SALVATION ARMY TROUBLES.—The ending of the cases at Augusta, growing out of the seizure of drums from the Salvation Army by the officers, which is a victory for the marshal and throws the costs of the suits on the army, will doubtless end litigation in similar cases, not only in Augusta, but against other towns and cities that prevented street parades with drums. Perhaps now it would be a good idea for the police to suppress the nuisance in this city.—Bangor Commercial.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. Harrison, assisted by Rev. Job Shenton. The bridesmaid was Miss Minnie Welsh, of Summerside, and the groomsmen Mr. J. E. Evans, of this city. There was a large number of guests present, and the wedding gifts were both numerous and valuable.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT

The Fishery Treaty.

SIR CHARLES SPEAKS A SPLENDID EFFORT.

OTTAWA, April 10.

After routine, Sir CHARLES TUPPER rose to move the second reading of the bill ratifying the fishery treaty. He was received with loud applause, and commenced with the treaty of Paris in 1783, tracing the history of the controversy over our fisheries down to the present time. The rights given the Americans under the treaty of 1783 were abnormal, such as one nation does not ordinarily extend to another. They gave rise to irritation. After the war of 1812, Great Britain refused to renew them. No agreement could be reached at the treaty of Ghent, but the United States, finding that Great Britain was inexorable in her determination not to renew the liberties granted in 1783, came to terms, the result being the treaty of 1814. That treaty settled a number of points, but it did not bring peace. American fishermen were seized for trespassing in Canadian waters and irritation still continued. This led to the renewal of negotiations culminating in the Reciprocity Treaty of 1854. During the continuance of that Treaty all went well. It was a good treaty for both countries, and it was unfortunate for both countries that it terminated.

Sir Charles discussed at considerable length the causes of that treaty's abrogation, and showed that it was the result of a grave misapprehension in the minds of the politicians of the United States. They blamed Canada for sympathizing unduly with the South. With the abrogation of the treaty of 1854 new troubles arose over the fisheries. Peter Mitchell's navy was fitted out and began to play havoc among the American fishing schooners, fresh irritations were the natural result. Then came fresh negotiations, resulting in the treaty of Washington. When the Washington Treaty was terminated the Government of Canada was forced to revert to the policy pursued when Peter Mitchell was Minister of Marine. The result of this policy was to give fresh cause of offence. The result was the passage of the Edmunds Retaliatory Act or nonintercourse act, as it should be called. After the so-called Retaliatory Act had passed, he (Sir Charles) visited Washington, and had an interview with Secretary Bayard. The result of that interview was a proposal by Bayard to the British Government to appoint a commission, and the British Government appointed Chamberlain, West and himself their commissioners. When on the commission the Canadians, as they had always done, urged strongly and persistently that the fishery disputes should be settled on the basis of a treaty similar to those of 1854 and 1871. They were met by a point blank refusal. He read the offer he made.

Mr. Mills.—That is an unrestricted offer. Sir Charles.—Yes, and I intended it to be unrestricted. The air in Canada was full of cries as to what the Americans would do, and we made an offer that left it perfectly free to them to say just what they would do. Their answer was that they would not make any kind of a commercial treaty with us—that it was waste of time to talk of such a thing. He then took up the treaty, pointing out that in defining it he labored under the disadvantage of having his words quoted to-morrow in the American Senate, to prevent its adoption by that body. He must, therefore, be extremely guarded, and hoped the Opposition would patriotically abstain from pressing him too hard. He went through the treaty clause by clause, explaining each and pointing out the bearings.

He resumed at 9.45 o'clock, amid loud and prolonged applause, having spoken for four hours. Mr. Davies followed.

THE HALIFAX CASE.

FOUND GUILTY.

HALIFAX, April 10.

After being out six hours the jury brought in a verdict of guilty against Wm. Preper for murdering Peter Doyle, with a recommendation to mercy, and acquitting Mrs. Doyle of being accessory to the crime.

Quebec News.

MONTREAL, April 10.

Father Lamonde, of St. Dorothy Parish, County Laval, who, it seems, is disliked by his congregation, was waylaid on Sunday night by about a dozen men, carried by force to the city, and taken before the Archbishop, who, however, refused to give them a hearing. The priest has taken action for assault against the parties.

