Canada Builds Up Strength Of Infantry Unit In Europe

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—Amid talk of NATO being in disarray and an actual further French military withdrawal from the alliance, Canada is quietly building up the strength of its 6,200-man infantry brigade in Europe.

Authorities disclosed Wednesday that the tank strength of the brigade has recently been increased by 30 per cent. Total number of tanks now with the brigade in West Germany can't be given for security reasons.

The defence department announced last week that the 3rd Battalion of the Royal 22nd Regiment at Camp Valcartier, Que., will be converted into an anti-tank battalion and that one company—about 150 men—will join the brigade.

The Honest John missile battery, which has been stationed in Germany since December, 1961, will get its nuclear warheads this summer.

On order for the brigade are 500 American M-113 armored troop carriers and 12 heavy cargo helicopters.

Besides this, Canada has agreed to contribute a battalion group — about 1,100 men — to NATO's mobile reserve. This force will be kept in Canada but would be flown to Europe immediately when called on. It will do part of its training overseas.

KEEP STRENGTHENING

The government plans to keep concentrating on strengthening the brigade through the rest of this decade, informed sources said.

The present aim is to convert eventually the eight-squadron RCAF air division in Europe to a ground support role —that is, direct tactical air support for the brigade and other NATO ground formations.

This likely will mean acquisition of the American F4B Phantom fighter-bomber, which also could be used in the Canadian air defence system.

When it gets its new equipment, the brigade will be able to deploy farther east—in fact, right up against the Iron Curtain.

Besides the troop carriers and helicopters, the army plans to obtain better anti-tank weapons, a new armored reconnaissance vehicle to supplant the ferret scout car, a new five-ton truck to double the present road lift, more self-propelled artillery, an anti-aircraft missile for field use, and a new tank five years from now to replace the Centurion.
