The Situation in Britain.

Being pretty much at the mercy of the Irish members of parliament, Gladstone will probably have to introduce his Home Rule bill without respite or delay. The political savants of his party would, no doubt, prefer to hasten slowly. Much could be done, and will be done later on, to strengthen the hands of the Liberals in England, and to increase their majority, so as to be independent of the Irish party. But the Irish are not prepared to let the Liberals be independent of them. They will take advantage of their position to dictate, to force Gladstone to show his hand, and, if he wishes to rule, to commit himself to a scheme of Home Rule which will be satisfactory to the Irish people. Whether this will be wise or not remains to be seen. At any rate the measure will find its quietus in the Lords, and as this venerable body can appeal to the election returns to show that England and Wales have spoken against the proposed reform by a considerable plurality of votes, an election cry against them "as resisting the public will" would fall rather dull on the British voters' ear. However, perhaps the proposed plan of immediate action is best after all. While the Lords are debating it parliament can enact its reform measures for the better obtainment of the voice of the people, and then another appeal to the electorate following, the British people will have the proposed measure clearly before them, and will be better informed as to whether it deserves their opposition or support.

Cardinal Gibbons' Sermon.

"Go back with me to the days of ancient Rome. There she sits on her seven hills mistress of the world. Standing on one of those hills view the millions of her inhabitants wrapped in the grossest idolatry. They worship the sun, moon and stars; they worship their own passions and lusts, or the product of them. Look! a light bursts forth; God appears; the heralds of the Cross raise the standard of the true worship; the preachers of Christianity point the way to the worship of the true God. They beseech men to renounce their idolatry, to worship the Creator, no longer to worship the works of God but to worship God himself," etc. So spake Cardinal Gibbons last Sunday in Charlottetown. Memorable words—words to be cherished by every one who heard. Let us however take a survey of the position. What is idolatry? The word is derived from the Greek words, viz Eidolon, an image or likeness and Latreia, worship—that is worship of an image, woeship of an outward, visible likeness, or remembrancer of the unseen or invisible. An intelligent idolater does not regard his idol as the ultimate object of his worship, he regards it as the remembrancer of his object of worship. I repeat then an idolater is one who, instead of worshipping the unseen and invisible, by the simple means of his mental powers, including his imagination, resorts to the aid of his senses, as sight and touch and procures for himself an image or likeness of the object of his worship. That object may be the Great God himself. It is not necessary that the object of worship by an idolater shall be a deity of a low grade. As I have said that object may be God himself. In this sense, and this is the true sense of idolatry, the Roman Catholics are idolaters, as complete idolaters as were the old Romans who worshipped Jupiter and the other deities. In fact the old Romans were idolaters of a much higher grade than are the Roman Catholics, for the Romans had splendid images, works of high art, whereas the Roman Catholics have images, some of which are of the meanest character. The old Romans had, towards the latter stage of their national existence, a good conception of a great unseen power, what they represented by the images of Jupiter which means "God the Father of the people," but being unable, as we are unable, to comprehend God in his entirety, they adopted the plan of worshipping him in detail, and so they had, what we rather erroneously term a multitude of Gods, but what was in their conception, the Great God in different characters or phases. Do not the Roman Catholics the same? They worship God, Jesus Christ, and numerous Saints, to all of whom they erect images which they worship. I repeat then, that in every sense in which the old Romans were idolaters, so also were the Roman Catholics of old and are in the present time.

THE LEGISLATURE

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATE.

MR. MCNUTT.—We have been accused of supporting this bill contrary to the pledges given to our constituents. Some few years ago I was elected to this house for a term of eight years, and I can say I never gave any pledge to my constituents, that I would not support a Bill to abolish the Council but I said I would not vote for a measure that would reduce the representation of the property-holders. Now the Bill before the House, places the property-holders in a better position than they are at present. It was well-known in the district which I represent, that I was in favor of retaining the Council and I would be so still if we could afford it, but on account of the extravagence of the late Government, the country is brought to such a position that it is necessary to economise. I considered it would be quite a serious matter to vote for this Bill without consulting the people, and I have consulted a large number of them by correspondence and otherwise and they are perfectly satisfied with this Bill, if it is so arranged that it cannot be altered in the future as regards the qualification of electors and the representative. For this reason it is considered necessary that a provision should be inserted in the Bill that no change should be made except by a two-thirds vote. If a provision of that nature is embodied in the Bill and it gets the Royal Assent, I consider it will be binding on future Legislatures. I would therefore move the following as a Preamble to the Bill:—

Whereas it is Expedient to change the Constitution of the Legislature for the purpose of reducing the cost of Legislation in this Province.

And whereas the Legislative Council has agreed to surrender its Seperate powers and privileges and that a Legislature consisting of One House only, be constituted which agreement was made upon the express condition that at least one half of the members of that House shall be chosen by electors possessing a Real Estate qualification of the value of at least Three Hundred and twenty-five dollars similar to that now required by electors entitled to vote for members of the Legislative Council as at present constituted, such qualification of electors and proportion of members not to be altered or diminished unless agreed to by at least two-thirds of the members of the Legislative Assembly to be constituted by this Act.

MR. DODD.—I was returned to support the Council intact, and I never intended to vote for abolishing it, and I will not unless the rights of property holders are maintained. It has been represented that the country is so poor that it cannot support the two houses of Legislature, and that it is necessary to make some reduction. I do not know what made us so poor except it was the extravagance of the Government which was so long in power, for we used to be able to keep up our two Houses of Legislature. Now necessity compels us to abolish one House and by the Bill before us the property holders will have fifteen representatives instead of thirteen as at present. I consider the present scheme a feasible one and is a good arrngement for both property holders and franchise voters. I cannot understand what some hon. members mean by talking about young men being disfranchised. Young men never had the power of voting on their father's farm, and this Bill does not disfranchise young men. I do not know that the Bill will effect a great saving, and the small amount could have been saved in some other way. We might take the supplement off the school teachers, the people are paying no taxes and they are well able to pay that amount. The Leader of the Opposition boasts of the Sullivan Government, but they kept on taxes for three years, and ever since they took them off the country has been going behind hand, and now we have become so poor we cannot afford to have the Legislative Council.

MR. NICHOLSON.—His honor who has just spoken tells us the country is so poor it cannot afford to retain this Chamber. Now I find over $9000 has been spent on three wharves near Charlottetown, and men employed on these works receiving $3, $2.50, $2.25, $1.50 and $1.25 per day. It cannot be a very poor country that can afford such wages. A large amount of money could be saved if those works were properly let.

The question was put on the preamble to the Bill proposed by Mr. McNutt, and agreed to unanimously.

The President took the chair and the chairman reported the Bill agreed to with certain suggestions.

Mr. Campbell moved that the report of the committee be not now received, but that the Bill be recommitted back to a committee of the whole House for the purpose of amending subsection L of Section 52, by providing that "no person shall be entitled to vote on any land by reason of ownership as mortgagee unless he is in actual possession of said land."

The question was put on the motion.
