"You are entering into a very disturbed world of changing values, especially moral values, and you will find the code which you have learned here attacked openly and covertly," Hon. Sean A. Murphy, Ambassador of Ireland, told the graduating class yesterday at the centennial commencement exercises at St. Dunstan's University.

The Ambassador said we are living in an age of "dangerous and insidious propaganda" where all the principles held dear are under constant attack. He warned that "you will have to be constantly on your guard lest such propaganda should undermine your Christian outlook on life."

At the same time three charges were laid against four of the prisoners. Of the latter, according to the charge laid, three are accused of the robbery by violence of $700 on Friday, May 21, when they allegedly forced their way into the car of the home of Lester Harvey Lavers, 78, Georgetown, and overpowered the elderly man.

When questioned yesterday R.C.M. Police admitted recovering approximately half of the money taken and they now believe the amount involved to be between $700 and $800. The search encompassed the jail proper and surrounding areas. The pistol and ammunition were found in the jail, but the money was found in various quarters. The search is continuing.

EXCESSIVE CAUTION

Overcaution may have its roots in a "possessiveness" or it may be simply a matter of laziness. The parent who can't be bothered to look into the whys and wherefores of high-school social life may find it easier to condemn the whole business.

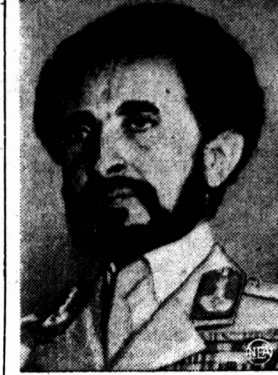

Drawing the line between being too indulgent and too careful is not easy—but then raising children is not an easy job. If you are beset with qualms about where to give in, or where to hold back, your child's teachers, with their years of experience in dealing with adolescents, can give you definite help. If you find yourself saying "No" to every request for privileges, better have that consultation.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M. D.

IMPROVING SCARS ON THE SKIN

In medicine it has long been known that in the treatment of old ulcers or other chronic skin ailments giving treatment that furthers irritates the condition often sets up such action that the skin first becomes so greatly inflamed and irritated, putting life into the process of healing, that it heals completely in a short time.

I have written before of the process inaugurated by some general surgeons and dental surgeons in the treatment of rough skin caused by acne (pimples) or scars from acne.

In one recent article I described the skin-peeling method of planing the skin and in another about a sandpaper method suggested by an American dental surgeon.

A recent letter to the editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association states that this method has been known for many years and gives credit to Dr. Kromayer and later to Dr. George Thieme, Leipzig, who described a method that consists of freezing the skin with ethyl chloride and the subsequent use of various sizes of dental burrs mounted on a motor flexible cord.

This method is known to many German and American dental surgeons. Its usefulness was proved in the treatment of keloid tumors (scars from wounds or other injuries), pigmented nevi, freckles, tattoos, and superficial pitted scars. Dr. Kromayer recommended this method also in the treatment of the black pigmented moles and the dark borders of vitiligo—the skin condition in which some areas of the skin are completely free of the natural color of the skin. Treatment has never given any benefit in vitiligo, making it necessary to tint the skin to a natural color with color preparations.

Dr. Frederick Reiss, who writes the letter to the editor, states that he has had extensive experience with this method of planing or sandpapering the skin and is convinced that the use of dental burrs has a definite advantage over the brush and sandpaper method. He states further that while planing of the skin can be achieved with wire brushes and sandpaper, the small size of the burrs is more advantageous and permits greater precision in the treatment of tiny areas. Furthermore, it is far easier to control the depth of the abrasion with the firm burrs than with the brushes or sandpaper.

It is easy to understand why any man or woman disfigured by blotches on the skin due to scars or healed patches of acne (pimples) would willingly undergo the slight pain of planing or sandpapering the skin that undergo a lifetime of facial disfigurement which, in most cases, means a loss of morale and development of an inferiority complex.
