Ching And Disalle In Consultation

Price Director Michael V. Disalle (left) and chairman of the Federal Wage Board, Prince Edward Island-born Cyrus Ching, are shown at a joint news conference held at Washington, D.C. following an announcement that the U.S. government had "frozen" prices and wages in an effort to check soaring inflation. Wages were frozen on Jan. 25 while prices were frozen at the highest level existing between Dec. 19 and Jan. 25.

The Canadian government, which was thought might take same step as U.S. in this matter, has decided against decision and has adopted policy of waiting and seeing what will happen. If the U.S. succeeds in its policies, it will make the task of the Canadian Government and the Canadian housewife a lot easier, as most of Canada's prices are set through forces operating in the U.S.
