TO GET VOTES?

The flop of the McKinley Administration to Russia has made a lively sensation. It is said, privately, but on good authority, that this is one of several surprises which the Republicans have in store to obtain votes. The outlook for re-election of the President has been somewhat dubious, and heroic measures are necessary to bolster up his drooping fortunes.

An alliance with Russia has never been popular with the business interests of the country, notwithstanding the fact that Russia has aided the United States on several occasions, because Russia's policy is to shut up everything and keep all the trade for herself, but partnership with any power against England is popular with the Irish faction, which is more powerful than any other politics, particularly in the doubtful States. Hence, the milk in the cocoanut.

Secretary of War Root is credited with engineering the flop and practically discrediting the Secretary of State, the Hon. John Hay.

Mr. Hay's resignation is among the probabilities. His sympathies are entirely with England in the Far Eastern question, and his dislike of Russia and things Russia is pronounced.

Mr. Hay's health has not been good for some time, but the recent turn of affairs at Washington during his enforced absence has operated seriously and accounts for his relapse.

McKinley's backers believe that the Russian coup will create a furore throughout the country, and that as a result the President will gain many votes. From now until election day a general fusillade against England may be expected.

COSTLY PRESTIGE.

The Transvaal war is now calculated by experts to have cost each great London daily paper about £60,000 ($300,000). This includes the pay of correspondents, dislocation of office work, and loss in advertisements. Additional sales do not count for much, asserts 'Vanity Fair,' in any case; often they are an actual expense. 'Prestige' is the raison d'ete of the whole.

A Japanese Christian minister, writing of the divorces in Japan during a recent year, says there were 358,389 marriages and 116,775 divorces.

The Lonnon Chronicle's poet sums up the Dewet difficulty very nicely:

Theer's a small outstanding trifle we is anxshus for ter get.
 A commander like lawst Monday—for 'is nime it is D. Wet.
 We draws a cordong round 'im an' we draws it jolly tight,
 We sets beside him 'im all the dye, we watch 'im all the night;
 But when we goes ter pinch 'im thet slim beggar cawn't be found—
 E's flowed orf in a war berloon or slipped down through the ground
 "Not quite yet,
 Says D. Wet.

Es a ot un at retreatin gittin routed e enjoys,
 Bein drove from is persitions is a bliss as never cloys;
 The wye weve bi: an conquered im, it as a glor: look,
 But es no enthoosyasm, it appears, fur bein took;
 And es read them lines of poetry whart says blokes as runs awey
 Is likely ter be andy fur a scrap some other dye—
 "Thet you bet,
 Says, D. Wet.
 But yer goin' on a plyn' when the bloomin gime is done,
 An' thet is—when the game is war—a costly kind of fun.
 Yer knows yer country orf by 'eart and in and out yer steals;
 Yer jest about as dodgy as a barrer-load of eels;
 Theer's tin e is bein' cut ter wyste, theer's men and money dropped,
 But thet don't alter of the end—includin' you, sir, copped;
 Don't forget
 That, D. Wet.

While General Chaffe was watering his horse at a stream under the wall of Tung Chow, the Russians found a feeble old man hidden in the mud, except his nose, and dragged him out by the queue, shouting gleefully. They impaled him on their bayonets. General Chaffe remarked "That is not war. It is brutal murder." American officers at Taku, days after the fighting was finished, saw Russians bayonet children and throw old men into the river, clubbing them to death when they tried to swim. The Russians killed women who knelt before them and begged for mercy.

LANGUISTS WANTED FOR CHINA.

One of the chief difficulties with which Gen. Gaselee will have to extend in the coming China campaign is that of intelligently transmitting his orders to the troops of the allied forces co-operating with him. Accordingly, there is a large demand at present for officers of linguistic attainments, and those who have spent their leisure in acquiring French and German, instead of polo and bridge, are reaping the reward of their self sacrifice. Already eleven "special service" officers have been sent from India who know French, German, or Russian fluently, and those who have been provided with staff appointments. Still, high as are the linguistic attainments of these officers, we fancy that even the most capable among them will experience more than a little difficulty in giving such commands as, 'Move to the right in fours and 'Patade—Shon! in a manner that can be readily understood by a mixed, contingent.—Westminster Gazette.

The British War Office is being unmercifully chaffed at present, and indeed it can hardly be considered to have added much to its laurels in the Transvaal war. A member of Parliament called it the other day "an admirable institution for everything except war," and it has been further flatly described in the same august body as a mere "system of outdoor relief for the British aristocracy." "The British officer may be clever, but he must be heavy," adds Major Rasch, who calls this "the survival of the fittest," and a want of "slimness" is the obvious remark that follows. But the most serious statement is made by the Cork Examiner, which says that the threatened French descent on Ireland "has set the War Office thinking." "This libel," says The Daily Chronicle, "if supported by corroborative evidence, should be at once looked into."

No Butler For Him.

There is a wealthy but very hard headed citizen of Detroit who has no hesitancy in telling this story on himself:
 "If there's anything on earth grinds me it is to plunge into the social swim. I'd far rather plunge into an ice cold bath. One of these here steel pen coats makes me want to go out and hide in the hayloft, and a standin collar puts me into a grouch for a week after I've worn it.

"But you know how women are. They'll stand right by you when livin is up hill work, skimp, hustle and save, but once they get money they want a show for it, and the bigger the show the better. Things sorter come my way in pine, and I cleaned up a neat little pile. I just grinned at carriages, horses, a coachman, a lot of servants a snookin round the house, receptions, theater parties and all that sort of thing.

"But when they rung in a genuine butler on me I had a warm conversation with mamma and the girls. It didn't do a mite of good. They talked me clean off my feet, and the butler came. I could have got away passably with the president of the United States, but that fellow, stiff backed, high headed, looking superiorlike and never smilin 'less it was to stab you, riled me awful. One day while sittin in the library I heard him tell one of the maids he was goin to resign. 'What for?' she asked. 'The last lady as called took me for the barbarian'—that's me.

"For years I dealt with raftsmen and lumbermen. I paid his bill for six weeks in the hospital, and his wages too. We keep no butler."—Detroit Free Press.

JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT

An old lady called at a store and asked for a bottle of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment; the clerk said "they were out, but could supply her with another just as good." The engaging smile that accompanied this information was frozen stiff when she replied: "Young Man, there is only one Liniment, and that is Johnson's."

Originated in 1810 by an old Family Physician. There is not a remedy in use which has the confidence of the public to a greater extent. Could a remedy have existed for nearly a century, except that it possess extraordinary merit?

WOUNDED DOG.

(From the London 'Referee.')
 After the battle of Spion Kop on the 24th inst., the writer was assisting at one of the ambulance waggons attached to an irregular corps. While dressing the wounded we had noticed a nice liver-colored pointer lying down some fifty yards away. He waited patiently until the last sufferer had been attended to and despatched to the field hospital, then walked up to us, and with a whine held up one of his forepaws, which, on examination, proved to have received a bullet wound. Needless to say the poor beast received the attention he so plainly asked for, after which he lay down quietly under our waggon. There are many witnesses who will vouch for the above story.
