

STOP LOOK READ

All along we have been trying to tell all you people what A.C.T. is. There have been posters put up and a radio commercial. Now, we have asked two ordinary, run-of-the-mill students who have taken part in an A.C.T. weekend to write a letter to say what their impressions of A.C.T. are. All we can say is that we think A.C.T. is a good thing, that you definitely won't feel you have wasted the weekend and that everyone who possible can should go on an A.C.T. weekend. Think about it but also act on it and fill out the accompanying application form.

asked me if I was going I said no. I knew I wasn't the type for that religious stuff. I had visions of people all around trying to convert me to Roman Catholicism, and that was something I could do without. Being a Protestant himself, he convinced me that A.C.T. was nondenominational and assured me that no one would try to drive anything down my throat. To make a long story short, I went and he was right. There are Roman Catholic overtones all right, but nothing to get alarmed about.

A.C.T. is made up of students like you and me who want to find out a little more about this

Dear Fellow Student,
Many of you have probably seen the posters around the campus announcing the arrival of A.C.T. VI. I am writing this to try to explain what A.C.T. (Adult Christian Thinking) is all about and to answer some of the questions that might pop into your head about A.C.T. weekends in general.

Last year when my roommate, who was on a previous A.C.T. weekend,

"Christian living" stuff. A.C.T. is just thoughts presented in the form of talks by your average student. A.C.T. is not intended to convert anyone to anything. A.C.T. is a great way to not only meet some new people, but also to make new friends. Naturally it does have a serious vein to it, but a little heavy thinking never did anyone any harm. Don't get the wrong idea - there is also an ample supply of music, skits and myself is what I value most from ACT.

Being a confused and disoriented freshman (like many of us are) the weekend proved very helpful to me. But I know everyone can benefit from an ACT weekend as much as I did. There were perhaps thirty students there which is certainly nothing to boast about. What is it that turns students off? Do they envision long-gowned pious smiling, angelic-looking creatures engaged in perpetual prayer? Friends, laughter, skits, discussions, good music and learning....that's what Christianity is all about. What more can one ask for?

Yours truly,
A shy student

Dear Fellow Student,
When I think of the last ACT weekend held before Christmas, there are many things that come to mind.

To tell you what it's all about -- impossible! Crazy skits, good music, good food and companionship -- these are some of the things I remember most. But for me, the opportunity to level with others or just sit by myself and do some serious thinking about
