Weak, Tired, Nervous

Women, who seem to be all worn out, will find in purified blood, made rich and healthy by Hood's Sarsaparilla, permanent relief and strength. The following is from a well known nurse:

"I have suffered for years with female complaints and kidney troubles and I have had a great deal of medical advice during that time, but have received little or no benefit. A friend advised me to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and I began to use it, together with Hood's Pills. I have realized more benefit from these medicines than from anything else I have ever taken. From my personal experience I believe Hood's Sarsaparilla to be a most complete blood purifier." MRS. C. CROMPTON, 71 Cumberland St., Toronto, Ontario.

To the Electors of Charlottetown.

GENTLEMEN,—At the request of many of my fellow citizens I place myself in your hands for re-election to the honorable position of Mayor, and respectfully ask for your votes.

Should you again do me the honor to elect me, I shall co-operate in maturing and carrying out all measures having for their object the good of the community as a whole, and, as in the past, my best efforts shall be given to the administration of the affairs of the city.

I refer you to the City Report for my views on taxation, and would only add that I am fully satisfied that the ordinary expenditure of the city can be met by a reduced rate on real estate and personal property, which rate, with the other sources of available income, will yield a sufficient revenue to meet the liberal basis of expenditure of the past year, and that no department of the public service can suffer thereby.

I remain, Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
W. E. DAWSON.

jan27—135

To the Electors of Charlottetown;

GENTLEMEN—In compliance with the wishes of a large number of citizens, and in response to the numerously signed requisition presented to me, I have decided to nominate for the Mayoralty at the forthcoming Election, and would take this opportunity of soliciting your support.

If elected, I shall endeavor at all times to act impartially, giving justice to all, favors to none. It shall be my aim to see that the affairs of this City are conducted with the strictest economy commensurate with its requirements and that the rate of taxation be kept down to the lowest figure consistent therewith.

I shall continue to stand up for the citizen's rights both as regards the Roadway to Victoria Park and all other questions which may arise. I believe that all laws at present in force, or that may hereafter be enacted, should be faithfully carried out.

I am opposed to the expenditure of any public moneys in defiance of the well understood wishes of the people.

As I publicly stated two years ago, I believe that good government in civic affairs can only be assured by having a change in representatives from time to time; and having served four years as Councillor, I now respectfully solicite your votes for the office of Mayor.

I remain, Gentlemen,
Your Obedient Servant.
HORACE HASZARD.

UNION JACK PULLED DOWN

WILD TIME IN NEW WHATCOM.

A Returned Canadian Tells How the C. P. R. Came to a Boom Town—Wild-Eyed Sons of Veterans.

Americans have a sort of theoretical patriotism, but the closest students are unable to determine whether the theory consists more of love of country or the hatred of things English in general and the Union Jack in particular. This hatred is not a local affair, but obtains all over the Union, from the Atlantic seaboard, where the native with the nasal twang sneers at the "darned britisher," to the shores of the broad Pacific, where the Westerner uses his more brilliant vocabulary to describe the hated tyrant who once tried to make them pay a tax on tea—the fact that tea is far from being his favorite beverage not being taken into consideration.

This hatred or patriotism, which is more or less an abstract quantity, is generally kept for particular occasions, such as campaign speeches or Fourth of July celebrations, but it will occasionally blossom out in unexpected spots, causing much petty feeling at the time and laughter in the immediate thereafter. One of these instances, it will generally be remembered, occurred in Vancouver, B.C., a few years ago, when the American consul, in a burst of ill-advised "patriotism," refused at a public dinner to rise and drink the health of the Queen.

This patriotic action was so ill-placed that the poor fellow was reported to Washington, and ultimately lost his job—and thereby the respect of his countrymen, for who, born in the free air of Yankee-dom, can respect a man who has a good fat Government job and not sense enough to hold it.

