history."

HIS HOLINESS POPE LEO XIII. has been pleased to confer the degree of D. D. on four Professors of the University of Ottawa, viz., the R. R. J. B. Balland, J. J. Filatre, J.
Mangin, and P. Froc. The Rev. J. B.
Balland, Lecturer on Applied Sciences is well known throughout Canada as a musician of more than ordinary merit, one composition of his being the favourite and most appreciated piece played at the band competition in Montreal in 1878; Rev. J. J. Filatre, Professor of Mental and Moral Philosophy, is the author of a "History of Philosophy," and is also, as well as the Rev. J. B. Balland, a linguist of high standing. Revs. Mangin and Froc are Professors of Theology in the College, Ottawa.

"TWENTY-FOUR YEARS' EXPERIENCE," says an eminent physician, convinces me that the only cure for "Nervous Exhaustion" and weakness of the generative organs is to repair the waste by giving Brain and Nerve Foods, and of all the remedies I have used, Mack's Magnetic Medicine is the best. This remedy is now sold by all our Druggists at 50 cents per box, or 6 for $2.50, and on receipt of an order for 12 boxes accompanied with $5.00, addressed to Mack's Magnetic Medicine Co., Windsor, Ont., they will forward the goods free by mail, and send their "written guarantee" to refund the money, if the treatment does not effect a cure. See advt. in another column.

A Canadian's Death.

My wife's address is Winnipeg, Manitoba. When the Cunard Steamship Company find my ticket is all right I want it to send the money to her—Rebecca Miller—at the above address. The man where I am stopping will sell all my things, and pay himself, and if there is any left send it to the same address. If the Freemasons can consistently take charge of my remains, it would be my dying wish that they should, for I am too honest to steal and too proud to beg. So here must end the conflict. No one to blame here. There is no one to blame but my unfortunate wife and family.

Such was the pathetic letter hurriedly scrawled in a memorandum book which was taken from the body of a man about 65 years of age, who was found dead in his bed in the cheap lodging house, No.
341 West-street, yesterday morning. The proprietor of the lodging house, John Weisinger, reports that the man arrived there on Tuesday last, gave his name as David Miller, of Manitoba, and stated that he intended to take the next outgoing Cunard steamer for England. The next day he reported that he had lost his passage tickets by the line, and had been to the office of the Company, where-after reporting his loss, he was told that they did not know him and could do nothing for him. He placed his trunk in the custody of Mr. Weisinger as security for his lodging, and took his meals in the restaurant on the floor below. On Saturday night he went to a room in which two other lodgers slept, and retired to rest. In the morning he was dead. Besides the memorandum book was found a Masonic pin.—N. Y. Herald.

An Ancient Painting.

A correspondent of the London Times describes a painting found at Pompeii and placed within a month in the Naples Museum among the Pompeian frescos.
The picture represents the judgement of Solomon, and the correspondent claims that it is the first picture on a sacred subject, "the first fragment either of Judaism or Christianity," that has been found in the buried cities. The picture is five and a half feet long and nineteen inches high. As a work of art it is pronounced below the Pompeian standard, though the colors are particularly bright.
"The scene is laid upon a terrace in front of a house adorned with creeping plants and shaded with a white awning. On a dais (represented as being about four feet high) sits the King, holding a sceptre and robed in white. On each side of him sits a councillor, and behind them six soldiers under arms. The King is represented as leaning over the front of the dais towards a woman in a green robe, who kneels before him with dis-hevelled hair and outstretched hands.
In the centre of the court is a three-legged table, like a butcher's block, upon which lies an infant, who is held in a recumbent position, in spite of his struggles, by a woman wearing a turban.
A soldier in armor and wearing a helmet with a long red plume holds the legs of the infant and is about to cleave it in two with a falchion. A group of spectators completes the picture, which contains in all nineteen figures." Persons who have examined it are somewhat inclined to the opinion that, as the bodies of the figures are dwarfed and the heads large out of all proportion, the picture was intended to caricature the Jews and their religion.
The writer however, thinks the artist wished to develop the facial expression, and so exaggerated the heads. The work is spirited and drawn with great freedom.

Signs and Countersigns.

Tramps in England have a unique system of signs and countersigns, by means of which they escape many kicks, cuffs, and neglects. There is a perfect science of this odd method of speech.
The language is vernacular to two classes: the vagrants themselves, and the lodging-house keepers who make a profitable and permanent business of giving them shelter. The latter are the brains of the combination. There are said to be fifty different sets of password systems in use in the country, each having a field peculiar to itself. The tramp landlords form among themselves mystic circles, small circles form great ones, and so along the great highway pickets are kept out over an area where in each set the passwords once adopted are good for three months' use. At every change the travelling fraternity buys the new signs, this price being uniformly threepence for every comer. To the landlords—a peculiar tribe, some of whom have had the business in their families for generations—this tax is a source of gain. Its collection is easy and sure, for the advantages of imitation to the vagrant are many and obvious. The wanderer who has luck never hesitates to share his good fortune with his less fortunate brother; the magic word, or phrase, or sentence—unintelligible jargon to the out-side world—is an "open sesame" to his store of beggar wealth.
