

Every one can master a grief but he who has it.

THE GUARDIAN OF THE GULF

The People's Paper Read by Everybody

Covers Prince Edward Island Like the Dew

How wretched is that poor man that hangs on politicians' favours.

By Carrier: Charlottetown, Summerside 30c weekly. Elsewhere in
P. E. I. 15c weekly. Other Provinces and U. S. A. $12.00 per annum.

CHARLOTTETOWN, CANADA, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1951

16 PAGES

The Guardian, Five Cents.
Morning Daily Founded 1887.

DOCTORS REPORT KING CONTINUES TO GAIN STRENGTH

Yanks Humble Reds In Longest Jet Battle

Many Anticipate Royal Tour Will Be Postponed

By Douglas Ho

OTTAWA, Sept. 26 (CP)—Official circles reported tonight Princess Elizabeth is understood to be considering postponement of her Canadian tour.

They felt that final word should come tomorrow.

There appeared to be fairly general agreement with the view of one official who said he felt the odds are about 10-1 that the royal tour of the Princess and the Duke of Edinburgh will not keep to the schedule now mapped out to start at Quebec City next Tuesday.

With the King gaining strength but still dangerously ill, the government already has told the Princess to act "as any devoted daughter would do" under similar circumstances.

This was done on the authority of Prime Minister St. Laurent several days ago and is believed to have been reiterated by Mr. St. Laurent Monday in a transatlantic telephone conversation with Prime Minister Attlee.

Mr. St. Laurent said after that conversation that he expected to be in touch with Mr. Attlee again last evening or today. The initiative is believed to have been left with the United Kingdom Prime Minister when he had something specific to report but no new transatlantic phone call for Mr.

St. Laurent was made during the day.

By the end of the day, however, officials were saying that the Princess and her advisers undoubtedly now are considering postponement of the coast-to-coast visit and that consideration is being given by them to the terms of postponement—whether it should be long or short, set over indefinitely or to a specific date.

Officials in Suspense

Meanwhile, tour officials here described themselves as "in suspense."

The R.C.A.F. has been awaiting word whether its prize C5 transport plane will be needed to fly to London to bring the royal couple here in time to launch the tour on schedule. It would, officials say, have to take off by tomorrow night if it were to go.

Official indications were, however, that if the royal couple does fly over it will be in a British plane.

The fact that there was no renewal of the St. Laurent-Attlee telephone talks caused some surprise here in view of Mr. St. Laurent's statement that he expected they would be in conversation again by this morning.

This statement gave rise to some feelings that Mr. Attlee is acting as the main liaison between Canada and the Princess but official quarters said this is not so.

Monday's St. Laurent-Attlee talk mainly concerned the condition of the King which Mr. Attlee then reported "very encouraging."

With the King gaining strength but still dangerously ill, the government already has told the Princess to act "as any devoted daughter would do" under similar circumstances.

This was done on the authority of Prime Minister St. Laurent several days ago and is believed to have been reiterated by Mr. St. Laurent Monday in a transatlantic telephone conversation with Prime Minister Attlee.

Mr. St. Laurent said after that conversation that he expected to be in touch with Mr. Attlee again last evening or today. The initiative is believed to have been left with the United Kingdom Prime Minister when he had something specific to report but no new transatlantic phone call for Mr.

St. Laurent was made during the day.

By the end of the day, however, officials were saying that the Princess and her advisers undoubtedly now are considering postponement of the coast-to-coast visit and that consideration is being given by them to the terms of postponement—whether it should be long or short, set over indefinitely or to a specific date.

Officials in Suspense

Meanwhile, tour officials here described themselves as "in suspense."

The R.C.A.F. has been awaiting word whether its prize C5 transport plane will be needed to fly to London to bring the royal couple here in time to launch the tour on schedule. It would, officials say, have to take off by tomorrow night if it were to go.

Official indications were, however, that if the royal couple does fly over it will be in a British plane.

The fact that there was no renewal of the St. Laurent-Attlee telephone talks caused some surprise here in view of Mr. St. Laurent's statement that he expected they would be in conversation again by this morning.

This statement gave rise to some feelings that Mr. Attlee is acting as the main liaison between Canada and the Princess but official quarters said this is not so.

Monday's St. Laurent-Attlee talk mainly concerned the condition of the King which Mr. Attlee then reported "very encouraging."

