

Grains of Gold.

Naught venture, naught have. Ignorance never settles a question. What makes life dreary is want of motive.

Fortune can take away riches, but not courage.

Whilst you seek new friendships, cultivate the old.

He who knows most grieves most for wasted time.

A pleasing countenance is a silent commendation.

Small cheer and great welcome makes a merry feast.

To see what is right and not do it is want of courage.

No man was ever written out of reputation but by himself.

It is well to be witty: one often has a silly thing to say.

Those who plot the destruction of others often fall themselves.

The greatest of all faults, I should say, is to be conscious of none.

In almost everything, experience is more valuable than precept.

Knowledge is acquired not by long life, but by close observation.

If you wish to remove a vice you must remove its mother—luxury.

Charity and personal force are the only investments worth anything.

Philosophy is a good horse in the stable, but an arrant jade on a journey.

Recollection is the only paradise from which we cannot be turned out.

Moderation is the silken string running through the pearl chain of all virtues.
