Public School Examinations.

QUEEN SQUARE SCHOOL.

The annual examination of the Public Schools of this city began to-day at Queen Square School. Among the visitors present were Hon. John Longworth, Hon. A. A. McDonald and W. E. Dawson, Esq. (Trustees), Father McGillivray and Professor Anderson. The school is evidently in a prosperous state, doing a good work, and reflecting great credit upon Mr. Gaul (the Principal), Mr. Smith, Mr. McInnis, Miss Fennessy and Miss Cox. The pupils number about three hundred; and, in our opinion, another teacher is required. Miss Cox deserves special credit and consideration for the good instruction she is giving in vocal music. The following is the

The first Napoleon had an amazing memory for figures. He remembered the respective produce of all taxes through every year of his administration, and could repeat them even to the centimes. Running over an account of expenditures, he noted the ratios of a battalion charged on a certain day at Besancon. "That battalion was not there," said he. The Minister, knowing that the Emperor had been out of France at the time, submitted that he thought it must have been there. It turned out that Napoleon was right, and that a fraud had been committed. The peculator was dismissed, and the anecdote went through the army, inspiring a wholesome alarm.

LONDON Times:—"Mr. Gladstone never lays down any general principle or any future course of action without qualifying it. If, for instance, he says that he is absolutely determined to take a particular course, and no other course, he finishes the phrase with 'under, of course, certain well defined limitations, or some such words, which leaves things precisely where they were so far as his initiative is concerned.'

The crisis in Servian affairs has been averted by the Radicals who claimed seats in the Skupstchina containing themselves with mere protesting and retiring.

The Convent de Notre Dame.

The Grand Concert and Distribution of Prizes which bring annually to a close the scholastic year of the Congregation of Notre Dame took place last evening in the large hall of the Convent. This event, we may observe, has been looked forward to in past years as one of the most imposing scholastic displays, and the most brilliant musical treat, afforded in our city. Hence the spacious hall was last night filled in every part by our leading citizens and musicians. The classes had been examined, we understand, some days previous by His Lordship Bishop McIntyre, Rev. Dr. O'Brien, the Professors of St. Dunstan's College, and Professor Caven of the Prince of Wales College, and the result had proved eminently satisfactory. Written, as well as oral examinations are the tests of proficiency, and some of the written papers are described to us as of high merit.

The following is the programme of last night's entertainment: Entrée—Galeop Brilliant—Misses Hickey, Young Baquet, L. McDonald, A. Reddin, J. McDonald, W. McDonald, Rogers, Kickham and Kelly.

PART FIRST (Junior Pupils). Song—Little Blue Bird Birthday Ball—Misses W. Blake, Benoit, A. Sullivan, McCarvell, M. Kiley, B. Ormby, M. Sullivan, S. Riley, O'Connell and E. Kickham. Song—A Letter to Papa Prizes to the little ones.

PART SECOND. Invitation a la Valse—Misses Welsh, Robins, Findley, Lewis, Knight, McLean, Gaul, Murphy, McQuillan, and L. McDonald; harp—E. Hickey. Vocal Music—Charity—Rossini—Solo: Miss Knight Prizes to intermediate class.

Piano Solo, five pianos ("Believe me, if all those endearing young charms, and Garryowen")—Misses Welsh, Robins, Lewis, Findley, and Gaul. Song—Joyful Day—Solo—Misses Beer and Findley Grand March—Misses Welsh, Robins, Lewis, Findley, Knight, Mason, Smith, Gaul, Murphy and Hickey, accompanied by Orchestral Club.

Prizes to 2nd and 3rd Courses. Vocal Solo—Flower Girl—Miss Knight Concert Duet—Misses Welsh, Robins, Smith, Lewis, Knight, Gaul, Murphy, Hickey. Vocal Music—Grand Chorus—Solos by Misses Knight, Findley, Lowden, Smith. Prizes are awarded for different studies—music, drawing and French.

Honors—"Pink Rose," to Miss Egan, Walker, Kelly, Young and A. Reddin. Song—"McGregor's Gathering," by Prof. Caven. Brilliant Waltz—"Ever or Never"—by the Orchestral Club. Medals to Misses Hickey and Sinnott. Medals for Arithmetic to Misses Coonan, Higgins, and Janet McDonald. Song—"The Day is Gaily Closing"—Solo—Miss Strong Gold Medal for Department to Miss Gaul. Violin Solo ("Ave Maria")—by Mr. Viuni combe.