With the King gaining strength but still dangerously ill, the government already has told the Princess to act "as any devoted daughter would do" under similar circumstances.

This was done on the authority of Prime Minister St. Laurent several days ago and is believed to have been reiterated by Mr. St. Laurent Monday in a transatlantic telephone conversation with Prime Minister Attlee.

Mr. St. Laurent said after that conversation that he expected to be in touch with Mr. Attlee again last evening or today. The initiative is believed to have been left with the United Kingdom Prime Minister when he had something specific to report but no new transatlantic phone call for Mr.

St. Laurent was made during the day.

By the end of the day, however, officials were saying that the Princess and her advisers undoubtedly now are considering postponement of the coast-to-coast visit and that consideration is being given by them to the terms of postponement—whether it should be long or short, set over indefinitely or to a specific date.

Officials in Suspense

Meanwhile, tour officials here described themselves as "in suspense."

The R.C.A.F. has been awaiting word whether its prize C5 transport plane will be needed to fly to London to bring the royal couple here in time to launch the tour on schedule. It would, officials say, have to take off by tomorrow night if it were to go.

Official indications were, however, that if the royal couple does fly over it will be in a British plane.

The fact that there was no renewal of the St. Laurent-Attlee telephone talks caused some surprise here in view of Mr. St. Laurent's statement that he expected they would be in conversation again by this morning.

This statement gave rise to some feelings that Mr. Attlee is acting as the main liaison between Canada and the Princess but official quarters said this is not so.

Monday's St. Laurent-Attlee talk mainly concerned the condition of the King which Mr. Attlee then reported "very encouraging."

With the King gaining strength but still dangerously ill, the government already has told the Princess to act "as any devoted daughter would do" under similar circumstances.

This was done on the authority of Prime Minister St. Laurent several days ago and is believed to have been reiterated by Mr. St. Laurent Monday in a transatlantic telephone conversation with Prime Minister Attlee.

Mr. St. Laurent said after that conversation that he expected to be in touch with Mr. Attlee again last evening or today. The initiative is believed to have been left with the United Kingdom Prime Minister when he had something specific to report but no new transatlantic phone call for Mr.

St. Laurent was made during the day.

37 Sabre Jets Take On 100 Russian Migs

By John Randolph

U. S. EIGHTH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Sept. 26 (Wednesday) — (AP) — Thirty-seven American Sabre jets battled 100 Russian built Mig-15 jets over Northwest Korea Tuesday in history's biggest and longest all-jet sky fight.

The American pilots reported they shot down five Migs and damaged five more without loss to themselves during the 35-minute action which swirled upward to six miles.

Today, Far East Air Force headquarters in Tokyo boosted the previous estimate of 80 Red jets to 100.

Last April 12, 100 U. S. jets and 65 Migs tangled over "Mig Alley" but it was not an all-jet fight. Thirty-two Superfort bombers also were involved. F. E. A. F. reported then that eight Migs were destroyed, seven probably destroyed and 18 damaged.

The battle, ranging up to 35,000 feet, lasted only 35 minutes. But it was enough to set a record for length in the brief history of jet warfare. The longest previous was a 30-minute battle Sept. 3.

On the ground Allied troops seized a commanding peak west of "Heartbreak Ridge" on the eastern front. In the west and centre, United Nations patrols ran up against bitter resistance.

Officials in Suspense

Meanwhile, tour officials here described themselves as "in suspense."

The R.C.A.F. has been awaiting word whether its prize C5 transport plane will be needed to fly to London to bring the royal couple here in time to launch the tour on schedule. It would, officials say, have to take off by tomorrow night if it were to go.

Official indications were, however, that if the royal couple does fly over it will be in a British plane.

The fact that there was no renewal of the St. Laurent-Attlee telephone talks caused some surprise here in view of Mr. St. Laurent's statement that he expected they would be in conversation again by this morning.

This statement gave rise to some feelings that Mr. Attlee is acting as the main liaison between Canada and the Princess but official quarters said this is not so.

Monday's St. Laurent-Attlee talk mainly concerned the condition of the King which Mr. Attlee then reported "very encouraging."

With the King gaining strength but still dangerously ill, the government already has told the Princess to act "as any devoted daughter would do" under similar circumstances.

This was done on the authority of Prime Minister St. Laurent several days ago and is believed to have been reiterated by Mr. St. Laurent Monday in a transatlantic telephone conversation with Prime Minister Attlee.

