A "Fairy" Calendar

The constant improvement in calendars is becoming more marked each year. The creations in this line, which a score of years ago, would be deemed works of art are now classed with those variegated mental compositions of which "Poor Richard's Almanac" was a veritable prototype.

This great advancement in the of making typographical charts by which the passage of the year can be accurately gauged is mainly—if not entirely—due to the perfecting and cheapening of the various processes of printing. These have developed to such a state that today, the work of the printing and lithographic press rivals that of the painter himself. In fact, it is possible by the expenditure of great care and skill to so reproduce a picture that it will at a short distance puzzle even an expert to tell whether it is genuine or not.

As an illustration of this fact, the 1904 Calendar just issued by The N. K. Fairbank Company is an example. For years, the "Fairy" Calendars of this Company have ranked among the leading annual art creations. but in the present instance, they have fairly outclassed previous efforts.

The Calendar is composed of seven sheets, 10 by 13 inches in size, printed on heavy glazed paper and executed in twelve different colors. The first sheet represents an ideal figure of a young woman who is flanked each side by a broad, wavy blue scroll on which appear the different monthly indices, twelve in all. The other six sheets are devoted to six individual bust studies of young women from the brush of C. Warde Traver, an artist of national repute.

Each head is given a frame effect in imitation of burnt leather, with borders and decorations in L'Art Nouveau (The New Art) which is the latest French treatment for decorative effects and is all the vogue.

Taken altogether, the Calendar is a distinct and remarkably beautiful work of art which should be in the possession of every lover of the "home beautiful."

The new calendar is being given in return for ten oval fronts from Fairy Soap boxes or 25 cents in stamps and can be obtained from The N. K. Fairbank Company, Montreal.

Donahoe's Magazine

NOVEMBER 1903

"The Anti-Emigration Movement," by Alice J. Milligan, opens the November number of DONAHOE'S MAGAZINE. Miss Milligan has studied the question closely, and her conclusions, based on facts, are worthy the close attention of readers. A timely feature, "Cranberry Pickers on Cape Cod," by S. Maria Pickering, describes a popular autumn industry and those who conduct it.

Rev. J. T. Roche, in an interesting article, "Following the Voyagers," opens up a land not frequented by the summer tourist; and Rev. L. C. P. Fox, O. M. L., recalls "Reminiscences of Missionary Life" in England and Scotland. These "Reminiscences" will run through several numbers, and will form a feature of unusual interest, recalling as they do scenes and incidents connected not only with missionary life, but with the great men of the period of which Father Fox writes, such as Wiseman, Newman, Manning, Faber, Father Tom Burk, Father Matthew, Charles Dickens, Pusey, and a great many other distinguished men of the day.

"Hades and Ibsen," by John Talbot Smith, deals with two of the leading plays on the New York stage. Theatre-goers will find this article a decided help in estimating the value of dramas of this class. Edward F. Harkins contributes a sketch of Miss Martha Jackman, "A Friend of Bishop Cheverus," who has lived to see the centennial celebration of the dedication of the first Catholic Church in Boston. R. Carry O'Brien reviews the systems of education in vogue in Ireland during three hundred years, and Rev. Hugh F. Blunt has a striking paper, "A House Divided."

"The Soprano at St. Luke's" is a fascinating story by Lelia Hardin Bugg, and a new contributor, Maud Regan, tells a touching story in "The Passing of Thady."