Another instance, not quite so generally known, occurred shortly after this just south of the British Columbia line, in the city of New Whatcom, when a mob, headed by the members of a semi-military organization, the Sons of Veterans, pulled down the Union Jack that had been raised by a citizens' committee as an act of courtesy to expected Canadian visitors on the occasion of the incoming of the first Canadian Pacific train. The circumstances surrounding the incident are given by an eye-witness as follows:

"I was in New Whatcom when the news came that the Canadian Pacific had leased the Bellingham Bay and British Columbia Railway, and would run its overland passengers for American points direct to New Whatcom, dividing its train at Mission for that purpose. To say that the news caused a sensation would be putting it mildly indeed. The town was of the boom variety, its principal industry, cultivating the price of town lots, was at the zenith of its prosperity, and the property owners saw fortunes coming in on the first train. In that climate everything grows, and it was not long till the report had grown to enormous proportions. The city was to be the American terminus of the line, immense docks were to be built, the steamships were to sail from New Whatcom to the Orient, instead of from Vancouver, etc., etc. In view of all this, real estate rose fifty per cent at a jump and everything was joyful. He who would find favor with an American must either tickle his vanity or his pants' pockets. The Canadian Pacific presumably had done both, and it was at once transformed from a 'one-horse Canadian line' to the 'greatest transcontinental line—that's what.'

"The Chamber of Commerce, an institution that buds at the birth of each new American city, met and resolved that the coming event must be observed in a manner that would at once show the city's appreciation and advertise to the world New Whatcom's new-born advantages. Committees were struck to look after the details, and the mandate went forth that every man should arise and decorate his place of business. A man who understood such things was discovered, and instructed to secure the opera house—there are no halls west of the Mississippi—and therein prepare a banquet with champagne accompaniments, to which the Canadian Pacific officials in Vancouver were invited.

"When the day came everything was in readiness. The city was a mass of green and crimson, the Stars and Stripes floated from every house top, while here and there an enterprising saloon man, in the hope of capturing a little British trade, had hung out some miniature Union Jacks. Where the railway track crossed the principal street the decorating committee had erected a huge evergreen arch under which the incoming train, with its load of visitors and prosperity, was to pass; and on top of this, side by side, were floating the Stars and Stripes and the Union Jack—the latter intended as a graceful compliment to the nationality of the expected visitors and prosperity.

"At 11 o'clock, the hour at which the train was due, a procession was formed. The City Council in all its official dignity and brand new plug hats rode in carriages with the mayor, who had his speech of welcome carefully committed to memory. The variety show band had been secured for the occasion, and to its stirring strains marched the volunteer fire department resplendent in new red shirts and immense helmets, while behind then came the Sons of Veterans, whose fathers had led the van in many a wild rush from the field of battle when the fighting Southerners had made that locality too tropical for them, and the Junior Order of American Mechanics, a society ostensibly formed for the purpose of seeing that native-born Americans are not crowded out of office by the foreign element. Its members are generally noticeable for the strength of their lungs and their ability to consume campaign whiskey.

"The procession arrived safely at the depot and greeted the incoming train with loud cheers. But here the first hitch occurred. The chief of the fire department had conceived the brilliant idea of throwing a water arch over the visitors, so placing part of his command on either side of the track, just as the train slowed they threw streams of water from the opposite sides over it. Now this water was wet, and as it was no respecter of persons it had its usual effect on the apparel and spirits of the crowd. But a greater damper followed, for a search of the train revealed the fact that the only Canadian Pacific officials on board were the conductor and porter of the sleeping car. What a blight that was on everything! It took a few minutes to recover from it. However, the banquet was there, and a crowd of traveling newspaper men who were writing up the country for a Chicago paper being made do the duty of the expected guests, the sorrows of the more aristocratic part of the crowd were soon drowned in numerous glasses of sparkling champagne.

"In the meantime the Sons of Veterans, the American Mechanics and the firemen who were shut out from the feast were celebrating according to their own ideas and the means provided, and it was not long till their innate patriotism began to rise. The captain of the Sons of Veterans, whose father had ridden to fame and a pension in a sutler's waggon, had had his eye fixed on the Union Jack on the arch, and with no favorable glance either. The continued refreshments reinforced the patriotism, and hints dropped by him soon took hold on the inflammable spirits of the crowd. Hoots at the old flag were followed by shouts of "Pull it down.' 'Trail it in the dust,' 'Treat it as our forefathers did.'