Mr. St. Laurent said after that conversation that he expected to be in touch with Mr. Attlee again last evening or today. The initiative is believed to have been left with the United Kingdom Prime Minister when he had something specific to report but no new transatlantic phone call for Mr.

St. Laurent was made during the day.

By the end of the day, however, officials were saying that the Princess and her advisers undoubtedly now are considering postponement of the coast-to-coast visit and that consideration is being given by them to the terms of postponement—whether it should be long or short, set over indefinitely or to a specific date.

Officials in Suspense

Meanwhile, tour officials here described themselves as "in suspense."

The R.C.A.F. has been awaiting word whether its prize C5 transport plane will be needed to fly to London to bring the royal couple here in time to launch the tour on schedule. It would, officials say, have to take off by tomorrow night if it were to go.

Official indications were, however, that if the royal couple does fly over it will be in a British plane.

The fact that there was no renewal of the St. Laurent-Attlee telephone talks caused some surprise here in view of Mr. St. Laurent's statement that he expected they would be in conversation again by this morning.

This statement gave rise to some feelings that Mr. Attlee is acting as the main liaison between Canada and the Princess but official quarters said this is not so.

Monday's St. Laurent-Attlee talk mainly concerned the condition of the King which Mr. Attlee then reported "very encouraging."

With the King gaining strength but still dangerously ill, the government already has told the Princess to act "as any devoted daughter would do" under similar circumstances.

This was done on the authority of Prime Minister St. Laurent several days ago and is believed to have been reiterated by Mr. St. Laurent Monday in a transatlantic telephone conversation with Prime Minister Attlee.

Mr. St. Laurent said after that conversation that he expected to be in touch with Mr. Attlee again last evening or today. The initiative is believed to have been left with the United Kingdom Prime Minister when he had something specific to report but no new transatlantic phone call for Mr.

St. Laurent was made during the day.

By the end of the day, however, officials were saying that the Princess and her advisers undoubtedly now are considering postponement of the coast-to-coast visit and that consideration is being given by them to the terms of postponement—whether it should be long or short, set over indefinitely or to a specific date.

Officials in Suspense

Meanwhile, tour officials here described themselves as "in suspense."

The R.C.A.F. has been awaiting word whether its prize C5 transport plane will be needed to fly to London to bring the royal couple here in time to launch the tour on schedule. It would, officials say, have to take off by tomorrow night if it were to go.

Official indications were, however, that if the royal couple does fly over it will be in a British plane.

The fact that there was no renewal of the St. Laurent-Attlee telephone talks caused some surprise here in view of Mr. St. Laurent's statement that he expected they would be in conversation again by this morning.

This statement gave rise to some feelings that Mr. Attlee is acting as the main liaison between Canada and the Princess but official quarters said this is not so.

Lower Newtown Man Killed In Accident

Mr. Daniel Smith, aged 79, of Lower Newtown, was killed last night when the wagon in which he was riding was struck by a truck driven by Stirling Hackett, believed to be a resident of Uigg. The accident occurred near Orwell.

Dr. Lemuel E. Prowse, Senior

Officials in Suspense

Meanwhile, tour officials here described themselves as "in suspense."

The R.C.A.F. has been awaiting word whether its prize C5 transport plane will be needed to fly to London to bring the royal couple here in time to launch the tour on schedule. It would, officials say, have to take off by tomorrow night if it were to go.

Official indications were, however, that if the royal couple does fly over it will be in a British plane.

The fact that there was no renewal of the St. Laurent-Attlee telephone talks caused some surprise here in view of Mr. St. Laurent's statement that he expected they would be in conversation again by this morning.

This statement gave rise to some feelings that Mr. Attlee is acting as the main liaison between Canada and the Princess but official quarters said this is not so.

Monday's St. Laurent-Attlee talk mainly concerned the condition of the King which Mr. Attlee then reported "very encouraging."

With the King gaining strength but still dangerously ill, the government already has told the Princess to act "as any devoted daughter would do" under similar circumstances.

This was done on the authority of Prime Minister St. Laurent several days ago and is believed to have been reiterated by Mr. St. Laurent Monday in a transatlantic telephone conversation with Prime Minister Attlee.