Prizes and Crowns for Department to Misses Coonan, Higgins, Janet McDonald, K. O'Halloran, and A. Reddin. Closing Address by Miss Lizzie McDonald. It will be noticed that the music ranges from the first efforts of the junior pupils to the more elaborate efforts of the young ladies who compose the more advanced classes. So that in fact the entire entertainment was only an exhibition of the proficiency of the music pupils of the Convent. In several pieces they were assisted by the members of the Orchestral Club, who with a laudable zeal for the encouragement of good music have always shown themselves most ready to assist in Concerts. The precision with which the "little ones" sang and played was most wonderful, and showed with what care and pains they must have been trained. We may say indeed that taken as a whole we never heard in any one Concert in Charlottetown so much really good musical taste, and so much accuracy in the rendering. The "Invitation a la Valse," was charmingly rendered, and was followed by a vocal gem of no ordinary lustre—"Rossini's Charity." Miss Knight did the piece ample justice, and her young companions aided her well, rendering their parts carefully and tastefully, so that the effect was in a high degree pleasing. The instrumental solo, by Misses Welsh, Robins, Lewis, Findley and Gaul was marked by evidences of the careful training usual to the Convent of Notre Dame. Every movement was clear, crisp, and precise. Misses Beer and Findley performed their solos in the part song, "Joyful Day," very effectively. The next number was the Grand March from Verdi's Nabucco, in which the Orchestral Club took part. This performance roused the audience to enthusiasm, and at one time it seemed as if the demand for an encore would break through all rule. The piece deserved it, for it was rendered in a masterly style. Miss Knight has a voice of great power and sweetness—these qualities were shown in the choruses, and in the "Flower Girl," she showed that it also possessed a high degree of careful cultivation and tasteful execution. The grand chorus, with its well executed solos, was remarkable, as were all the other concerted pieces of the programme, for the fidelity with which the different parts were taken up, and the excellent blending of the voices. The waltzes "Ever and Never," by the Orchestral Club and Pianos, were one of the gems of the evening. Never did the Club show its execution to better advantage. The fine acoustic qualities of the Hall enabled them to bring out the lights and shades of the music to perfection. Professor Caven sang the "McGregor's Gathering" with his wonted fire, and received, at the close, rapturous applause. Mr. Vinnicombe played an "Ave Maria," arranged for organ and piano, in a style which we have never heard him surpass. It was difficult to say which was more to be admired; the religious beauty of the music, or the manner in which it was interpreted. If Mr. Vinnicombe always plays this delicate Morceau as well as he played it last night, and is blessed with as careful accompanists, he cannot play it too often.

The great charm of this Concert was the quiet and unpretentious manner in which the programme was gone through. There was no wailing of batons or gesticulation of conductors. All went on as by magic, and the directing power was entirely concealed. In conclusion, we hope long to be entertained by the Sisters of Notre Dame with concerts like that of last evening. They have done much for music in this community in the past, and we trust they will be long preserved to continue their efforts.

The Testimony of Experience.

FROM under this heading in the Daily Patriot of Monday last, we take the following: "Protection and Monopoly have signally triumphed in this Dominion. The people of Canada have been prevailed upon to forge fetters for themselves under a yoke which their fathers were unable to bear. Now we assert the reverse of this, viz., 'That the people of Canada, by the exercise of their own common sense, have placed themselves under a Protective, and if the Patriot will have it so, Monopolist policy, which is not the yoke that their fathers were unable to bear.'

We will advance a step further, and assert fearlessly, and the History of the World will sustain the assertion, that even the extreme Protection and Monopoly that once existed in the countries of Europe, have been the means of making Trade, Commerce, Navigation, Manufactures and Agriculture, very largely what they are to-day, and that modernized, and under proper restrictions, are still, in degree, the chief levers which set in healthy action these five great motors of civilization.

Show us a civilized country on the face of the globe that has not used them and is not now using them to a large extent! True, the day has passed when extreme protection and extreme monopoly were necessary; but, even these, in their time, in spite of evils, produced vast good. What but they brought into being the great trades of the world in a space of time often marvellous to the human mind to contemplate.

What made the commerce of the earth, comparatively speaking, safe to the whole family of man? What brought manufactures to perfection the world over, particularly in England? What alone enabled England to feel, as it were, the pulse of the entire world—to know how it beat in regard to Free Trade?

What put her in a state of manufacturing wealth so great that, for thirty years, she was able, almost, to command the markets of the world, and to oblige them to receive her manufactures, though they, to any extent, refused to join in her Free Trade policy?

What caused the agriculturist in America to rejoice, whilst his lack made his fellow farmer, in the British Isles, to moan and, at last, to emigrate?

Where is there a truly civilized Free Trade country on the face of the earth, save, to a certain extent, Britain; and, even including it, where can be found a country in which protection yes—and what the Patriot calls monopoly—is not prevalent in aid of several of the great motors of civilization before named by us?

In conclusion, the National Policy of our Dominion is just that which the vast majority of the people of Canada, on the 20th of June, instant, pronounce to be the right thing, in the right place, and had they understood its nature, nine years ago as we and others did, a Grit Government would never have been allowed to reign in Canada. To Sir John A. Macdonald, his Colleagues and the Liberal-Conservative Party, belong the honor of having raised this Canada of ours out of the "Slough of Despond" into which the "mixers and muddlers" left it hard and fast in the year of Grace 1878, to a place of safety which the world at large has long since proved. Until millennium days, protection and even monopoly will exist, Cobden, Bright, Lawson & Co., to the contrary notwithstanding. L. C. P. S.—Were Peel and Beaconsfield really in heart Free Traders? Did they not simply, like true constitutionalists, after trying to stem the stream, bow humbly to the will of the people? L. C. June 27, 1882.

Canada's Great Statesman.

ANOTHER AMERICAN TRIBUTE TO SIR JOHN MACDONALD—THE NEW YORK "SUN" ON THE ELECTIONS.

The New York Sun says:—"The Conservative party still hold their own in Canada, though their majority in the Parliament will be somewhat smaller than in the last. This shows that the Canadian provinces still wish to preserve their relations as colleagues of England, and also that they adhere to the high tariff of Sir John Macdonald, in preference to the modified system of free trade offered them by the Liberals. The most noteworthy incident of the recent elections is the effort of both parties to make friends with the voters of Irish origin. As for the policy of protecting home industry, it will probably long be enforced in Canada. Though the rates of duty on imports are pretty high, they accomplish the purpose of paying the expenses of the Government and keeping the treasury in a satisfactory condition, and no set of politicians can easily raise as much revenue in any other way. Yet it seems rather singular that while the Imperial Government is zealously devoted to the doctrine of free trade, the Colonial Government should insist on the doctrines of protection. However, this is not the first political inconsistency in the world, and we dare say it will not be the last. We tender our compliments to Sir J. Macdonald, the chief ruler of Canada, and one of the clearest public characters to be found in any continent."