"It took but a few moments to get a mob together. The police also were there, but the marshal was a valiant member of the American Mechanics and he said he'd be hanged—I think that was the word—if he would make the law stand in the way of patriots. Mud and stones were hurled at the British emblem till some of the Sons of Veterans appeared with a ladder. This was hastily placed against the arch and one of their number mounting it the flag was torn down and thrown to the crowd, who tore it to pieces and trampled them in the mud. Then the mob, with cheers for their heroism, dispersed to look for more refreshments.

"That was a pretty wild night in the city. In that particular part of the world there are numerous Canadians scattered through all the walks of life. Lawyers, doctors, politicians, contractors and lumbermen there are who, though dwelling beneath the Stars and Stripes, still retain their reverence for the old flag which floated over the homes of their childhood, and many a valiant son of a veteran, who was boasting of the part he had taken in the affair, ran up against a hard Canadian fist and felt his courage gradually evaporate under a system of reasoning that spoke louder than words. Many of the more sensible Americans, too, were not slow to express an opinion that the deed reflected more disgrace on the perpetrators than on the flag.

"Some kind of an inquiry was also instituted into the action of the police on the occasion, but the affair was soon allowed to drop and the occurrence was apparently forgotten till it came back to me now as an example of what American patriotism amounts to."

One Way to Keep Warm.

Now all of us know that deep and forced respirations will keep the entire body in a glow in the coldest weather, no matter how thinly one may be clad. A physician declares this to be a fact worth remembering. He was himself half frozen to death one night and began taking deep breaths and keeping the air in his lungs as long as possible. The result was that he was thoroughly comfortable in a few minutes. The deep respirations stimulate the blood current by direct muscular exertion and cause the entire system to become pervaded with the rapidly-generated heat.

A Novel Dessert.

Put three ounces of preserved ginger, cut small, into a bowl, with three dessertspoonfuls of the syrup, the well beaten yolks of four eggs and a pint of cream. Mix well and cook slowly in a double boiler until it thickens, which will be in about ten minutes: remove from the fire and beat with a wire egg beater until it is nearly cold. Add two teaspoonfulls of pulverized sugar and an ounce of gelatine, previously dissolved in warm water enough to cover it, straining this latter. Beat until thoroughly mixed and place in a mold on ice.

How and Why it Rains.

Rain is an accummulation of the tiny particles of the vapor of the atmosphere into drops. These drops, first small of size, attract others of their kind and become drops of such magnitude that they fall to the earth because of their weight. There is a limit to the quantity of water which the air is capable of absorbing and retaining as invisible vapor. Warm air is able to hold more than cold air. Hence, when the air which is saturated with moisture becomes cold for any reason whatever, it can no longer retain its moisture. A portion must, under such condition, accumulate into drops. These fall to the earth in the shape of rain.

For Whitening the Hands.

The use of the yolk of a fresh egg, almond or chestnut meal, oatmeal or bran are all recommended for whitening and refining the skin of the hands. They should be used only after the hands have been thoroughly washed with the best soap. For excessive perspiration dust the hands after they are washed and dried with powdered orris root.—New York Evening Post.

A Child Cured of Eczema by Chase's Ointment.

"My six-year-old daughter, Bella, was afflicted with eczema for 24 months, the principal seat of eruption being behind her ears. I tried almost every remedy I saw advertised, bought innumerable medicines and soaps, and took the child to medical specialists in skin diseases, but without result. The doctor advised the use of Chase's Ointment, and since using the eruption has all disappeared, and I can confidently say my child is cured.

A DOCTOR'S CONFESSION.

HE SAID HE COULD NOT PRESCRIBE ANYTHING BETTER THAN PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND.

In hundreds of cases, grateful parents have given strong testimony in favor of Paine's Celery Compound.

Fathers and mothers positively declare that their children's lives were saved by the wonderful medicine, after all ordinary prescriptions had failed to restore health and strength.