Mr. St. Laurent said after that conversation that he expected to be in touch with Mr. Attlee again last evening or today. The initiative is believed to have been left with the United Kingdom Prime Minister when he had something specific to report but no new transatlantic phone call for Mr.

St. Laurent was made during the day.

By the end of the day, however, officials were saying that the Princess and her advisers undoubtedly now are considering postponement of the coast-to-coast visit and that consideration is being given by them to the terms of postponement—whether it should be long or short, set over indefinitely or to a specific date.

Officials in Suspense

Meanwhile, tour officials here described themselves as "in suspense."

The R.C.A.F. has been awaiting word whether its prize C5 transport plane will be needed to fly to London to bring the royal couple here in time to launch the tour on schedule. It would, officials say, have to take off by tomorrow night if it were to go.

Official indications were, however, that if the royal couple does fly over it will be in a British plane.

The fact that there was no renewal of the St. Laurent-Attlee telephone talks caused some surprise here in view of Mr. St. Laurent's statement that he expected they would be in conversation again by this morning.

This statement gave rise to some feelings that Mr. Attlee is acting as the main liaison between Canada and the Princess but official quarters said this is not so.

Monday's St. Laurent-Attlee talk mainly concerned the condition of the King which Mr. Attlee then reported "very encouraging."

With the King gaining strength but still dangerously ill, the government already has told the Princess to act "as any devoted daughter would do" under similar circumstances.

This was done on the authority of Prime Minister St. Laurent several days ago and is believed to have been reiterated by Mr. St. Laurent Monday in a transatlantic telephone conversation with Prime Minister Attlee.

Mr. St. Laurent said after that conversation that he expected to be in touch with Mr. Attlee again last evening or today. The initiative is believed to have been left with the United Kingdom Prime Minister when he had something specific to report but no new transatlantic phone call for Mr.

St. Laurent was made during the day.

By the end of the day, however, officials were saying that the Princess and her advisers undoubtedly now are considering postponement of the coast-to-coast visit and that consideration is being given by them to the terms of postponement—whether it should be long or short, set over indefinitely or to a specific date.

Officials in Suspense

Meanwhile, tour officials here described themselves as "in suspense."

The R.C.A.F. has been awaiting word whether its prize C5 transport plane will be needed to fly to London to bring the royal couple here in time to launch the tour on schedule. It would, officials say, have to take off by tomorrow night if it were to go.

Official indications were, however, that if the royal couple does fly over it will be in a British plane.

The fact that there was no renewal of the St. Laurent-Attlee telephone talks caused some surprise here in view of Mr. St. Laurent's statement that he expected they would be in conversation again by this morning.

This statement gave rise to some feelings that Mr. Attlee is acting as the main liaison between Canada and the Princess but official quarters said this is not so.

Monday's St. Laurent-Attlee talk mainly concerned the condition of the King which Mr. Attlee then reported "very encouraging."

Marked Improvement In Milk Sanitation Noted

There is a complete reversal in the situation regarding cleanliness of milk here compared with four years ago, it was stated yesterday by Mr. James Gibbard, Chief of the Laboratory of Hygiene, Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa.

Mr. Gibbard said his department with a small travelling laboratory had made tests four years ago at the request of the Provincial Government and found the situation entirely unsatisfactory. This year members of his department returned with a large bus-type mobile laboratory and found the situation "very good."

It was largely on the basis of his department's findings four years ago that the local Government established its Department of Sanitary Engineering.

This year they did a repeat series of tests and Mr. Gibbard was greatly pleased with the extent of the improvement.

He is presently visiting here to confer with Dr. Harold Shaw, Provincial Pathologist and head of the Health Planning Commission. He stated that the facilities of his department were at the services of Provincial authorities needing help in matters of analysis and that the Ottawa department was really a reference laboratory for the Province.

During the stay here of the Mobile Laboratory matters pertaining to water and restaurants were also tested in addition to the milk. Reports dealing with the results will be prepared and forwarded to authorities here.

Mr. Gibbard also said "in Prince Edward Island you are demonstrating the very best ways of provincial laboratories serving and offering aid to doctors. We are very interested in what you are doing in the way of co-ordinating your laboratories and hospitals."

He paid tribute to the excellent work being done by Dr. Harold Shaw and spoke in glowing terms of the change in public health facilities here now. He compared them with what was available a few years ago and said there was a very marked improvement over earlier conditions.

Officials in Suspense

Meanwhile, tour officials here described themselves as "in suspense."

