NATIONAL PHARMACY WEEK

OCTOBER 6th - 12th

"Good Health Is Priceless"

Despite the vast strides that have been made by medical science in recent years, there are still many health problems to be overcome in Canada. The Canadian Pharmaceutical Association, quoting the Health League of Canada, notes that "Cardio-vascular diseases constitute the most serious threat to the health of Canadians today. Cancer is the second largest killer, after heart disease, and arthritis is one of the three leading causes of physical disability. Diabetes ranks fifth as a cause of death in Canada."

Many communicable disease which were once rampant in many parts of Canada have now been virtually eliminated or brought under control. Canada is fortunate in that it has no disease which are endemic to the country as a whole, nor do we have the epidemics that were once so prevalent in Canada. Year Book, reporting on certain notifiable diseases, said, "It will be noted that, for the first time, no information is carried on such diseases as chickenpox, mumps, measles and German measles. The incidence of these diseases is no longer reportable since they no longer constitute a serious health problem in Canada."

However, warns The Canadian Pharmaceutical Association, which represents professional pharmacy in Canada, this encouraging improvement in our health picture does not permit complacency. The Association is urging Canadians to follow this six-point program to ensure continued good health:

Medical science has new tools, new techniques and insights, new drugs that were undreamt of a generation ago. Many diseases which once were inevitably considered fatal can now be controlled, enabling their victims to lead relatively normal lives.

"Good Health Is Priceless" is an old cliché. Medical science can do much to return the ill to good health. But we can also do much to help ourselves and the suggested program by The Canadian Pharmaceutical Association is a step in the right direction.
