

MR. AND MRS. JAMES MICHAEL SMITH
Park Royal United Church
Setting For Sept. Wedding

Baskets of white mums and gladioli decorated Park Royal United Church for a September wedding when Judith Anne Johnston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester E. Johnston of Parkdale became the bride of James Michael Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Smith of Sydney Mines, Cape Breton.

Rev. J. Henry Tye officiated at the double ring ceremony. The organist Leslie Hiscott accompanied the Intermediate Girls choir. The soloist Sheridyn Trednick sang "The Lord's Prayer".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown fashioned by a "Portrait" of Lagoda silk, featuring a scoop neckline and a modified A-line skirt. A detachable wateau train ending in a gentle floor sweep was of ribbon embroidered lace. Her tiered veil of scalloped silk illusion was held by a tiny pillbox of matching material. She carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses with trailing ivy.

Mrs. Gordon Wellner was her sister's matron of honor. Sandra Johnston and Kathryn Johnston were her sister's bridesmaids. They wore identically fashioned floor length gowns of peau de sole in shades of blue green featuring Empire waists and short sleeves. Their

Parade Of Autumn Styles By Kensington Ladies' Aid

Kensington Ladies Aid of Prince County Hospital, Summerside, have staged a parade of Fall fashions at the Kensington Regional High School. The first fashion show to be held in that area.

The showing of Fall clothing from MacKenzie's House of Fashions, Summerside with Mrs. Estee Carr as co-ordinator was a product of detailed planning and a great deal of work. Furs from Scotia Furs Ltd., Truro, under the direction of the president, Randy Bourgeois, were varied in origin and design, and answered adequately for all who saw them, the perennial question, "Why does every woman long for furs?"

Autumn leaves and Fall Flowers were used lavishly in decor-

Clinton Institute Presents Piano To School

It was decided to purchase a baby layette for the Red Cross at the October meeting of the Clinton Women's Institute, held at the home of the treasurer, Mrs. Keith Woodside.

With the president, Mrs. Thomas Sullivan in the chair the meeting opened with the Mary Stewart collect in unison, followed by thought for the month. "We may not all do great things but we can all be faithful in the things we do" read by the president. The minutes of the last meeting were read by the acting secretary, Mrs. Keith Woodside. Six members responded to roll call by naming "an interesting place you have visited or seen". One visitor was present. The treasurer, Mrs. Woodside gave her report. It was reported that a piano had been purchased for the school. Copies of the "Institute News" were distributed also the list of Canada Packers labels for the premium offer.

The correspondence was read and discussed. Mrs. Ivan Pickering and Mrs. William Cotton and Mrs. William Cotton were appointed on the nominating committee.

Mrs. Ian Henderson will be hostess for the annual meeting in November. Roll-call will be answered with a toy for a retarded child, and payment of dues.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served by the hostess.

ELLEN'S DIARY Learning How To Add Is Simple On A Farm

"You must come with me now to see them, the chickens we have put up to fatten." Peter said, breezing into our quiet this evening. Night had fallen then come in on the wings of the dusk. Now came the stars. Cool though only seasonally so, it was, and pleasant, as are the fine October nights. To think of those, is to recall the invigorating edge of coolness in the air, and the sweetish fragrance which declares the dying bracken and falling leaves of the year. Remember the springtime scents tied up with robins' love trills and the peepers' ancient tunes? That was aroma of fresh-stirred earth and blossoms - of living things. And the summers? It too was a fresh distillation, an exciting blend of daisy and clover, of flowerings rose and acacia and linden. But this is different. It is that of field and leafy tree preparing to come now to rest.

"You were late getting the chickens in their pen" we said. "They are easier to catch, and quieter to move, after dark" he offered, with all the confidence of a farm boy, who has absorbed some of his lore, not from books, but as he will say, "just by knowing."

"Are there many?"

"Yes, a nice lot. I counted them. Alex did too. We haven't lost any since they were tiny things."

A farm is a fine place to teach small fellows, and little maids, about numerals. Where else are there such fetching subjects to count? Kittens and cats, and a dog, for the beginner. Sheep and lambskins for those older. Sleepy chickens, piglets warm against a mother's bosom, cattle-kind on the pastures. No dead numbers against a page, these, but active and interesting subjects.

"It took us quite a while to build the pen for them. I'm not sure" he said with a little chuckle, "whether we helped Mack do it, or it was the other way round. I guess I could say, it was all of us working together."

His voice was happy. It was dim beyond the circle of yard-lights. But the sky had its stars. At this event, past the harvest home, would be a young and rather exciting adventure, to remember up the years.

Last mangers of that harvest were brought in from a far field in the fading afterglow, and stored. Echoes of years gone came back to us, in the sounds from the cellar. This time however, there was no creak of cots there, nor sound of horse's hoofs on the hard-packed earth floor. A truck drawn up beside a still accommodating porthole, of several in the sandstone cellar walls, allowed for handy storing.

"Well, that's something else done!" Mack commented, come by to pick up an apple. "This may be the last year, we'll grow any of those."

"But what will the sows say?"

"Did you know that mangels have an extremely high water content? They can take extra drinks" he grinned.

And what of tomorrow's fieldwork? The plans now say, "It is back to the baling of straw."

Until tomorrow - - Diary - - Good-night.
