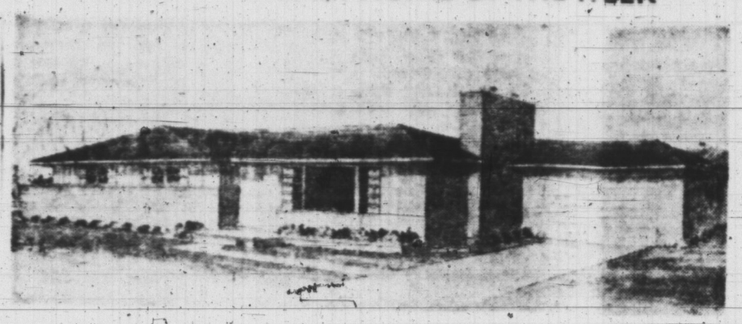
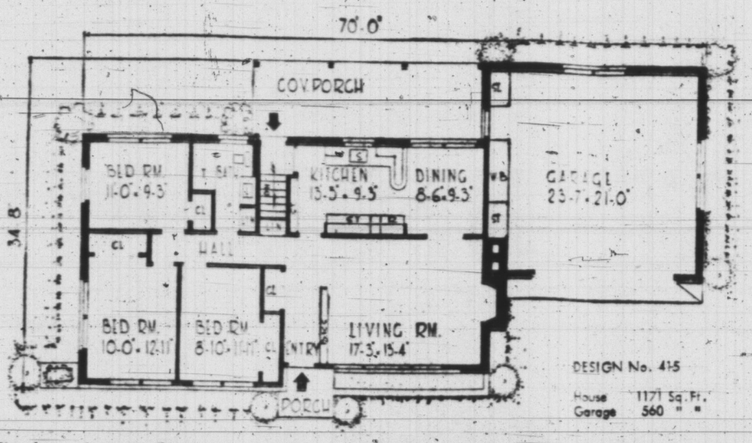
GUARDIAN-PATRIOT HOME OF THE WEEK





DESIGN No. 415
House 1171 Sq. Ft.
Garage 560 " "

Fireplace is set flush in ledge stone wall 40" high an 8" wood ledge is topped by "V" cut boards extending to ceiling making this an eye catching feature of the living room. Another custom feature are the louvered doors which separate living room from dining room, which in turn has just enough separation from kitchen so both areas have advantage of spaciousness. Design has excellent traffic circulation and a very functional layout. There is room in the oversize garage for an easily heated extra washroom or it could be located in the basement. Construction is brick veneer with "V" board accents. 1,171 Sq. Ft.

WHO SELLS WALL BURLAP?

QUESTION: We plan to cover our walls with burlap. Where is this sold, who can tell me how to apply it, and what kind of paste to use? I have done some wallpapering, and would like to try this other material. I think burlap looks very good.

ANSWER: Wallpaper dealers carry burlap or can get it for you, in just about any shade. The dealer can also give you full instructions. You'll find it easier by far than wallpaper to handle. The paste goes on the wall, not on the burlap, which you'll appreciate!

BRICK PATIO—NO CEMENT?

QUESTION: When an all-knowing friend heard me suggest I could build an all - brick patio without using any cement, he called me nutty. I don't think I am, but I'd like your opinion, too.

ANSWER: Not nutty at all. Bricks can be very solidly laid in a bed of sand, and nothing else. A four-inch bed is usually enough; enought to wiggle the brick easily into proper alignment, enough left underneath for good drainage and settlement. It's surprising in how short a time bricks will become solidly entrenched this way. Firming with a lawn or tennis court roller will speed the end result.

CAMOUFLAGING PATCH

QUESTION: To spare the expense of putting down an entire course of concrete I had a local handyman patch several cracked, and broken areas with the ready-mixed asphalt. He did a good job, but now I don't like the way these big black patches stand out. Is there any way to make them less conspicious?

ANSWER: Sprinkle with dry white Portland cement, just as it comes from the bag. It takes a little time, because the asphalt will only absorb so much cement at a time. But the more cement you put on, the whiter the patches will become. They'll never remind you or new - fallen snow, however.

WATER PIPES NOISY

QUESTION: Whenever the toilet is flushed there is a noisy knock in the pipes. What is wrong and can I fix this myself?