Paine's Celery Compound is peculiarly adapted to all weak, frail and nervous children. It quickly builds up the nervous system, makes solid flesh and fat, and gives strength to all the muscles and tissues. Mr. Robert D. Templeton, Winnipeg, Man., writes about his child's case as follows:

"I take great pleasure in recommending your Paine's Celery Compound for all children's troubles. Our little girl was very sick a short time ago, and we had to call in a doctor who said he could not prescribe anything better than your Compound."

ODDS AND ENDS.

Empress Frederick of Germany possesses a unique service. The tea tray has been beaten out of an old Prussian halfpenny. The tea-pot is formed of a German farthing, and the tin cups are made of coins of different German principalities.

IT DOES THE BUSINESS.

If you want to know what Miller's Emulsion of Norwegian Cod Liver Oil will do for a consumptive patient ask one who has tried it. Ask anyone who has used it in lung troubles of any kind. What they say about Miller's Emulsion shall be its recommendation. It is the finest preparation of its kind in the world, and is worth its weight in gold to a consumptive sufferer, whom it will raise from a bed of sickness to health and strength of body and mind, giving a new lease of life. Thousands testify to the value of Miller's Emulsion. Miller's Emulsion is the great nerve strengthener and blood maker, and cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Scrofula and all Lung affections. In big bottles, 50c. and $1, at all drug stores.

Mother—I hear that the lieutenant had the impudence to kiss you at the station. What did you do?

Daughter—Oh I kissed him, too, so as to make people think we were relatives.

Counterfeits

A few years ago a great discovery was made.

Unprincipled persons are trying to prey upon and dupe people who are led to ask for kidney treatment.

Some of the methods adopted by imitators are as follows:

First—To imitate the size, color and shape of Dodd's Kidney Pills and sell them by count.

Second—To put them up to appear very nearly the same and to be offered at the same price.

Third—To hook on the word "kidney" in naming cathortic pills so as to increase sales of mere physic.

Fourth—To give a name so near to Dodd's that unwary people may be deceived and think they are getting Dodd's.

Look out for such dodges. When you want kidney medicine you want the best. And ought not to be the subject for any trick.

So beware.

Not less than 400,000 China vases have been ordered from a Moscow porcelain manufactory. These vases are to bear the portraits of the Czar and Czarina, and will be distributed to the people during the coronation festivities.

A Graduate of Toronto University Says:

"My children have been treated with Scott's Emulsion from their earliest years. Our physician first recommended it, and now whenever a child takes cold my wife immediately resorts to this remedy, which always affects a cure."

Cure of Chronic Catarrh.

A remarkable Cure.—J. W. Jennison Gilford, spent between $200 and $300 in consulting doctors; tried Dixon's and all other treatments but got no benefit. One box of Chase's Catarrh Cure did me more good than all other remedies in fact I consider myself cured, and with a 25 cent box at that.

CHRONIC HEADACHE.

The change in my Mother's condition marvellous.

Scott's Sarsaparilla is a Boon.

MONTREAL, August 29th, 1895.

GENTLEMEN:—There is such a change in my mother's health that I cannot restrain myself from writing you. She suffered for years past with a chronic headache, accompanied with a disordered stomach. She was weak and irritable, and we thought she was going into a decline. For three weeks she has been taking a course of Scott's Sarsaparilla, which was recommended to her by Mr. McGale, Druggist, Montreal. Her headache is now but a memory, her appetite is good, and she has gained five pounds in weight in twelve days. She is a different woman, and I feel that you, in God's hands, have been the means of restoring her to health. I shall always recommend Scott's Sarsaparilla to sufferers from head or digestive troubles. Thanking you again, I close.

Yours sincerely,
Hortense Gaviliere.

Scott's Sarsaparilla is a concentrated extract, pleasant to the taste, and is taken in small doses. It is the finest remedy for disorders of the stomach and liver, palpitation, scrofulous sores, eczema and skin diseases arising from impurities of the blood. It builds up the weak, the strong it maintains in health. $1 of all druggists.

A REBUKE FROM THE BENCH.

Judge Pagnuelo's Remarks Against an Insurance Company.