Dr. Lavaller, Legislative Councillor, accused of forgery, has been formally committed to stand trial at the Queen's Bench. At a meeting of the Road Committee of the City Council to-day, "the City Surveyor was ordered to proceed with the cleaning of the streets, and a large force of laborers was set to work. The citizens' indignation meeting is therefore cancelled.

Movement of Troops.

MASSOWAH, April 10.

The Italian troops, which are to return to Europe, will commence to embark on Friday. The corps of occupation consisting of 5,600 men will remain behind. The heat is intense. No Abyssinian forces can be seen.

Friendly Relations.

LONDON, April 10.

In the Commons this afternoon, the Speaker read a letter from Count Von Hatzfeldt, German ambassador, stating that the German Reichstag had unanimously resolved that the vote of sympathy adopted by the House of Commons on the occasion of Emperor William's death, and elicited from the Germans the deepest sympathy and liveliest gratitude, constitutes a signal proof of the friendly relations that exist between the two peoples. (Cheers followed the reading of the letter).

Temperance Movements.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., April 10.

The Paris Presbytery to-day passed a resolution in favor of temperance, and calling on the people to maintain and force existing prohibitory laws and to work towards preparing the community for a general prohibitory measure. Strong regret was expressed at the un-presbyterian act of some members of another Presbytery whereby the Supreme Court of the Church was virtually censured, and men engaged in the liquor business made to rejoice.

Echoes of the Execution.

MILLMAN'S FAREWELL LETTERS TO THE JAIL OFFICIALS—A YOUNG WOMAN'S EFFORTS—THE GALLOWES TAKEN DOWN—SHERIFF CURTIS COMPLIMENTED.

After the chain was removed from Millman's ankle yesterday morning, he said good-bye to those who were in the cell with him and asked to see Mr. Harvie and Mr. McNeill. When Mr. Harvie came in Millman handed him a letter, and the men held each other's hands in a long, firm grasp as they said "good-by." The unfortunate man at the same time thanked him for his kindness. Millman had a great regard for Mr. McNeill, and his parting with the latter was most touching. The two strong men put their arms around each other's necks, and overcome by their feelings, sobbed their last farewell. Millman also gave Mr. McNeill a letter which we subjoin:

CHARLOTTETOWN, April 9th, 1888.

DEAR MR. McNEILL:

I write to leave one last message for you, to thank you for being so kind to me. You were kind to me ever since I came here. I could always see in your face you were sorry for me. God has given you a kind heart. May He bless and keep you always. And, oh, my dear friend, if I may call you so, do give your heart to God. You don't know the rest and peace which comes to those who lean on Him. Good-bye for ever in this world.

Yours truly, WILLIAM MILLMAN.

Mr. Harvie's letter was as follows: CHARLOTTETOWN, April 9th, 1888.

DEAR MR. HARVIE:

I write a last word to bid you good-bye, and once more to tell you how sorry I am for what I did. It was very good and kind of you to forgive me, and I hope God has forgiven me. Thank you very much for all your kindness to me.

Yours truly WILLIAM MILLMAN.

Later on the afternoon of Friday last a young woman approached the front entrance to the jail and began looking into the lower windows. Occasionally she would murmur in an audible tone "Poor Millman; I'll soon set you free." Failing to obtain a glimpse of the condemned man there she walked around to the gate on the Richmond street side. She began pressing against this gate, and murmuring "Poor Millman; if I had a couple of good men with me here, how soon we could break down this old gate and liberate you. Poor Millman!" She continued pushing and muttering for some time, until finally one of the officials, who had been watching her movements, appeared on the scene and frightened her away.

Sheriff Curtis has been congratulated by many of our citizens upon the manner in which the mournful event which took place yesterday morning was conducted.

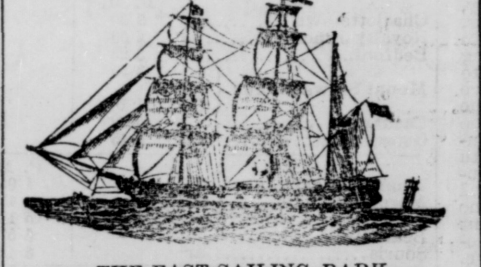

Millman's clothing and other effects are all packed up and are now in the jail office awaiting the arrival of some of his relatives. The gallows was taken down to-day.