ANSWER: This is generally caused by a loosened or worn washer. It is not a difficult job to replace the washer, as well as smooth the seat where the washer rests. At any hardware store, you can get an inexpensive kit for this job, complete with illustrated details of how to do it. This is the same treatment as for a leaking faucet.

FLOOR SWEATY NOT LEAKY

QUESTION: My husband put down our basement floor, but did not use waterproof concrete. We live near the water. Now, when it is damp and humid, the floor is wet, as if water comes up right through the concrete, wet all over. Other times, it is wet only under anything we've set down, like a clothes basket. Do we need another layer of waterproofing?

ANSWER: It isn't the concrete leaking at all. It's condensation, formed when warm damp air in the unventilated basement strikes the cool concrete. Open windows and doors on dry days, give the place the constant airing it needs, and see the difference! Don't blame your husband's concrete job.

PANEL WAVY WALL

QUESTION: I would like to run four-foot-high paneling up the stairway wall. It is the type secured top and bottom by molding. But the wall area is quite uneven; there are definite wavy areas. Will paneling cover this satisfactorily, or will it be wavy, too?

ANSWER: Depends on the amount of waviness. You can determine by trial. After the molding is temporarily secured, see if the paneling will fit without too much forcing. some types of paneling may be forced into a slight bend. But with pronounced evenness in the wall, it's far better to fasten furring strips first. With the paneling fastened over these strips you're sure it will lie flat. It will look better, too.

FORMICA OVER FORMICA?

QUESTION: My husband has agreed to my plans to redecorate the kitchen, and has promised to help. However, the color of the present formica counter top won't go at all with the new colors. Is it possible to put another layer of formica on top?

ANSWER: Certainly. You must first remove all traces of grease, wax and dirt, so that the content cement will make a good bond. Any metal edging should be removed, then replaced when the new layer is installed.

QUESTION: What is the best way to remove a big dark oil stain from a concrete driveway?

ANSWER: Remove surface oil with an absorbing compound, widely available at garages. Then make a poultice of any absorbing powder, such as corn meal, powdered chalk, fuller's earth, etc., and cleaning fluid, benzine or high-test gas. Spread this thickly on the stain, and cover with sheet plastic or metal to retard evaporation. The cleaning agent will work into the concrete and soften the embedded oil, and the powder

Health Services Revision Proposed In Special Study

OTTAWA (CP) — Reorganization of all community health services along regional lines is proposed in a special study released here by the royal commission on health services.

The 300 page volume says there is growing concern over the largely unco-ordinated development of community health services. They are hindered in providing a balanced pattern of service by overlapping in some areas, gaps in others and uneconomic use of skilled personnel and complex facilities.

In addition, there was a tendency to overlook regular, objective evaluation of the various programs.

The study is the work of Drs John E. F. Hastings and William Mosley of the University of Toronto School of Hygiene.

Under the plan, each province would establish a regional health services board representing municipal councils in the region, professional groups providing the services and the public.

It would be responsible to the legislature through the provincial health minister. Its powers would include changing existing policies to meet regional circumstances, initiating special programs with provincial approval and authority over operation of local programs.

BUDGET REGIONALLY

"The programs would be financed mostly by the provincial government through annual regional budgets. But the boards would have limited powers to get money locally.

The province would be responsible for over-all supervision of local services with respect to standards of staffing, general administrative procedures, budgetary methods and standards of service.

The study calls for federal government grants to cover half the cost of provincial services.

Dr. Hastings says that regional boards would replace existing local municipal boards of Health and would assume responsibility from the boards of hospitals and other institutions for campaigns, immunization, allotment and distribution, purchase of vital equipment and similar matters.

The regional boards also would become responsible for rehabilitation services and facilities, mental health services and facilities, home care programs, ambulance services and health services for the aged.

Services provided now by voluntary agencies would either be provided by the regional board or paid for by the board.

PLANES FOR ZAMBIA

Rhodesia-locked Zambia will buy two Hercules transport aircraft at a cost of about $6,000,000 to help ease supplies following closure of Rhodesian overland approaches, it was officially announced Saturday. A government spokesman said two planes to be delivered at the Lockheed plant at Marietta, Ga., Aug. 15, will bring Zambia's Hercules fleet to four.

END STRIKE

BRUSSELS (Reuters) — Pilots and air crews of the Belgian airline, Sabena, who have been on strike for the last 28 days for more pay, have decided to return to work. The decision was made following an agreement between the pilots' union and the Sabena management on conditions for a resumption of talks on the wage claims.
