MAKING ICE CREAM.

Here is Paying Business For Creamery Men and Dairymen.

The first Saturday's sale of ice cream this year brought $22,89 from cream that if made into butter would have brought $5.59. This ice cream trade has developed from a small beginning and was the outcome of a desire to find a milk product that would yield better returns than butter.

Mr. Edward Manchester gives the credit for starting the business to his daughter-in-law. She first suggested that pure cream of uniform grade and flavor would be sure to sell. Accordingly they began to freeze cream, and a room was opened in town for retail or wholesale trade. The first season one of the sons, George E., and his wife went to town and conducted the room themselves. From that beginning the business has grown every year, for the cream has advertised itself wherever it has been sold.

This ice cream is pure cream, sugar and flavoring. The milk, as it comes from the barn in cans, is set in a tank of spring water, which stands at about 40 degrees winter and summer. The cream is skimmed in 12 hours. To a gallon of cream a pint of sugar is added, with flavoring extract to suit the taste. No fruit extracts are used, but the pure fruit is cut up in an Enterprise meat chopper and stirred directly into the cream. There is no great amount of heating, stirring and frothing, as is the case when a custard is made and named "cream."

The freezing is done in a side room of the creamery. The icehouse is close at hand, and everything is kept as clean as scouring and steam will make it. Shafting from the engine is run overhead, so that four freezers can be run at once. This shafting is homemade, like many other contrivances about the place. Freezers of four or five gallons capacity are used. They were formerly run by hand, but now the engine does all the turning. The mixed cream, sugar and flavoring are put into the freezer and the cover fitted on in the usual way.

A cake of ice is brought in from the icehouse, broken by striking it with the flat side of the ax and then crushed with a maul. This is done in a movable box or frame placed on the floor. The freezer is put in the tub and surrounded with ice and salt. Then the belt is attached, and the freezer slowly revolves. The point is to have the turning stop at just the proper time. An experienced hand can tell by the way the freezer turns when to stop, but a beginner is liable to get it wrong unless he examines it from time to time. After the cream has reached the proper consistency the dasher is removed and the can is packed in ice and salt all ready for shipping. Neapolitan cream is made by spreading layers of different flavors in a tin box and then freezing it all together.

There is not much that is new about making ice cream, because thousands of farmers make it at home for their own use. There ought really to be an ice cream freezer in every family that supports a cow. There are details about freezing and handling the cream that a careful man will pick up by experience. There are several good reasons for Mr. Manchester's success. He uses nothing but absolutely pure cream—no milk, eggs or starch. This cream, when frozen, does not show such a firm and solid body as the starch creams, but customers soon overlook that when they once get a taste of it. The pure, fresh cream taste is something that drives customers back for more. As a matter of fact, such cream is a better and more agreeable medicine than cod liver oil or other substances that depend upon fats for their chief benefit.

Our belief is that there are hundreds of farmers in this country who might find in ice cream a new and profitable source of income. As a rule we think that this business will pay best near smaller towns and cities, where there are no large ice cream factories, and where more or less cream is imported. We would advise a small beginning. Make nothing but pure cream of the finest quality and establish a reputation for making uniform goods. Get a few customers first among friends and let them advertise your product. Finally you can either open a room of your own or make arrangements with some near dealer to sell your cream at retail. In this same place you can sell milk, pot-cheese, butter and eggs. To be successful requires cleanliness, promptness, shrewdness and business tact, but we feel confident that Mr. Manchester's success may be duplicated in 1,000 towns in this country. Why cannot you be one of the 1,000 dairymen to share in such success?—Cor. Rural New Yorker.

SPECTACLES.

Over twenty-five years I have been in the Spectacle business and during that time have fitted hundreds and hundreds of persons. Some had put off getting glasses so long that they could not see a large 4 inch letter A without going within 2 or 3 feet of it, and might have gone blind if they had put off getting glasses much longer. Others have been fitted or rather misfitted, with wrong glasses by travellers, and charged a great deal more than they ought to have been. This year our traveller, Mr. C. H. White, intends calling on parties at their homes in the country, to test eyes and show samples of our goods. Should he call on you I bespeak for him your favorable consideration, and any order you may give him will be filled as soon as possible and guaranteed by me. Glasses can also be exchanged at the store, CAMERON BLOCK, City, if after a trial they do not prove as satisfactory as you wish.
