

LUCY WHEELER.

They said, too, he'd never survive it, and better, perhaps he never did, than keep it as he did; but one day Squire Wheeler, to all the neighborhood's astonishment, rode over to the farm.

What he did there was never exactly known, but in a little while it was rumored that the suit was withdrawn and next spring Lucy Reid was to be married to his son, Stillman Wheeler. And so it was. One bright March day, she went to the old church yonder and gave herself to him.

He was a good looking man, but never over smart, the neighbors whispered, and I always thought that it was his father's money more than anything else that kept him up.

'But Justin, Grandma Dean—what became of him?'

'There is a dark look about the whole matter. Lucy was made the victim of some terrible falsehood. I never blamed her father, for the loosing of the homestead seemed completely to shatter him.'

'I only know that Squire Wheeler and his son were at the bottom of it, and that Lucy Reid went to the altar believing that Justin had been false to her.'

'Dear me, how dreadful!—did he ever come back?'

'Yes, the next May. Lucy had been a wife two months. Justin had not heard of his marriage. She was at home visiting her father. When she first saw him she fell down like one stricken with a fit. But he carried her into the house and there learned all. Both had been deceived.'

'It was a terrible scene the old front room witnessed. Justin swore vengeance, and it was not till, with clasped hands and streaming eyes, the young wife knelt to the only man she ever loved, and pleaded for the life of her husband, that he promised for her sake, to spare his life.'

'But from the day of Justin's visit Lucy was a changed woman. All the light and gladness of her being seemed dead in her. She moved about her house pale and quiet, with a look of suffering in her once sunny eyes, that made my heart ache to behold.'

'And her husband—did she ever tell him what she had learned?'

'I think not. His father and Lucy's had died in less than two years after the marriage. The squire was much less wealthy than was supposed. The next spring Lucy and her husband moved West and somehow people lost sight of them.'

'And Justin?'

'You know the rest, my child. He became a moody, unhappy man, asking no sympathy or giving none. But he was always smart at a bargain; in a few years he had laid up enough to buy Dea. Platt's farm when his son went south.'

'Ever since he has added acres to his land and hundreds to his bank; but for all that he is a man soured toward all his race, a man who was never known to give a little child or a beggar a crust of bread.'

I have sometimes thought his heart was like a desert, without a tree to shade or a stream to gladden it. And yet it bore a bright blossom once; and believe me, children, for it is the word of an old woman who has seen and known much of the ways of man, it is always so. The heart may be a great wilderness, but in some of its by-ways there has grown a flower.'

Cora and I looked at each other and at Uncle Charlie. Just then Aunt Mary came in. She had been out and had not heard grandma Dean's visit.

But Cora stole up to her uncle, and winding her arms about his neck, whispered;

'I shall believe it always, Uncle Charlie, now I have heard the story of Farmer Keep that there is a blossom in the wilderness of every heart.'

It was a sultry August day in the summer I passed at Meadow Brook. The wind, low and slumbrous as the hush of a mother's voice at nightfall, crept among the corn, and down among the rye and wheat fields, and lay like broad green folds about the dwelling of Farmer Keep.

There was no poem of flowers about the front yard; no graceful harmonizing touch of creeping vine or waving curtains about the old red homestead; and yet it had a quiet, substantial, matter-of-fact physiognomy, that somehow made a home feeling about your heart.

I think it must have been this unconscious feeling which decided the course of the girl who stood at the point where the road diverged and gazed wistfully about her that afternoon.

CATARRH.
Constitutional Catarrh Remedy
CURES CATARRH.

Hear what a Reverend Gentleman says of the Constitutional Remedy.

T. J. B. HARDING, Esq., Brockville, Ont.:—
DEAR SIR—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me. I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as at first the happy effects seemed to me to be "too good to be true."

I was afflicted in my head for years before I suspected it to be Catarrh. In reading in your Circular I saw my case described in many particulars. The inward "drupp" from the head had become very disagreeable, and a choking sensation often preventing me from lying long. I would feel like smothering and be compelled to sit up in the bed. My health and spirits were seriously affected. When your agent came to Walkertown in August, 1876, I secured three bottles. Before I had used a quarter of the contents of one bottle I found decided relief, and when I had used two bottles and a third, I quit taking it, feeling quite cured of that ailment, and have not used any since until of late I have taken some for a cold in my head.

A sense of duty to sufferers from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, prompts me to send you this Certificate, unsolicited, with leave to make what use of it you may see proper Yours truly,

W. TINDALL, Methodist Minister.
