Political Meeting at Fort Augustus.

A largely attended meeting was held in Fort Augustus School room on the evening of the 2nd inst. Mr. Lucius O. Kelly was elected Chairman and the undersigned Secretary.

William Welsh, Esq., was the first to address the meeting. He said he had been selected by a large and influential Delegation of the Liberal Party as a candidate to fill the seat made vacant in the County by Mr. Brecken's acceptance of Postmaster.
It was with reluctance he accepted the nomination as he was past the meridian of life and almost retired from active politics.
But as he was the unanimous choice of such a large and intelligent body he acquiesced with the clear understanding that he would be no subsequent follower of any party but a free lance in the interest of his constituency and Country. He thought our rights as a Province had been shamefully neglected by the Dominion Government with regard to steam communication, the piers, and many other important particulars. All these, if elected, he would endeavor to remedy. He lived in the County for more than half a century and in his public business had intercourse with many, and he defied any man to show where he ever deviated one iota from the path of honor and good-fellowship. If elected, he hoped at the end of his term to be able to come and look them squarely in the face, and show them that he did his part honorably, conscientiously and faithfully.

Dr. Jenkins was the next speaker. He thanked the electors for the large and cordial support they gave him at the General Election, 1882. He reviewed at length the general policy of the Liberal Conservative party, and showed that the Government of Sir John is the political panacea for the Dominion of Canada. His ideas were in full accord with the principles of the National Policy.
He believed the Dominion Government would grant us our rights if properly sought and formally demanded. If elected they would find in him a persistent advocate for justice. He repudiated Mr.
Welsh's assumed independence when it is a notorious fact that he is the nominee of concentrated British. It was only a ruse to trap the unwary. Supposing Mr.
Welsh were elected, which was quite improbable, he would be utterly powerless in a weak and divided opposition.

The learned Doctor was well received and his remarks were listened to with marked attention.

Hon. L. H. Davies followed with a lengthy and really eloquent review of the Sir John administration, and his judghanded and monopolizing policy.

Hon. D. Ferguson replied in a very able and masterly manner. He contrasted the wise and statesmanlike career of the present Government with the five years of Greit extravagance and misrule. He showed where Mr. Davies' assertions lacked the essential, strongly recommended Dr. Jenkins as a gentleman of fine intellect, indomitable perseverance, great tact, and many other qualities which command esteem. He would be a power to the Government and an honor to the country.

Henry Beer, Esq., M. P. P., thanked the electors for their support at the last local election. He thought our roads and bridges were shamefully neglected by the present local administration, and requested his friends and supporters to record their votes for Mr. Wm. Welsh on the 19th inst.

Donald A. McDonald, Esq., made a brief and stirring speech in the interest of Mr.
Welsh, which was met by a laconic and ringing retort from W. J. Logan, Esq.

Mr. J. H. Cumiskey offered a few neat and well-timed remarks. A vote of thanks was given the Chairman and Secretary.
Three cheers were given for the Queen, three for Free Trade and the National Policy, three for the candidates, and the meeting closed in jolly good humor.

M. LAVERTY,
Secretary.
Fort Augustus, August 4th, '84.

Greely at Portsmouth.

MEETING HIS MOTHER AND WIFE—AFFECTING SCENES ON THE THETIS—ENTHUSIASTIC RECEPTION OF THE RELIEF SQUADRON.

The Thetis, Bear and Alert, comprising the Greely relief squadron, arrived off Newcastle, N. H., before daylight on the 1st inst., and by two o'clock in the afternoon had dropped anchor in the harbor of Portsmouth, N. H. The United States warship Alliance had been stationed outside the harbor to watch for the squadron, although the Arctic vessels were not expected to arrive until Saturday. The arrival of the fleet so soon made a change in the programme necessary and as a result ceremonies were more or less of an impromptu character. The vessels received every demonstration that enthusiasm could invent. A meeting between Greely and his wife was ingeniously arranged so that he should not know that the lady was on board the vessel until she made her presence known to him in Commander Schley's cabin, where the two were left alone. Greely did not expect to see her, thinking she had not arrived in time to meet the fleet, and was sitting in the cabin with Schley when she approached. She trembled in every limb, her breath came in gasps and her whole frame shook with emotion.
With trembling steps she descended to the cabin door and just at the instant she entered Commander Schley left the room, leaving the long separated couple alone. Lieut. Greely was sitting with his back to the door, but when Commander Schley so abruptly left him, he turned and saw his wife enter. With a wild cry like a gigantic sob Greely bounded from his chair with eyes half standing from their sockets.
Mrs. Greely sprang forward to meet her husband, crying, "Arthur, Arthur, home!" The cabin was closed, but through even the heavy oak doors could be heard the convulsive sobs which shook the frame of the sturdy explorer who so recently was snatched from the jaws of death.

Later in the afternoon the mother of Lieut. Greely came from Newburyport, and was taken at once on board the flagship Tennessee. Shortly after she was put on the Secretary's barge and taken on board the Thetis. When she arrived there Mr. and Mrs. Greely and the latter's brothers were seated in Commander Schley's cabin, alternately crying, laughing and embracing. An instant before the Lieutenant's mother entered the cabin, Commander Schley stepped to the cabin door and said, "Lieuten-enant, your mother is here." Mrs.
Greely then entered and threw her arms around her son's neck, saying only "My son, my son." Lieut. Greely spoke no word save "Mother," but in his tone and expression there was a world of tenderness.
Clasping his mother in his arms, the lieutenant did nothing but sob, while his mother cried like a child.

The Secretary of the Navy actually took the gallant explorer in his arms in the feeling of his greeting. "God bless you; God bless you," he said, "you have come back to us almost from the grave. I hope your future happiness may reward you for the terrible experience you have had."

A Scientific Suicide.

SURE WORK PLANNED AND CARRIED OUT BY A DESPOUNDING GERMAN.

Julius Hollweg, a German, who had become despondent as a result of drinking to drown other troubles, committed suicide in New York on Friday. When discovered his left hand rested in his lap and firmly grasped a heavy revolver of German manufacture. On his right leg lay another revolver spattered with blood. His right arm, rigid in death, rested on the arm of the chair near the elbow. The arm was partially raised, and about the hand was wrapped several times a heavy cotton shoe cord, to which was attached a small line fishing line.

In front of the body was a small table covered with a brown cloth, and placed directly under an old-fashioned mirror. To the table was firmly tied with a piece of bed cord a fine large-bore rifle. The rifle was pointed at the man's shoulder, and before the body settled down after death came must have been aimed directly at his heart.

Over the man's head, stretched tightly across the room, and held by nails in either wall, was a strong cord holding an empty spool. Over this was run the fishing-line from the man's hand, whence it was passed through a staple fixed in the top of the mirror, the end being tied to the trigger of the gun. The fishing line was taut, but the pull had not been sufficient to discharge the gun. That the mirror, which was suspended by a cord, might not tip forward by a pull on the cord, a piece of fishing line had been fastened to the top and tied to a nail in the wall.
Taking the revolver in his right hand, with another ready cocked in his left, this deliberate, methodical suicide, raised it to his head and fired. He evidently expected that the fall of his hand would pull the fishing line enough to discharge the gun through his heart. But the first shot was enough.
Death came so quickly that the hand remained fixed half way to his head, the mirror gave slightly despite his precaution; and although the rifle was fixed with a hair trigger which a breath will almost discharge it failed to go off. With the mirror before him he made sure of his aim, propping the chair so that his position would not be moved
