

REUNITED

Kazimierz Szewkowski and his wife, Stephanie, compare wedding photographs they've carried since they were married 18 years ago. They were married in Warsaw in 1939 and lost each other two weeks later during a German air-raid. The two were reunited Wednesday at Malton Airport near Toronto after Poland's new government permitted Stephanie to get a passport.

ELLEN'S DIARY

"Dear Dead Days" Is Recalled By Old Reader

"That says... 'we chuckled. 'What does it say?' Mack asked with a questioning smile. We had been watching an itinerant housefly drum against a sunny window-pane. 'It says, 'Woman you'd better stir yourself and get to your house-cleaning! Don't you know that Spring is here?' 'And will you... today?' 'Perhaps!... Not actually. But a little maybe. That was how we came to tidy the old bookcase which has stood, rather stolidly but conveniently in a corner of this old kitchen all down our years at Alderlea. Books are on its shelves. And other items also find fair haven there: papers it may be, of those which accumulate on farms, but by as we say until we have more time to tuck them and discard or file them away. Or it may be some engaging piece of bric-a-brac the glass doors reveal to questing young eyes to bring up the query. 'And when you're dead, that are you going to do with that?' and an answering chuckle. This first house-cleaning of ours as indeed much of it is, was we thought more like an excursion—one which carried us back through the years that are past. For more recent savings put in order, we stopped to visit with the number of old books stored there. We dipped into old histories and textbooks, quaint and yellowed,—an ancient Bible translated to an English of the now long ago, an interesting Buffon's Natural History and an also interesting old English Reader once used in Island schools. Aged, yes, yellowed is this copy of 'A New Edition of Murray's English Reader' containing (in addition to the original works) Elliptical Lessons, an Appendix of articles on Popular Science, Glossaries of proper names and difficult words, a selection of new poetry, and an introduction to etymology. It was compiled by E. R. Humphreys, Esq., formerly of Magdalen College, Cambridge, England, then Head Master of the Central Academy, P.E.I. It was published by James D. Hazard, Printer to the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty—the year 1845. (Victoria the Good would be then a young matron of 26—her colonies overseas still some decades away from Confederation.) In the Editor's preface, Mr. Humphreys writes: "When a few months since, it became the duty of the Board of Education to appoint regular class Books for the District Schools of this Colony, considerable difficulty was experienced in deciding upon a Reading-Book for the advanced classes. It appeared to be very desirable to select one, which should not only be calculated to 'Teach youth to read with propriety and effect' but also to improve their understandings and give them a taste for scientific learning." Dust-cloth idle, we visited in the pages of this book claimed by inscribed name by one of James' uncles—the date 1847. What a fund of information was there, for the student. Truly both teacher and taught must needs to have been proven and bidding intellectual giants to meet the high standard set for them in the Island Reader of those "dear dead days!" Tonight—one of happy meandering moonbeams—we have to our credit in respect to the Spring-cleaning, one bookcase tidied and dusted. Until tomorrow—Diary—Goodnight. . . .

CRY FOR HELP

Her screeching and carrying on at you, by telephone when she's upset, is really a demand—an unconscious cry—for somebody authoritative to take her in hand, and solve all her vexations and thus relieve her of the business of emotional control—so that she won't have to come to grips with life, either within her soul or outside herself. And the gist of her anger is—"Why aren't you taking care of this, you So-and-So?" It isn't uncommon for very young children, demoralized by indifferent surroundings, to present this kind of problem to their elders. In which case, more than fond live is required to restore their balance and instill a habit of self-control. They need to come up against sympathetic but inexorable strength in a leader-guardian, who stands no nonsense in charting the course of acceptable performance in the dependent. Your wife also needs this brand of protective restraint in marriage. And in fact you both need psychiatric help in overcoming the anxieties that spark her hysteria. M.H. Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of this newspaper.

New Pizza Is Perfect For Luncheon Or Snack

By IDA BAILEY ALLEN
"The people of the U.S. have gone all out for pizza, Madame. I find it sold as a snack even in the Five and Ten."
"Is our American pizza like that made in Italy, Chef?" I asked.
"Not usually, Madame," he replied. "Americans like to invent variations."
"Regulation pizza is made with yeast dough, rolled out thin and brushed with olive oil. Then it is covered with firm - pack tomato pulp, seasoned with oregano, topped with sliced mozzarella cheese and baked until the dough is crisp and brown."
"Because this is round and cut in wedges, Americans call it pizza pie."
"I have been experimenting on a new form of pizza, Madame, very smart in new Easter dress, perfect with coffee for luncheon service or a late evening snack." The Chef opened the oven door, pulled out a long pan and there was his new pizza!

All measurements are level.
Pizza-Rolla: Scald ½ c. milk. Stir in 2 ½ tsp. sugar, 1 ½ tsp. salt and 3 tsp. shortening. Cool until tepid.
Into a large mixing bowl, measure ½ c. warm (not hot) water. Stir in 1 pkg. active dry yeast. When dissolved, stir in the milk mixture. Add 1 ½ c. sifted enriched flour and beat until smooth.
Stir in 1 ½ c. additional sifted flour. Knead on a floured surface until smooth and elastic.
Place in an oiled bowl. Cover. Let rise in a warm place about 1 hr. or until doubled in size.
Turn on a floured surface. Roll into a 16" x 9" rectangle. Spread pizza filling down the center-length of the rectangle. Cut 15 slits in the dough on each side about 1" wide. Fold at an angle across the filling, alternating from side to side to criss-cross.
Transfer to an oil baking sheet. Cover with waxed paper. Let rise 1 hr. in a warm place free from draft.
Mix 1 egg yolk and 1 tsp. water. Brush over the pizza rolla. Bake 35 min. in a moderate oven, 350 degrees. Serve hot with tomato or cheese sauce. Serves 10 - 12.
Pizza Filling: Combine ½ c. tomato paste, 1 tsp. solid oil, ½ tsp. salt and ½ tsp. powdered oregano. Spread on the dough. Cover with 1 c. grated American or Swiss cheese.

Baby Buggy Goes Modern

CALGARY (CP) — That racy-looking, low-slung vehicle that mother's pushing along the street isn't a sports car out of gas. It's a baby buggy.
Such a vehicle for the tiny tot has become a reality in Calgary, where Gyula Nemeth, a Hungarian refugee who left his son and daughter behind, has constructed his first model.
The aluminum buggy has a plexiglass top that slides off on sunny days, a green sunshade panel, padded interior and suspension system which allows baby to ride low to the ground in a gently-rocking action, but which is designed to avert side-tipping. It also has a built-in "diaper disposal."
The pilot model, complete with swept-wing fins, cost $56, said Mr. Nemeth, but others would not be that much. He hopes soon to be able to manufacture it on a Steam-saute 5 min. Add 1 ½ c. canned tomato. Simmer 20 min. Add 2 lbs. any light-colored fish filets. Cover. Simmer or bake until the fish begins to look flaky and the sauce browns slightly. Turn once. Garnish with lemon and parsley.