The R.C.A.F. has been awaiting word whether its prize C5 transport plane will be needed to fly to London to bring the royal couple here in time to launch the tour on schedule. It would, officials say, have to take off by tomorrow night if it were to go.

Official indications were, however, that if the royal couple does fly over it will be in a British plane.

The fact that there was no renewal of the St. Laurent-Attlee telephone talks caused some surprise here in view of Mr. St. Laurent's statement that he expected they would be in conversation again by this morning.

This statement gave rise to some feelings that Mr. Attlee is acting as the main liaison between Canada and the Princess but official quarters said this is not so.

Monday's St. Laurent-Attlee talk mainly concerned the condition of the King which Mr. Attlee then reported "very encouraging."

With the King gaining strength but still dangerously ill, the government already has told the Princess to act "as any devoted daughter would do" under similar circumstances.

This was done on the authority of Prime Minister St. Laurent several days ago and is believed to have been reiterated by Mr. St. Laurent Monday in a transatlantic telephone conversation with Prime Minister Attlee.

Mr. St. Laurent said after that conversation that he expected to be in touch with Mr. Attlee again last evening or today. The initiative is believed to have been left with the United Kingdom Prime Minister when he had something specific to report but no new transatlantic phone call for Mr.

St. Laurent was made during the day.

By the end of the day, however, officials were saying that the Princess and her advisers undoubtedly now are considering postponement of the coast-to-coast visit and that consideration is being given by them to the terms of postponement—whether it should be long or short, set over indefinitely or to a specific date.

Officials in Suspense

Meanwhile, tour officials here described themselves as "in suspense."

The R.C.A.F. has been awaiting word whether its prize C5 transport plane will be needed to fly to London to bring the royal couple here in time to launch the tour on schedule. It would, officials say, have to take off by tomorrow night if it were to go.

Official indications were, however, that if the royal couple does fly over it will be in a British plane.

The fact that there was no renewal of the St. Laurent-Attlee telephone talks caused some surprise here in view of Mr. St. Laurent's statement that he expected they would be in conversation again by this morning.

This statement gave rise to some feelings that Mr. Attlee is acting as the main liaison between Canada and the Princess but official quarters said this is not so.

Monday's St. Laurent-Attlee talk mainly concerned the condition of the King which Mr. Attlee then reported "very encouraging."

With the King gaining strength but still dangerously ill, the government already has told the Princess to act "as any devoted daughter would do" under similar circumstances.

This was done on the authority of Prime Minister St. Laurent several days ago and is believed to have been reiterated by Mr. St. Laurent Monday in a transatlantic telephone conversation with Prime Minister Attlee.

Mr. St. Laurent said after that conversation that he expected to be in touch with Mr. Attlee again last evening or today. The initiative is believed to have been left with the United Kingdom Prime Minister when he had something specific to report but no new transatlantic phone call for Mr.

St. Laurent was made during the day.

By the end of the day, however, officials were saying that the Princess and her advisers undoubtedly now are considering postponement of the coast-to-coast visit and that consideration is being given by them to the terms of postponement—whether it should be long or short, set over indefinitely or to a specific date.

Officials in Suspense

Meanwhile, tour officials here described themselves as "in suspense."

The R.C.A.F. has been awaiting word whether its prize C5 transport plane will be needed to fly to London to bring the royal couple here in time to launch the tour on schedule. It would, officials say, have to take off by tomorrow night if it were to go.

Official indications were, however, that if the royal couple does fly over it will be in a British plane.

The fact that there was no renewal of the St. Laurent-Attlee telephone talks caused some surprise here in view of Mr. St. Laurent's statement that he expected they would be in conversation again by this morning.

This statement gave rise to some feelings that Mr. Attlee is acting as the main liaison between Canada and the Princess but official quarters said this is not so.

Monday's St. Laurent-Attlee talk mainly concerned the condition of the King which Mr. Attlee then reported "very encouraging."

Clarify Court Ruling On Income From Investments

OTTAWA, Sept. 25 (CP)—A Revenue Department official said today that under the existing Income Tax Act personal exemptions—those for marital status and dependents—against his investment income. Against the remainder a four-per-cent surtax is applied.

(The Canadian Press erroneously reported yesterday the Exchequer Court had ruled that personal exemptions could no longer be deducted from investment income.)

