U.S. Reveals
New Torpedo
PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — A new torpedo that is fired from a ship by rocket, lowered into the water by parachute and then seeks out an enemy submarine automatically was disclosed by the U.S. Navy Monday.

The rocket-assisted torpedo called RAT for short, "will extend a ship's submarine-kill zone to many miles," the navy announcement said. The device can be installed on any destroyer with five-inch gun turrets at relatively low cost.

A spokesman said tests have shown the torpedoes to be "exceedingly accurate."

The navy said a rocket propels it from a destroyer over the target area, then a parachute lowers the missile to the surface of the sea. At this point the homing torpedo plunges beneath the surface and seeks out the enemy sub. The torpedo is 16 feet long and weighs 450 pounds.
