Island Lobster Fishermen Plagued By Poor Weather

By NEIL MATHESON

Bad weather has been causing so much trouble to the province's lobster fishermen that many of them have not been able to get all their traps thus far. That difficulty is intensified in the Canoe Cove area, for example, where a lack of a wharf, and a breakwater, adds immeasurably to the difficulty which lobster fishermen have in getting their traps and other gear to the fishing grounds. High winds which blew steadily at 30-35 miles per hour, and gusts to 60 to 65 m.p.h. kept fishermen at home yesterday, and there were fears expressed that considerable damage to traps and gear could result in areas where the wind was onshore.

NO DAMAGE
No damage was reported from fishermen at various Island points from last Saturday's storm, so far as traps and other fishing gear were concerned, except for those who fished in shallow water, fairly close to land. In most cases fishermen were able to get out to haul their traps and inspect their gear Monday and those fishing in deep water reported no damage.

Tom Fraser, Murray Harbor told The Guardian yesterday the weather has been consistently bad since the season opened. The opening day of the season has been the only one thus far that has been ideal for getting the traps and other gear to the fishing grounds, he said. Many of the traps are still not out, he explained.

FAIRLY ACCEPTABLE
A spokesman at North Rustico said yesterday that his fishermen landed 2,000 pounds of lobster last week which was regarded as fairly acceptable for this season, though not a big week by any means for the large number of boats fishing from that port it would be an average of less than 1,000 pounds per boat for the week. Alberton spokesmen said there were no reports of damage from Saturday's storm. There were no boats out on Wednesday. But the lobstermen fishing out of Canoe Cove appear to be having a rougher time than most of their counterparts across the province.

Earl Moore, New Haven — he IF IT'S FISH and can be caught... WE HAVE IT Queen Street Meat Market DIAL 4-7336 fishes out of Canoe Cove — told The Guardian yesterday he hasn't had a catch of lobsters yet. He pulled 24 traps Monday and got three lobsters — that's the first he got this year — and nine of his traps had the heads smashed in. His traps had not been hauled for four to five days, he said. These traps that were smashed — a fellow fisherman had about a dozen traps smashed out of a total of 18 hauled, he said — are on "the inside grounds". They would be one-half mile to three-quarters of a mile out, he said.

COMPLAIN BITTERLY
The Canoe Cove fishermen complain bitterly about the lack of a breakwater to protect their boats when they are tied up, worse still, perhaps, they have no wharf or landing facilities where they can pull their lobster boats in, and load them with traps and other gear, or unload them when they return from the fishing grounds. To get their traps out to sea, Mr. Moore explained, the fishermen have to load them on a half-ton truck, drive it down to the beach, then transfer the traps to a flat-bottom punt, load it with perhaps 18 traps — there's not room for more — then push the punt or pole it, out to water deep enough for the lobster boats to come alongside, transfer the traps to the boat, then repeat the operation until they have a load of traps to take to the fishing ground. It's a painfully slow, as well as a laborious operation, Mr. Moore explained. Every fisherman has to have a sea dory, to get out to his lobster boat, and the punt to transfer the traps from the shore to the boat, Mr. Moore complained. Perhaps 30 percent of the traps there are not out yet — there are 14 boats fishing from the cove — and Mr. Moore said almost 50 percent of his traps are not in the water yet.

ARE RESENTFUL
The lads there are particularly resentful about the lack of a breakwater, apparently. Several years ago they purchased the burned out tanker "Seakon" from K.C. Irving, Saint John for five dollars. The New Brunswick industrialist virtually gave them the hulk of the tanker which had caught fire in Charlottetown harbor, when he learned they wanted it for a breakwater at their fishing harbor. But the federal government refused to install the old tanker where the Canoe Cove fishermen wanted it, Mr. Moore told this paper.

Water Authority Chairman Addresses Trade Board

By LORNE YEO

Tourists find Prince Edward Island still an unusually attractive island, one of the few left in so-called modern civilization. This was the comment of Dr. John Bates, chairman of the P.E.I. Water Authority, who spoke at a meeting of the Charlottetown Board of Trade. The meeting, held at the Charlottetown last night, was chaired by Walthen Gaudet, president. "Pollution is the only major strain on the countryside. There are only about 10 cases of municipal and industrial pollution. None of these are huge and the industrial cases of pollution are enacted only with the food-processing category," said Dr. Bates.

INVOLVES CONTROL

He mentioned that jurisdiction of water authorities who deal with water supply, pollution control and stream alterations, involves control of the use of all surface, ground and shore waters, the allocation of water among users where necessary, the purification of used water and any filtration of the natural features of waterways. Dr. Bates said, "clean-up now is far cheaper than at any stage in the future. By the end of Centennial year P.E.I. could be sweet, pure and homestead. The whole world could be told of the one group that had done what others talked about."