The official said that prior to 1949 personal exemptions could not be deducted from investment income in computing the amount of tax. Only an exemption of 1,800 was allowed. The court judgment applied in a case where an appeal was launched against a 1947 tax assessment.

The Income Tax Appeal Board had ruled that a taxpayer could apply both the statutory deduction and personal exemptions against his investment income in computing his tax. The Exchequer Court reversed that decision.

The official said that the changes made to the Income Tax Act in 1949 make it clear that either the flat statutory deduction of $2,400 or the total of personal exemptions is to apply against investment income.

A person, he said, would pay the regular income tax on earned income. On unearned or investment income he would pay an additional four-per-cent tax on any amount over $2,400 or the total of his personal exemptions.

Officials in Suspense

Meanwhile, tour officials here described themselves as "in suspense."

The R.C.A.F. has been awaiting word whether its prize C5 transport plane will be needed to fly to London to bring the royal couple here in time to launch the tour on schedule. It would, officials say, have to take off by tomorrow night if it were to go.

Official indications were, however, that if the royal couple does fly over it will be in a British plane.

The fact that there was no renewal of the St. Laurent-Attlee telephone talks caused some surprise here in view of Mr. St. Laurent's statement that he expected they would be in conversation again by this morning.

This statement gave rise to some feelings that Mr. Attlee is acting as the main liaison between Canada and the Princess but official quarters said this is not so.

Monday's St. Laurent-Attlee talk mainly concerned the condition of the King which Mr. Attlee then reported "very encouraging."

With the King gaining strength but still dangerously ill, the government already has told the Princess to act "as any devoted daughter would do" under similar circumstances.

This was done on the authority of Prime Minister St. Laurent several days ago and is believed to have been reiterated by Mr. St. Laurent Monday in a transatlantic telephone conversation with Prime Minister Attlee.

Mr. St. Laurent said after that conversation that he expected to be in touch with Mr. Attlee again last evening or today. The initiative is believed to have been left with the United Kingdom Prime Minister when he had something specific to report but no new transatlantic phone call for Mr.

St. Laurent was made during the day.

By the end of the day, however, officials were saying that the Princess and her advisers undoubtedly now are considering postponement of the coast-to-coast visit and that consideration is being given by them to the terms of postponement—whether it should be long or short, set over indefinitely or to a specific date.

Officials in Suspense

Meanwhile, tour officials here described themselves as "in suspense."

The R.C.A.F. has been awaiting word whether its prize C5 transport plane will be needed to fly to London to bring the royal couple here in time to launch the tour on schedule. It would, officials say, have to take off by tomorrow night if it were to go.

Official indications were, however, that if the royal couple does fly over it will be in a British plane.

The fact that there was no renewal of the St. Laurent-Attlee telephone talks caused some surprise here in view of Mr. St. Laurent's statement that he expected they would be in conversation again by this morning.

This statement gave rise to some feelings that Mr. Attlee is acting as the main liaison between Canada and the Princess but official quarters said this is not so.

Monday's St. Laurent-Attlee talk mainly concerned the condition of the King which Mr. Attlee then reported "very encouraging."

With the King gaining strength but still dangerously ill, the government already has told the Princess to act "as any devoted daughter would do" under similar circumstances.

This was done on the authority of Prime Minister St. Laurent several days ago and is believed to have been reiterated by Mr. St. Laurent Monday in a transatlantic telephone conversation with Prime Minister Attlee.

Mr. St. Laurent said after that conversation that he expected to be in touch with Mr. Attlee again last evening or today. The initiative is believed to have been left with the United Kingdom Prime Minister when he had something specific to report but no new transatlantic phone call for Mr.

St. Laurent was made during the day.

By the end of the day, however, officials were saying that the Princess and her advisers undoubtedly now are considering postponement of the coast-to-coast visit and that consideration is being given by them to the terms of postponement—whether it should be long or short, set over indefinitely or to a specific date.

Officials in Suspense

Meanwhile, tour officials here described themselves as "in suspense."

The R.C.A.F. has been awaiting word whether its prize C5 transport plane will be needed to fly to London to bring the royal couple here in time to launch the tour on schedule. It would, officials say, have to take off by tomorrow night if it were to go.

Official indications were, however, that if the royal couple does fly over it will be in a British plane.

The fact that there was no renewal of the St. Laurent-Attlee telephone talks caused some surprise here in view of