CANADIAN WEED SEEN UNJUST RETALIATION

By DOUG MARSHALL

LONDON (CP) — "It's that cursed Canadian weed again," snapped the public works inspector. "The more you cut the ruddy thing the more it grows."

"They should never have let that stuff in from Canada," muttered the colonel watching from the bench as a boy's model yacht became entangled in the Kensington Garden Pond. "It's caused nothing but trouble for years."

The latest threat to Anglo-Canadian relations is an innocuous looking but tenacious plant known as elodea Canadensis — the simple Canadian pond weed.

On the surface it has dark green leaves arranged in clusters of three. But beneath the water its roots proliferate in a vicious twisting mass that even hungry fish are reputed to avoid.

"It was accidentally introduced into Britain in the middle of the 19th century and launched itself on a wild rampage for two decades," said a ministry of works spokesman and it is now taking over waterways all across southern England."

"In the past we used to cut it but it lives on severed from its roots. Copper sulphate may be used to poison the plant but that's dangerous to ducks. We may have to drain the pond."

Draining Kensington Pond would leave hundreds of Sunday model yachters high and dry and this made the colonel even more angry. He likes to sit in the sun and watch the boats.

"I know we burdened you with the English sparrow," he said, "but this menacing weed seems an unjust retaliation."

Liberal Gov't Takes Look As Wheat Support Planning

OTTAWA (CP)—The Liberal government is giving second thoughts to its pledge to introduce a minimum $2-per-bushel price for wheat.

An informant says that all of the government's agriculture policies are under review and that another plan of encouragement and stability for Western wheat farmers may be produced.

But a Liberal party source insists the $2 wheat promise is not being dropped. It remains a party pledge, but is being postponed pending other developments.

The review of agriculture policy, undertaken by Prime Minister Pearson, Trade Minister Sharp, and Agriculture Minister Hays, with the advice of government officials on technical questions, probably will produce some decisions for Parliament to chew on when the session resumes Sept. 30 after its summer recess.

But the $2 wheat pledge may not be acted upon until next spring.

Two factors have persuaded the government to review its 1963 election promise.

One is that the promise did nothing to swing Western farmers into the Liberal camp in the April 8 general election. The Prairie farmers voted overwhelmingly Conservative.

The other is that — as one authority put it — "There have been great changes in the world wheat markets since the election campaign." Farmers have planted their second biggest crop in history, and there is a distinct possibility of a bumper crop putting Canada back into the big-surplus position it was in a few years ago.

More Weak Links Appearing In Crime Network In U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Federal agents are getting a closer look than ever into the inner workings of the country's organized crime network, it was learned Friday. They have informants risking their lives virtually everywhere in the syndicate.

The startling disclosures during the last year by mobster Joseph Valachi, who described in detail the nation-wide crime organization called "Cosa Nostra," are leading to even more weak links in the iron chain of silent discipline which has kept the syndicate in business for years.

Cosa Nostra "families" are infiltrated across the country with informants, it was learned.

"We're getting more good information now than we've ever gotten before," one government source said. "These guys are really getting upset. Everyone is wondering what the next man has said about him."

Attorney-General Robert F. Kennedy has termed Valachi's revelations a major intelligence breakthrough in the justice department's hard-fought campaign against the multi-billion-dollar organized crime industry.

Now, with more people talking, the department is stepping up an intense campaign of psychological warfare.

The department also hopes that the revelations begun by Valachi and carried on by other, unidentified informants, will increase public awareness of the problem and influence Congress to provide legislation to make the battle easier for government forces.

Valachi, now hidden away in a top secret place, started talking when he feared he had been marked for death.

Aluminum Co. Is Accused Of High Price

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government auditors accused the Aluminium Company of America Friday of charging excessive prices to its military customers and refusing to furnish cost data to them.

In a report to Congress, the General Accounting Office cited contract prices it said exceeded by about 51 per cent Alcoa's known current production costs.

The case cited involved noncompetitive procurement of military aircraft forgings at a cost of $2,600,000. The forgings were made at the company's Cleveland plant under subcontracts.

"Notwithstanding the absence of effective competition and the fact that Alcoa's favored position stemmed in part from its possession of special government facilities," the auditors said, "the company refused to accept subcontracts on any basis other than its own terms and rejected the inclusion of contract provisions granting the air force or its contractors the right to review actual cost data.

"As a result of the position taken by Alcoa and the pressure of time in the over-all production of the related aircraft, its military customers had to accept the prices offered without benefit of normal negotiation processes."

The contracts involved were awarded from November 1957 to October 1960.

Alcoa challenged the report as "incomplete" and presenting a false conclusion. The company said that "if the GAO were to give proper recognition" to all factors involved "there would be no basis for the conclusions reached. . . ."

Dredging Job Let In Saint John

OTTAWA (CP) — The works department has awarded a $531,900 contract to McNamara Marine Limited of Toronto for dredging work in Courtenay Bay at Saint John, N.B. The work is expected to be completed in eight months.

HALT PISA'S LIST

The Italian government is to spend $3,000,000 to halt the list of the leaning tower of Pisa, but not to straighten it.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♦	1 ♠	Dble.
2 ♦	Pass	Pass	2 ♥
Pass	2 ♠

Opening lead — kind of diamonds.

I seldom report psychic bids in this column, one reason being that some readers might get false notions about how the game should be played and, as a result, cause their partners and their pocketbooks endless suffering.

However, there is no doubt that some players get a kick out of practicing such shenanigans, and, in fact, the vice— if I may call it that—is not altogether unknown even in the highest echelons.

This hand occurred in a match between Italy and Great Britain during the European Championships some years ago. The irrepressible British expert, Boris Schapiro, with an eye on the vulnerability, overcalled the Italian South's diamond bid with one spade on a three-card suit headed by the ten.

It is hard to criticize this whimsy, since it proved very successful when the Italian pair (Chiaradia and Forquet) stopped at two spades and made four. Regardless of why or where the famous Italian pair went wrong, there is no doubt that the psychic overcall was highly effective.

There must have been something irresistible about bidding spades on the 10-7-3 with the West hand because, when the same deal was played at the second table, with Belladonna and Avarelli holding the East-West cards for Italy, the bidding went:

East	South	West	North
3 ♦	Dble.	3 ♠	Dble.
Pass	Pass	4 ♦	Pass
Pass	4 ♠	Pass	Pass
5 ♦	Dble.

Konstam and Meredith, for Britain, smoked out the psychic and contracted for four spades despite Belladonna's spade bid. Presumably they would have made the contract for a score of 620 points, but Averelli decided to sacrifice at five diamonds, which was doubled.

This contract went down four —700 points—which was no great loss to par, but, in conjunction with what had happened at the previous table, it cost the Italian team 530 points.

Britain clearly won the psychic battle fought at the two tables.