Continuing with pollution, he mentioned four main forms: (1) Domestic sewage which is loaded with bacteria dangerous to human health. (2) Industrial wastes in P.E.I. are organic from meat, fish, vegetables and milk, which are discharged before bacterial action sets in but, if untreated, loading the waterways to smother oxygen vital to fish life and to spoil our rivers and beaches for pleasant living. (3) Silt — the third pollutant on the list is possible caused by road builders, farmers or other operators, government or private offenders. (4) Pesticides and other chemicals which are highly toxic.

haps 50 per cent of the capital loan," he said. The meeting was told that fish processing plants everywhere are being urged to use salt water as the main supply, not only because fresh water is limited at most sites but because salt water is best for most purposes.

He concluded that in Prince Edward Island the many estuaries and tidal inlets raise the question of best control for multipurpose uses. An unusual requirement of fresh water might justify impoundment to keep out the tides and to create a storage basin which could be drawn down in low-flood periods. Other estuaries have been or may be fitted with partial closures to provide brackish water for trout fishing and habitat for wild fowl.

For this season the cucumber crop will be trucked to the company's plant in Montreal, but a processing plant in the province is being considered. Local fieldman for the company is Charles Thibert who is well known to those taking part in the program of the West Prince development foundation.

Reporting for the harbors and fishery committee, Harvey Butt told the meeting that the outer harbor entrance is to be dredged also the inner dock area, the railway wharf is to be paved right away and a scallop survey is to be conducted on the north side of the province.

SWIMMING CLASSES
It was decided that the board would again sponsor Red Cross swimming classes in Alberton. Rev. Gerald Steele, Carmen MacNeill, Don MacKenzie and Mrs. Reg. Eldershaw were appointed to represent the board at a hearing into increased carry fees rates.

C.R. Leard was appointed as a delegate to the annual meeting of the Maritime Provinces Board of Trade to be held in Sydney June 12 to 14.

Correspondence included letters from Hon. L.G. Dewar, MD, and Rev. David MacDonald, MP, expressing interest and support for the proposal to construct a bridge and causeway from McNally's Point to Gordon's Wharf creating a second highway into the West Prince area.

Plans were made to hold a meeting of the membership committee and the executive to arrange for a membership drive. An invitation was received for members to attend the largest museum open house on June 4 at Alberton.

The president, Harold Phillips, expressed the sympathy of the board to Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Handrahan and family on their recent bereavement. Minutes were recorded by the secretary C.R. Leard.

"Your provincial government, is going to provide supplementary assistance for old age pensioners in need. Old age pensioners can't wait for Ottawa to act," said the premier.

The premier also promised to increase the number of senior citizens' housing units to 500 and to build 50-bed homes for special care in West Prince and Kings County, plus a 200-bed unit for Charlottetown. "We will build," said the premier, "500 homes under family housing, in Charlottetown, Summerside, Georgetown and other localities, rural and urban, where the need exists."

The premier said that this program is "well within our means" and can be carried out, "without increasing taxation."

"This new program is only possible because the island has made so much basic progress in the past seven years," said the premier. "Whatever you do," he said, "don't sell yourselves short. Don't underestimate the potential — economic or otherwise — of our little island."

SECOND YEAR FOR FINAL

Confederation Centre Presents School Plays

On Saturday evening at Confederation Centre Theatre three one-act plays will be staged before adjudicator Evelyn Garbary in the final festival of the Prince Edward Island Drama Festival Association. The plays are the winners of the Zone festivals held during the last week in April when seventeen entries from Island high schools were presented before adjudicator Murray Porter.

Alberton Regional High School will present "Still Stands the House" by Gwen Pharris Ringwood, judged best play in the Western Zone Festival held in Tignish. "Seven Against One" by the St. Dunstan's High School Players was the winner in the Central Zone Festival held in Kensington, and in the Eastern Zone Festival at Souris. The Association is fortunate to have obtained the services of Evelyn Garbary as adjudicator for this festival.

DRAMA TRAINING
Mrs. Garbary was born in Wales. She received her drama training at the Royal Academy in London, receiving its coveted Gold Medal. Following a season with the Old Vic company she spent a year in the Bernard Shaw Repertory Company. Mrs. Garbary appeared with Sir John Martin Harvey in his last London season and she remained with the company on its Canadian tour. She later formed her own repertory company in Wales and toured the principality performing plays in both English and Welsh.

She married Frank O'Connor, the Irish short story writer and director of the Abbey Theatre, Dublin. She also did script writing for Radio Eireann. In 1957, Mrs. Garbary came to Canada. She has written plays for CBC Summer Stage, Halifax Theatre and has recorded her own short stories for the CBC network.

DIRECTS PRODUCTION
In 1963 she directed a Half-fax production of "Look Back in Anger" that won the top award at the finals of the Dominion Drama Festival in Winnipeg.

Mrs. Garbary is director of the Playwright's Workshop, Halifax and this year she directed the Regional D.D.F. winning play "Three Sheets in the Wind" by Doris Beattie Phillips, a Playwright's Workshop member. Recently Mrs. Garbary was appointed organizer of the centennial performing and visual arts program for Nova Scotia.
