A Bride for a Day.

A FRENCH HUSBAND'S SUICIDE THE DAY AFTER HIS MARRIAGE.

A suicide of a very extraordinary character has made a great sensation in the busy quarters of the Faubourg du Temple, Paris. A marriage was celebrated between a respectable clerk, who had the reputation of being steady and industrious, and the daughter of a tradesman, who was remarkably pretty and bore an excellent character. After the marriage the bride and groom, accompanied by the wedding party, proceeded to the house of the bride's father, in the rue Saint Maur, where a dejeuner was partaken of and afterwards dancing was kept up until midnight, when, according to the custom of the petite bourgeoisie, the bride was kissed by all present and retired with her husband to her new home near by. The next day at noon the father of the bride called to ask the young couple to dine with him. They both appeared in capital spirits and consented, the husband asking his bride to go with her father, and the daughter took their departure, but when the husband did not join them, they returned to the house after a time, and found an excited crowd around a cab. The bride, with a horrible instinct of impending evil, rushed to the vehicle and found her husband lying on the seat, shot through the head. Beside him lay a letter—"I am resolved. I write this on the Boulevard de Sebastopol. I have hired a cab, and hope I shall not miss my aim." The suicide is an inexplicable mystery. The bride can supply no clue, and she is almost beside herself with grief.

Remarkable Rescue from the Sea.

PICKED UP IN THE ENGLISH CHANNEL AND CARRIED TO NEWFOUNDLAND.

A most remarkable story has just been received by telegraph from St. George's Bay, on the west coast of Newfoundland. As the story goes, a French vessel arrived there on the 19th bound from St. Malo to Port-au-Choix. A call was made at St. George's Bay for the purpose of landing Miss Louise Journeaux, who, it is said, was picked up in an open boat at sea, about twenty miles off the island of Jersey. The lady, with a gentleman named Farnie, went boating after leaving church on Sunday evening, April 18th. While rowing, her companion let one oar slip, and in attempting to recover it lost the other. Being a good swimmer he instantly jumped overboard to recover the oar. The wind meanwhile was freshening and there was a strong current setting from the land. The boat drifted beyond his reach and he was compelled either to swim for the land or sink. He chose the former alternative. Miss Journeaux, alone in the boat, drifted to sea. The boat almost filled with water, and for forty hours she lived in solitary agony. At length she was rescued by the French vessel, on board of which she was kindly cared for by the captain and officers. The violent off-shore wind prevented the Frenchman from reaching Jersey, and the lady was carried across the Atlantic to Newfoundland. Farnie reached St. Hilaires harbor safely, but the story that he told was disbelieved. People from the shore affirmed that they heard cries of murder from sea. Farnie was arrested and indicted for homicide. His liberation now, of course, is certain. Miss Journeaux having cabled her marvellous escape.

The Queen and Canada.

A London cable of the 22nd says: The Queen made a visit to the Colonial and Indian exhibition to-day and very carefully inspected the Canadian court. Her Majesty was accompanied by the Prince of Wales, Princess Beatrice, the Duchess of Albany and Princess Louise of Lorne. Her Majesty was received at the Canadian court by Lord Lorne, Sir Charles Tupper and Lady Tupper. A bouquet was presented to the Queen by Lady Tupper. The executive commissioner explained the various exhibits, and the Queen expressed herself as greatly interested in and gratified with the evidences of Canada's wonderful progress. In passing through the court Her Majesty noticed a portrait of Sir John Macdonald and said she learned with much satisfaction that he had recovered from his recent illness. Her Majesty made purchases from the furs exhibited by Renfrew of Quebec and the Hudson's Bay Company. Special attention was given by the royal visitors to the game and agricultural trophies, educational and geological exhibits and the display of agriculture machinery. Before leaving the Queen expressed a desire that the public should know how much she admired the Canadian court and how greatly she was interested in the Canadian exhibits. The general public were excluded from the court during the time the royal party were present.

Bright and Gladstone.

John Bright, though now 74, is still regarded as the greatest orator, the Demosthenes of the House. His wonderful voice still retains in age much of its delightful music, and his periods are full of the same pure and vigorous English as those of Milton, on which he has founded himself, and a copy of whose "Paradise Lost" he carries, as the best loved companion, always with him. But then, as he himself says, Gladstone speaks without preparation as many eloquent words in one night as he does in a whole season. He takes three months to prepare one of his orations, recites it carefully, like Macaulay, again and again, and studies every attitude and intonation.

