A Market Waif for Governor.

The Democrats of Connecticut have nominated for governor Thomas M. Waller, ex-mayor of New London and ex-district attorney of New London county. Mr. Waller is a young man, probably not exceeding forty-two years old, and his career is a little remarkable to say the least. He was discovered in Fulton market, New York, a poor little half-clad boy, crying bitterly because he had no home and no money to buy newspapers to sell, and his tears excited the sympathy of Captain Waller of New London a fisherman, who took him on board of his schooner and carried him to his New England home. The boy was bright and although he was scorned by his schoolmates because he was a waif, he marched steadily forward until he was at the head of his classes, and on arriving at the proper age his kind old adopted father sent him to Yale University where he graduated with high honors. After Winnipeg as an Importing Centre.

Winnipeg has already attained the position of the third importing centre of the Dominion. The following table shows the amount received in it each of the three months in the last three years:

	1880.	1881.	1882.
July	$18,750	$49,258	$106,518
August	20,522	52,390	183,828
September	19,400	70,705	203,226
Totals	$58,672	$172,353	$553,572

Grain Yield of California.

The grain yield of California for 1882 is estimated at 50,000,000 bushels, raised on 3,249,030 acres. Except that of Illinois, this is the largest yield of any State in the Union. The yield of Indiana was 46 millions, that of Ohio 40, and that of Minnesota 41 millions. The entire yield of the United States is set down at 526,400,000 bushels. Mr. Larue, President of the New York Agricultural Society, says that the surplus for exportation this year will be from 500,000 to 600,000 tons, but the Journal of Commerce calculates it at 1,134,000 tons.

Captain Scott on the "Asia" Disaster.

Captain Scott attributes the loss of the "Asia" to her being kept on her beam ends by the force of the gale, a result to which her unsuitable construction contributed. The insensibility of both the vessel-owners and the public to the terrible lessons so lately received, and the powerlessness of the officials under present regulations, are illustrated by the circumstance that during Capt. Scott's stay at Collingwood a vessel licensed to carry only 40 passengers left with 150 on board. The report is likely to deal in a pointed and vigorous manner with these abuses—crimes would perhaps be the more appropriate word—and if the people's representatives do their duty, next session will not be suffered to elapse without the enactment of a drastic measure of reform.

The Farmer's Life

There is a quiet about the life of a farmer, and a hope of serene old age, that no other business or profession can promise. A professional man is doomed sometime to feel that his powers are waning. He is doomed to see younger and stronger men pass him in the race of life. He looks forward to an old age of intellectual mediocrity. He will be last where once he was first. But the farmer goes, as it were, into partnership with trees and flowers—he breathes the sweet air of the fields. There is no constant and frightful strain upon his mind. His nights are filled with sleep and rest. He watches his flocks and herds as they feed upon the green and hilly slopes. He hears the pleasant rain fall upon the waving corn, and the trees he planted in youth rustle about him as he plants others for the children yet to be.

The Military Guard of Paris.

The following statement of the military force by which Paris is actually protected from possible surprise will show how empty are the boasts and menaces which have been indulged in at some of the recent Socialist gatherings:—There is a military Governor at the head of an army which is sometimes 80,000 sometimes 70,000 strong, but never under 60,000. This force, with police and gendarmes, and the forts which command the capital, is sufficient to assure tranquility. We see by a recent French return that there are fifteen cavalry and infantry barracks in Paris and fifteen round the enceinte, capable of holding 140,000 men and 15,000 horses. The barracks of the Ecole Militaire, which is the largest, is capable of containing six regiments of cavalry or infantry. Independent of these barracks are five for the use of the Republican Guard and eleven for the fire brigade, which is a semi-military institution.

A Market Waif for Governor.

The Democrats of Connecticut have nominated for governor Thomas M. Waller, ex-mayor of New London and ex-district attorney of New London county. Mr. Waller is a young man, probably not exceeding forty-two years old, and his career is a little remarkable to say the least. He was discovered in Fulton market, New York, a poor little half-clad boy, crying bitterly because he had no home and no money to buy newspapers to sell, and his tears excited the sympathy of Captain Waller of New London a fisherman, who took him on board of his schooner and carried him to his New England home. The boy was bright and although he was scorned by his schoolmates because he was a waif, he marched steadily forward until he was at the head of his classes, and on arriving at the proper age his kind old adopted father sent him to Yale University where he graduated with high honors. After leaving college he adopted the law as his profession, and has been a very successful advocate.

