Report Cause Of Comet Airliner Crashes Found

LONDON (AP)—The Sunday Express says experts have decided that "cabin compression fatigue" caused the series of jet Comet airliner crashes that killed 99 persons.

The paper says the decision came when the cabin of a Comet immersed in water and subjected to six weeks of strain finally blew up last week at the Royal Aircraft Establishment at Farnborough.

These tests were conducted under water to minimize the effects of the expected explosion.

The Express story says scientists testing the grounded planes had suspected from the first that metal fatigue caused by constant expansion and contraction of the pressurized cabins might explain the disastrous crashes.

There was no immediate confirmation of the Express story either from government sources or the de Havilland Aircraft Company which makes the Comets.

Prominent Editor

CP, climaxing many years as a director of the news co-operative, for two vital years—the last year of the Second World War and the first year of the peace.

LUCID SPEAKER

In the field of politics, he served as a Liberal in the Alberta Legislature, the House of Commons and the Senate. He sat on many important Senate committees. As a speaker, he had a direct, lucid and vigorous style.

Senator Buchanan was educated in Ontario. While he never attended college, he became a man of culture, widely read and a patron of the arts. He possessed an extensive library.

He turned to newspaper work early and his enthusiasm for it never waned. It was his proudest boast that he was a working newspaper man, his keenest delight to sit on the "desk" and handle copy. Few could do a faster or more competent job. But his handwriting stymied most printers. He never used a typewriter.

At 16, he got his first job as a printer's devil, an apprentice, on the Peterborough, Ont., Examiner. From there, he went to the Peterborough Review as a cub reporter and in 1899 he moved to Toronto to work on the Toronto Telegram. He moved ahead quickly, soon becoming city editor and later news editor.

HEADED WEST WITH $500

In 1903, he left the Telegram to become managing editor and director of the St. Thomas Journal. After its sale in 1905, he headed west. With $500 in his pocket, he was scouting for a newspaper and he found one in Lethbridge. He purchased a half-interest in the then weekly Lethbridge Herald. Two years later he made it a daily.

Before coming west, he married Alma Maude Freeman of Burlington, Ont., in September, 1903. They had two sons, Donald, author and art critic with the national gallery in Ottawa, and Hugh, an officer in the Royal Canadian Navy during the war and now managing editor of the Herald.

In 1907, he helped found the Western Associated Press and, at the time of his death, was the only founding member still actively engaged in newspaper work.

URGED FREE PRESS

He never failed to lend his weight to the interests of a free press. In 1944, he said the Second World War possibly could have been avoided had news been free in the dictator countries. As CP president, he called upon the Canadian Parliament to declare for a freedom-of-news clause in the peace treaties.

Shortly after his election to the Alberta legislature in 1909 he was appointed minister without portfolio in Premier Rutherford's cabinet but resigned a few months later following a difference with the government on railway policy.

In 1911 he was elected to the House of Commons for Medicine Hat, which then included the Lethbridge area, and won re-election until 1921 when he resigned. Four years later he was appointed to the Senate.

Retired Saint John Merchant Dies

SAINT JOHN, N. B., (CP) — John T. B. Burgoyne, 78, retired merchant and auctioneer, died Saturday. He was formerly well known in the Maritimes as a commercial traveler. J. Bert Burgoyne, assistant managing editor of the Saint John Telegraph-Journal, is a son.

"Open House" At New Motel

Hundreds of people Saturday, took advantage of "open house" at the new Motel Charlottetown operated by Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Rodd. The motel which is the first of its kind to be erected in the Province, was filled to capacity when the visitors arrived, but many of the guests gladly co-operated by allowing their quarters to be viewed. Most complimentary remarks were heard from all sides regarding this latest addition to the Prince Edward Island tourist industry. Among the many interested spectators was Premier A. W. Matheson seen with the proprietor Wally Rodd, while Mrs. Rodd, in dark dress, chats with Mrs. Matheson.—(Photo by Margaret Mallett).

Fort Augustus Edge Summerville

Gerald MacEachern won his own ball game yesterday afternoon with a run in the 11th inning as he pitched the hard fighting Fort Augustus baseball team to an 8-7 triumph over Summerville at the Peake's diamond. It was MacEachern's second straight victory of the season while Billy Cain was credited with the loss.

With Summerville leading the bottom of the 9th, MacEachern scored to put the game into extra innings. In the top of the 11th, D. O'Shea crossed home plate to tie the ball game. Then Phonse Smith smashed out a triple to drive in the winning run. The most spectacular plays of the game were made by Dunn O'Shea and Jimmy Cain.

West Germans Welcome Visit By Princess

By George Boultwood

BONN, (AP)—The visit of Princess Margaret to Bonn next Monday is regarded by the German government as another welcome sign of West Germany's increasing role in world affairs.

The 23-year-old Margaret will be the first member of the British Royal Family to come to the West German capital.

