THEIR DAINTY FEET.

WOMEN SHOULD BE CAREFUL WHEN SELECTING SHOES.

French Women Are Supposed to Wear Pretty Shoes—English and American Girls Are Not Afraid to Walk.

The French women are given credit for beauty of foot and ankle superior to that of their English and American sisters. One reason for this is not difficult to find. The English and American girl of the period are addicted to athletic sports, long walks and mountain climbing, and all this tends to increase the size of the foot.

However, we must commend the French woman for her attention to details in the choice of her footwear. Her hose is carefully chosen; the length of the foot, the shape of the ankle, the elasticity of the silk or wool and the fastness of the dye are all considered. Her shoes, too, are made to order. A woman whose word is authority on the subject declares that ready-made shoes are never desirable, and pronounces them a snare and a delusion. "Every woman who has tried it knows the comfort as well as the economy of having her shoes made to order."

The growths and deformities of the feet that cause so much suffering are the result of clothing the foot in a covering made upon a plan entirely different from the pattern after which nature formed the foot.

Walking boots and shoes with sharp-pointed toes are very unbecoming to a wide foot. High heels also engender breadth by forcing the wearer forward and thus widening the ball of the foot. A square-toed shoe is by far the most suited to a large foot and, if a good fit, will in time bring about an improvement in shape and size.

Soft kid shoes, with narrow flat seams, low in the heel and fitting snugly over the instep should be worn when the foot is really ill-shaped. A shoe a size longer than the number usually worn, on a narrow last, gives the foot a neat, stylish appearance, decreases the size and adds to the comfort and grace of the wearer.

Colored shoes are, to my thinking, never in good taste for street wear, and they are suitable for only the daintiest feet.

The shoe, being an article of primary utility, was used, more or less, in the earliest ages.

The shoes of the ancient Egyptians were made of papyrus. The Chinese, as well as the inhabitants of India and other nations of antiquity, manufactured them from silk, rushes, wood, linen, iron, brass, silver, gold and the bark of trees, and sometimes ornamented them with precious stones.

A writer on Roman customs tells us that the citizens had various coverings for their feet, the chief of which were the calceus and the sole. "The calceus," he writes, "somewhat resemble the shoe we wear at present and was tied upon the instep with a latchet or lace. The solea, or sandal, was a thick cork sole covered above and beneath with leather and neatly stitched on the edge. It left the upper part of the foot bare and was fastened to it by means of straps, which were crossed over the instep and wound about the ankle. The Roman citizens wore the calceus with the toga when they went abroad in the city, while the solea was worn at home and at journeys. The solea was also used at entertainments, but it was changed for the calceus when the guests were about to surround the table."

The senators, we are told, wore shoes which come up in the middle of the leg, having a golden or silver crescent on the top of the foot.

The shoes of the women were generally white, sometimes red, scarlet or purple, and were adorned with embroidery and pearls, but those of the men were mostly black. On days of public ceremony, however, the magistrates wore red shoes.

The fashion of boots and shoes, like every other part of dress, has been subject to many changes, both as regards form and material. In Europe about a thousand years ago, the greatest nobles wore shoes with wooden soles. In the reign of William Rufus, the English wore shoes with long, sharp points, stuffed with tow and twisted like a ram's horn. Though the clergy preached against this fashion, the points continued to increase in length until the reign of Richard II., when they were fastened to the knees with chains of silver or gold. Parliament, in 1463, interposed and prohibited the manufacture or use of shoes or boots with "pikes" exceeding two inches in length.

In Europe and America boots and shoes are commonly made of leather for women's shoes, however, it is not unusual to use prunella, a kind of twilled worsted cloth. In all cases thick leather is used for the soles.

GRATEFUL, PLEASING RELIEF AFTER MANY DAYS.

How a Queens County Man Found Permanent Healing.

His Own Experience Tells Fully and Freely some Truths which all Readers of this Paper Should Know.

Here and there, in almost every town of our province, are "chronic" cases over which doctors disagree; cases that become worse year after year. It is to reach such that the gentleman to whom these lines refer, and whose portrait is here given, has written the story of his case.

Mr. Branscomb's home is in Chipman, Queens Co., N. B. It was there that a representative of the Groder company called upon him, Sept. 1st, of the present year. His greeting was most cordial. He gladly acknowledged his thanks, giving expression to the following statement:

"It is five years since I first became afflicted with a form of indigestion. Last winter it became more severe, developing into chronic diarrhœa. I cannot tell you how much I suffered for SIX LONG WEEKS. It seemed as though relief could not be found. You will remember how I told you of my condition and asked your advice about taking a bottle of GRODER'S SYRUP. You told me that the medicine was a laxative and might not meet my needs. I delayed buying for a few hours until I began to hope that it would help me. Even my clothes seemed a burden because of bloating of stomach. It was with difficulty that I kept about sufficiently to attend to my business.

But I am a well man now from the use of your remedy. In three days after I bought GRODER'S SYRUP the terrible pain and distress across my stomach were removed. My bowels rapidly assumed a natural, healthy condition. Now I eat and drink as well as I ever could. I have gained constantly in flesh since March last. I am perfectly cured.

It seems a duty for me to state my case fully, that others who suffer as I did may know where to find a cure."

Truly yours,

E. A. BRANSCOMB.

TEA! TEA!

Our TEA TRADE last season was the largest for some years, and we attribute it to the fact that the Teas we offered the public suited them both in QUALITY and PRICE.

Numbers of our customers have come back to us this Fall, and told us that if we could give them as good value this year as we did last year they would want no better.

We believe that WE CAN give them, and everyone else who favors us with an order, BETTER VALUE than even last season, as this year's crop of Tea seems to run more even than last year's; and having bought a much larger stock of it this year, we were in a position to buy it at very close figures.

We don't advertise to sell Cheap Shoddy Teas, as we don't keep them at all, and would not sell them at any price; but we believe we do sell the best 20, 24 and 28 cent Teas in the city to-day. We make reductions off above prices on quantities of five pounds and upwards. Every Pound of Tea sold warranted by
