St. Paul's AYP A Plans Program

The weekly meeting of St. Paul's A.Y.P.A. opened with a moment of prayer conducted by President Allison Gill. The minutes were approved as read. Some discussion was given to tired Boston police horses. In a pen near the main farmhouse are some baryard animals and a doe. With the hens and roosters are a few geese that were turned in by families after the Easter season.

The doe, hit by a car in 1941, has been on the farm since. A few months ago, when a goose had been attacked by a dog was placed in the pen, the doe nursed it. The goose had lost its back feathers and its neck was raw. But the bird lay on the ground with its neck stretched out while the doe licked the wounds.

The society is a nonprofit agency supported by contributions. The farm was a gift in 1916, at a time when the automobile was becoming a serious threat to horses as a transportation means. Joe Haswell, the superintendent, has been on the job thirty-two years. He said that despite the disappearance of horses from streets, the number being sent to the farm was actually increasing. Most are family saddle horses, he explained.

SPORT OF KING'S

Amherst One Game Up

The Amherst Blue Jays have taken a one game lead back to Amherst in the best of three series with Morell for the Maritime Intermediate "B" title. It was an exciting game, with the Blue Jays playing a smooth game.

The game was close for six innings, but then, with the assistance of a Morell collapse defensively, the Blue Jays exploded for nine runs. This one bad inning is something that usually happens to Morell. Sometimes the opposition scores only one run, but sometimes, as in Sunday's case they allow nine. If this defensive collapse can be over come, Morell may give Amherst some trouble on Saturday in Amherst.

Morell played without three of their top players. Pius Maelinnis Morell's fiery catcher was injured last Sunday in the first game of the double header with Tignish. Pius is expected to be able to play in Amherst on Saturday.

Pius is one of the top hitters on the Morell squad, and was one of the top receivers in the King's County loop Speaking of his catching, Pius is sort of unique in that, while catching his only protection is his mitt and mask. He never wears shin guards or chest protector.

Donald MacDonald was injured in the first game with Tignish, when he received a nasty cut on his leg requiring six stitches. Pat Hughes was injured in the last game of the series with Tignish. Both of these boys are expected back in action this weekend.

Due to the injuries of the above mentioned players, Morell was allowed the use of pitcher Roger MacLeod. Roger pitched good ball for six innings before season fans. Football crowds, she says, "seem to be better educated and have more dignity, but certainly we have more drunks."

Remember When

Danny Webb battered out a decisive win over Dave Castilloux to win the Canadian lightweight boxing title 11 years ago tonight at Montreal. Webb forced the fight throughout and in the late stages of the 12-round match had the former champion hanging on grimly.

This Farm Is Old Folks Home For Animals

METHUEN, Mass. "Being retired to pasture" is a phrase, borrowed from the days of horses, now "used in many ways. But the phrase still lives in its original context, on a 186-acre farm bordering State Route 28 on the outskirts of this town. The farm is the property of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. From the highway children press their noses against the windows of cars and exclaim, "Look, horses!" The group includes old saddle horses, some of which once bore pink-coated hunt riders at Myopia Hunt Club on Boston's North Shore. Several are re-