Vanderbilt on Anti-Monopolists.

Mr. Vanderbilt is a judge of human nature. He has gauged accurately by experience the character of nine-tenths of the men who promote independent movements in politics, and he does not hesitate to express his mind freely about them. "When I want to buy up a politician," he says, "I always find an anti-monopolist the most practicable. They don't come so high." The nonchalance with which he talks of buying up politicians is not very complimentary to the public men of the United States, but we are inclined to think that his opinion of the anti-monopolist agitation is not far from the truth. As a rule "independence" in politics is but a flimsy pretext to conceal the fact that the man or party is for sale to the highest bidder. Holding professedly a middle course between two parties, committed to neither, the "independent" man can the more readily place himself where his pecuniary interests receive the highest consideration, and his attitude makes him more easy of approach with a bribe. Mr. Vanderbilt doubtless has had a large experience of politicians, and his testimony of the character of "independent" movements and men in politics is entitled to the greatest respect, because he knows whereof he speaks.—Montreal Gazette.

Five Women Stabbed by a Lunatic.

While Fourteenth street, New York, was crowded last Tuesday with shoppers, a demented Frenchman ran amuck through the thoroughfare, and with a pair of sharpened carpenter's compasses stabbed right and left, his victims being women. The wife of the policeman who patrolled the block was one, and when her husband arrested the lunatic he did not know the compasses were dripping with his wife's blood. The lunatic was Ernest Duborgne, a half idiotic painter, whose antics for years have made him conspicuous. His victims were more or less severely injured. Their names are: Mrs. Stolzenberg, slightly wounded in the shoulders; Louise Schacker, stabbed in the back slightly; Miss M. L. King, stabbed in the abdomen and severely hurt; Mrs. Thomas Worth, stabbed in the side, dangerously; Mary Hanley, the policeman's wife, two stab wounds in the breast, dangerous, perhaps fatal. The lunatic's clothing was spattered with blood. He said he felt dizzy and admitted that he had been drinking. He wore two hats and said he stabbed the women because some man threatened his life. The prisoner, with his father wandered for years through the city bearing painted signs, demanding justice from the California authorities for some wrong His father died in February last.

Fashion Notes.

The fashionable linen collar is a standing military band with a vine of embroidery near the edge.

In fur the coming season the most popular varieties will be coyote, black and pointed, of finest quality. The widths vary from one to three and a half inches.

A large white dove perched on the left side of the hat is a fashionable trimming for autumn hats for young ladies. Smaller birds are used for turbans.

The fancy for birds has extended even to mourning dresses, and the disagreeable fashion is seen of a black raven perched on an English black crape bonnet.

Hussar jackets of cloth, trimmed with braid or with narrow sateen, are the wraps to be worn by young girls during the autumn. Shorter cadet basques, with high military collar, will be worn as parts of house dresses.

Flowers are banished from millinery, and feathers of every kind are to be worn. Cock's feathers will be made to serve in ornamental ways, both for hats and bonnets, while tropical plumage of scarlet, yellow and blue-green will relieve the sombre brown shades of the stylish patridge and pheasant feathers.

Mme. Modjeska wore at a ball recently given in London by an American a pale pink satin skirt under a Madras muslin, embossed with blush roses, descending in a Watteau plait at the back and a sleeveless bodice with two bows, each with innumerable loops and ends, placed on either shoulder, so as to fall over the arms. Her gloves were tan mousquetaire, caught in at the tops with pink satin ribbons.

The Great French Remedy, Dr. LeDuc's Periodical Pills.

These Pills are compounded from the purest drugs, and from those only which are particularly useful for female complaints. They are enclosed in an air tight capsule and their sugar-coated, and by this means made to retain their full strength for years, in any climate. All druggists.