Thought She Was Free.

MRS. SHARP MARRIES MR. McCANN, AND IS ARRESTED DURING THE HONEYMOON.

Sarah McCann and Edward McCann have been arrested at Portland, Me., on a charge of bigamy. Mrs. McCann is about 20 and has had a varied matrimonial experience. She was first married to a man named Sharp. He died, and she was then married to one Daniel Harrison, of St. John, N. B., with whom she lived, for some time. He grew tired of her and told her that he had made up his mind "to put her away, that he should marry someone else, and that she could do the same after she had been gone from his house a year." Sarah seems to have honestly supposed that all Daniel had to do in order to break the ties that bound them was to say "I divorce you," and so she left him and went to Portland. After two and one-half years' separation from her husband, and after, as she supposed, having been for a year and a half free to marry, she accepted the offer of Edward McCann, and last Wednesday the two were made one. McCann says he had heard about Dan Harrison, but supposed Mrs. Harrison was free to marry again. Both of the parties are natives of Prince Edward Island.

Fatal Stolen Ride.

AWFUL FATE OF A DEAD BEAT—A CANADIAN KILLED IN NEW YORK.

A despatch from Silver Creek, N. Y., says that on the last section of a Lake Shore freight train passing there at one o'clock on the 19th, were three tramps stealing a ride. Two miles west they were discovered by the brakeman, who ordered them off. They begged to be allowed to remain until the train stopped, but he told them with an oath to get off or he would kick them off. Two of them alighted safely, but the third fell under the wheels. His left foot was taken nearly off, his right foot badly bruised, the left hip lacerated, left shoulder terribly crushed, and his head cut. He appeared to be about eighteen years of age, and gave his name as Edward Brown, of Dunnville, Ont. He said he was working toward Chicago, where he had a brother. He had a bundle of clothes with him and about $10 in money. His wounds were dressed, and he was to have been removed to Buffalo, but died before the train started. The remains will be sent to Dunnville, where the young man's parents reside.

War Clouds.

Thomas Power O'Connor, M. P., cables as follows from London: European affairs are thrusting themselves once more into the foreground. The Czar's war threatening speech, the Bulgarian conspiracy against Prince Alexander, with its Russian complications, and the Turco-Greek collisions reported, contradicted and finally affirmed, all combine to make a strong impression among persons familiar with the secret springs of European action that the year 1886 will end in a great war, possibly the greatest of the century. The Czar's speech is especially noteworthy. Read between the lines it gives expression to a feeling of profound wrath at the gradual slipping away of the Christian population in the southeast from the Russian grasp. The Czar sees the traditional policy of the empire imperilled and the authority of Russia defied by principalities for which the last Turkish war was fought, and so much blood and treasure expended. Though for a moment peace has been patched up, the near future is pregnant with terrible possibilities.

A Calm View.

The Portland Argus of the 21st says: "Although the Dominion authorities may have been harsh and violent in taking advantage of the provisions of the treaty, there is no reason why we should fly into a passion. This talk about an embargo, of which New England has had one sad experience, is premature. The bombast about arming our vessels and with twelve good men scuttling the British navy are the utterances of captains of courtesy, who cannot distinguish the smell of gunpowder from the scent of violets, and whose knowledge of navigation is confined to the placid waters of Portland harbor. It is extremely silly. We should insist upon our rights with calmness, dignity and firmness through the ordinary channels of diplomatic intercourse. The talk of war, whether made in Canada or this country, is the talk of demagogues or fools. The question will be settled by argument and address and not by men-of-war."

A Perfect Baby.

Old Bachelor (to young mother)—The baby is rather small of its age?
Young Mother (hesitatingly)—Ye-es, rather.
Old Bachelor—No teeth yet?
Young Mother (falteringly)—N-no, not yet.
Old Bachelor—Legs a little bowed?
Young Mother (doubtfully)—Er-a trifle, perhaps.
Old Bachelor—Nose small for the rest of its face?
Young Mother (uncertainly)—Ye-es, but it will grow.
Old Bachelor—Cries most of the time?
Young Mother (dubiously)—It cries a little.
Old Bachelor—Well, if the baby possesses all these defects why do you call it the sweetest, nicest, dearest, loveliest, and most beautiful baby in the world? Huh!
Young Mother (triumphantly)—Because it is. So there! You mean old thing.