Judge Pagnuelo rendered judgment this morning in the case of Demers v. the Montreal Steam Laundry Company. The plaintiff claimed $3,000 damages on account of an accident to his minor daughter, Marie Louise, whose hand was crushed in a hot steam roller, where she was put to work by her employers. The court held the company responsible on the ground that the young girl had fainted through the excessive heat in the room, which was not sufficiently ventilated, and also on the ground that the young girl, who had been engaged to fold clothes, should not have been entrusted with the very dangerous work of the roller, without first consulting her father.

In the course of his remarks, the learned judge said that a settlement for $500, which had been arrived at between the parties, was prevented from being carried out through the intervention of the Manufacturers' Accident Insurance Company, who offered to run the whole risks of the case to have the claim contested. He considered it his duty to call the attention of the public to this fact. These institutions seemed to be established with humane views, but in the present instance it was a case of injustice and oppression, and he was inclined to believe that many similar cases occurred. The company was rich and could easily appeal, and even go as far as the Privy Council, and such institutions could easily be a means of oppression against poor people. The legislature should look into this matter, and the insurance companies should not be allowed to interfere in cases of this kind. Judgment was then pronounced in favor of the plaintiff for $500, the amount which he was willing to accept in settlement.—Montreal Witness.

"O, Pretty Pronoun I."

A woman who has spent a great part of the summer on the overhanging verandа of an English basement house in a country town where the hot months were passed, was summing up her experience the other day: "I noticed," she said, "that of every group that passed the house and to whose conversation I could listen, in nine cases out of ten one person was holding forth, and, almost without exception, about himself or herself. And, just as certainly as this egotism was displayed, just so certainly was it also true that those to whom the talk was addressed never once seemed to be paying the slightest attention to it. It was a sad commentary upon the familiar fact that we all care pretty exclusively for our own affairs, and that those whom we bore with them are in precisely the same condition of mind; they care only about themselves, too."

The Brevity of Life.

The future that we expect may never come; and, if it should come, every delay in goodness always brings about a loss. And why should we not be good now, why should we lose so many years of keen joy, real delight, solid comfort; and why should we waste in terrible unrest so many precious days? Suppose we do become saints just before we pass from the earth. Will our late discipleship compensate for the wrecks that we have made of the greater part of our existence; and will a few roses make up for so many thistles? Ah! we are woefully short-sighted when we come to deal with our souls; and, however massive may have been our intellect in everything else, in this one great thing we are apt to be very idiotic. In fact, if we governed trade as we govern the heart, trouble, danger and ruin would fall upon all mercantile pursuits. If we carry the same energy, enthusiasm, devotion and affection into the culture of our souls that we carry every day into the pursuit of our daily calling, we shall soon become what God would have us to be. We have but a short time; let us then do the best we can, for we cannot do too much; and, although we work every minute, we shall still be unfinished—unfinished, and terribly lacking. The completion of character is a duty that grows larger and much larger the more faithfully it is greeted; and it grows with our growth, expands with our efforts, forms new heights as the old ones are scaled.—Caleb Davis Beadle.

Peppered With Adjectives.

"I notice, my dear," said Uncle Allen Sparks, to one of his nieces, "that when you have a toothache it's the worst you ever had. The young man who was here last night was the ugliest fellow you ever saw. According to your statement a little while ago it took you forever and a day to learn how to make a sponge cake. The house, you say, is full of flies. You have just declared that the room is as hot as an oven, you have the dreadfulest headache you ever had in your life, and the boy across the road is making the fearfulest racket a boy ever made. Don't you see, my child, this sort of thing won't do? Some time in your life you will really have an experience requiring the superlative degree to describe it, and you won't be able to convey any idea of it. You will have used up all the adjectives. That is all. You can go thumping the piano again."—Chicago Tribune.

Strict Impartiality.

A judge of the Supreme Court who tries hard to be impartial and to say nothing in his charges that will lean either way, recently said to a jury whom he charged: "Now, gentlemen, if anything I have said has made the slightest impression on your minds, pray dismiss it."

An Anxious Husband.

"Oh, Mr. Meyer, your wife has fallen overboard!"

"Quick, throw her fur cape after her; she'll catch cold."

PECULIAR in combination, proportion and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses great curative value. You should TRY IT.