There have been frequent visits by members of the family, such as the Dukes of Edinburgh and Gloucester and the Princess Royal to the British zone since the war. But they have confined themselves to inspecting British troops and paid no official calls on the German authorities.

VISITS PRESIDENT

Margaret, however, begins her visit with a call on West Germany's 70-year-old president, Theodor Heuss. He will be her host at lunch in his official residence on the Rhine bank.

In a statement welcoming the princess on her first visit to Germany, the Adenauer government said her planned call at Bonn demonstrates the federal republic's equal place among the western nations.

The government, recalling that Chancellor Konrad Adenauer had been presented to Queen Elizabeth, said that Princess Margaret's visit is "an honor" which could only result in strengthening German-British friendship.

AMIABLE RELATIONS

The government is striving to win back German sovereignty and the warm statement reflected its pleasure at the royal departure from previous routine when only units of the occupation forces were visited.

The statement stressed German friendly feelings for Britain and "our confidence in her Britain's political wisdom and her widespread and influential position in the world."

After lunching with Heuss the princess takes off in a helicopter for a four-day tour of British and Canadian forces in Germany.

Forming up at the Polly monument, and headed by Piper William Bears the parade of Scarlet Chapter, Black Chapter and Primary Lodges moved into the church where a sermon appropriate to the occasiono was preached by Rev. CANADIAN GUARDS APPEAR MOST POPULAR OF INFANTRY REGIMENTS

OTTAWA, (CP)—On the surface, at least, it appears the Canadian Guards are the most popular of the six infantry regiments in the army And the Royal Canadian Dragoons the more popular of the two armored regiments.

The popularity poll was taken by the army itself, though it would be the last to claim it is any such thing. For official purposes, all army regiments are equally good and popular.

TOLD TO MAKE CHOICE

Anyway, this is how the popularity yardstick was fashioned:

When the Canadian Army regular force was formed in October, 1946, a number of officers of the Royal Canadian Armored Corps and Royal Canadian Infantry Corps were taken on strength. During the Second World War, these officers had served in various units not now included in the active force.

When they took up staff appointments or specialist duties in the post-war army, they continued to wear the badges and uniforms of the units with which they had been associated during the war.

In February, the army directed that all regular-force officers must wear the badges and uniforms of active force regiments or corps. Forty-four armored corps and 142 infantry corps officers were affected.

These 186 officers were asked to state a preference for a regiment, listing their first three choices. Though remaining in their present staff posts, they would wear the insignia of the regiment to which they were assigned and, in normal circumstances, continue their connection with that regiment throughout their service careers.

The army didn't promise that each officer would be assigned to the first regiment of his choice, or even the second or third. But it said it would do its best.

HOW OFFICERS DECIDED

The assignments now have been completed, the army said today. This is the breakdown:

Of the 44 armored corps officers, 28 have been assigned to the Royal Canadian Dragoons and 16 to Lord Strathcona's Horse.

Of the 142 infantry officers, 61 have been assigned to the Canadian Guards; 34 to the Black Watch; 26 to the Queen's Own Rifles; nine to the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry; nine to the Royal Canadian Regiment, and three to the Royal 22nd Regiment.

The Guards, though formed only nine months ago, take precedence over the other five infantry regiments.

The army said the Blatch Watch and Queen's Own, brought back on active service last October, and the Guards possibly needed more officers than the other three regiments.

HALIFAX (CP) — The army steps down today from it traditional job of firing the noon gun atop Halifax Citadel hill.

Now that the old fortified hill has been turned into a historic site, the job is being handed over to a gun crew of commissionaires who perform security duty.

To add to the color of the event, the crew will be dressed in the uniform of the commissionaires of the Victorian period.

The gun, specially fitted for the purpose, is one of the type used in the South African war and for Canadian army training purposes up to about 1930.

Island Scenes Of Rare Beauty On Display At City Studio Draw Favorable Comment

...l even dozen asso... ...d views, finished in natural color, present an arresting display under the spotlight in Craswell's Studio window.

The pictures showen are but a fraction of the assortment from which a visitor or any lover of Island scenes, may select a faithful reproduction of a beauty spot which may have proved impressive.

The color and shade effects produced are the result of careful study under varied conditions of sunlight and shadows and bring out with startling clarity the vivid contrasts of red soil, green foliage and river or stream water colors.

A wide range of subjects are dealt with in this splendid assortment of pictures which are hand colored and properly treated to withstand the ordinary ravages of time, and in fact become mellow with age.

These gems of photographic art are suitably framed and titled with neatly executed plaques and should prove a most desirable souvenir of a visit to the Island, a valued gift to take home to a friend or a constant reminder to any Islander that here we may justly claim to live in Canada's Garden Province.

Craswell Photo Studio pictures brought world-wide publicity for the Island during the war years when airmen in training sent them to relatives and friends in all allied countries.
