

Agriculture.

ALLOW FOR RAINY DAYS.

It is the fault of our young farmers, and not a few older ones, that they plant early in the spring to put too many acres into crop. They go through a careful calculation of how many days work it will require to plow, harrow, plant, and sow a given number of acres, and find there are just days enough before the end of seed time to accomplish it. Now, this making calculation before hand is all very well; but the fault is not making allowance for rainy days. We should always hope for long, bright days of sunshine in farming, as in other pursuits, but it is also the part of prudence to remember that a large proportion of the season of seed time is taken up by rainy days. Not only are there many days when there is rain falling from the clouds, but when it is covering the soil we wish to cultivate.

It would, perhaps, be a safe rule, after a farmer has made his estimate that he can plow and put in crop, say eighty acres—no calculations being made for rainy days and days when the ground is too wet to work—to reduce his estimate one-half. If water in the air and water in the ground will not make this difference in the amount of work done, it is pretty certain that accidents to farm utensils, lamings of the team, or sickness of the farmer himself will make up the difference.

Nor is it in the spring, alone, that allowance must be made for rainy days. We can plow much less corn, secure much less hay, and harvest much less grain than if the ground had always its requisite degree of moisture from some other source than from the clouds. It is wise, then, while laying out for a good summer's work, to take into consideration how we shall be delayed by the causes we have spoken of. It is much better every way not to disturb a good hay field, than to plow it up, and have it covered with weeds, because there is no time to kill them; for weeds and goslings will grow at times when the rain keeps the farmer within doors.—Prairie Farmer.

WHAT THE FARMER MUST KNOW.—The farmer, like the business man, must know what he is doing; he must have some pretty decided ideas of what he is to accomplish—in fact he must calculate it beforehand.

He must know his soil—that of each lot; not only the top, but the sub-soil. He must also know what grain and grasses are adapted to each.

He must know when is the best time to work them, whether they need summer fallowing.

He must know the condition in which ground must be when plowed, so that it be not too wet nor too dry.

He must know that some grains require earlier sowing than others, and what those grains are.

He must know how to put them in. He must know that it pays to have machinery to aid him, as well as muscle. He must know about stocks and manures, and the cultivation of trees and small fruits, and many other things; in a word, he must know what experienced, observing farmers know, to be sure of success. Then he will not guess—will not run such risks.—Rural World.

WHAT FARMERS CANNOT CONCEAL.—A poor farmer cannot conceal the fact that he is a poor farmer. All his surroundings proclaim the verdict against him:—his horses, cattle, waggons, harness, plows, fences, fields—even his wife and children bear silent, but unmistakable evidence against him. On the other hand, all these things will testify favorably on behalf of the good farmer. Every passer by can read the evidence pro or con.—This fact, alone, ought to stimulate every farmer to do his best, for the sake of his own character, as well as interest; for he may rest assured that every passer by will pronounce judgment according to the evidence.

LAZY FARMERS.—Laziness prevents a man from getting off his horse to put up the first rail that gets knocked off the fence, and thro' this lazy neglect a whole field of corn is seriously damaged.

Laziness keeps a man from driving one nail when one would do, and finally costs a carpenter's bill for extensive repairs. Laziness allows a gate to get off the hinges and lie in the mud, or stand propped by rails—or a stable or barn to leak and damage hundreds of dollars worth of provender.

Laziness, in short, is the right and proper name for nine-tenths of the excuses given for bad farming. But by far the most prolific of the many wasters that are due to laziness is the waste of ignorance. But this waste is in itself so great, and has so many ramifications, that we shall have to defer its discussion for another time.—Dixie (Term) Farmer.

ABOUT HORSES.—From the Rochester Union we take the following: "Horses as a general thing, get to much licking and to little feed. If a man loses his hat while driving his horse, he licks the horse to pay for it. If he runs into another wagon through his own carelessness, he licks his horse to make it all right. If his horse slips or tumbles he gets licked for it,—if he does anything he gets licked for it, and if he don't do anything he gets the same. A great many horses know 'a sight' more than their drivers, and if they could change places with them, society at large would be the gainers, and so would horses."

It was an apt answer of a young lady who, being asked where was her native place, replied: "I have none; I am the daughter of a Methodist Minister."

SOFT SOAP.—"Oh dear! Mr. F., you jest when you say my babe is the handsomest you ever saw; you must be soft-soaping." "Well, Madam, I think it needed soap of some kind."

Unfailing Eye Preservers

LAZARUS, MORRIS & Co's, CELEBRATED

Perfected Spectacles AND EYE GLASSES.

The Large and increasing sale of these PERFECTED GLASSES is a sure proof of their superiority. We were satisfied that they would be appreciated here as elsewhere, and that the reality of the advantages offered to wearers of our beautiful lenses, viz.: the ease and comfort, the assured and readily ascertained improvement of the sight, and the brilli tint assista ce they give in all cases, were in themselves so apparent on trial, that the result could not be otherwise than it has, in the almost general adoption of our Celebrated Perfected spectacles by the residents of this locality.

With a full knowledge of the value of the assertion, we claim that they are the most perfect optical aids ever manufactured. In those needing Spectacles, we afford at all times an opportunity of procuring the best and most desirable.
