

My Posters!

To the Student Body of UPEI
 In regards to the posters mentioned in a short article as being disgusting, being the person who made them I think it only fair to explain or to tell you why they are there.

I do not at any time wish to become the conscience of the student body because God had the foresight to give man a conscience at creation.

My belief is simply this, I am a Christian. I believe that Jesus Christ is, was, and always will be the Son of the living God who came to earth and died for the re-uniting of man with God, which was necessary because man is born in a state of separation from his maker.

The person who wrote the article criticizing the posters and myself have at least one thing in common, we both have faith in a set of beliefs. Christianity & Atheism. Childish or no is not for me to say. (Matthew 11-2)

As for living in a world of science I fully agree. We live in a universe named after Einstein, one of the world's most prominent scientists, a Jew, a believer in God.

Marx in "Das Kapital" is quoted as saying - 'Christianity, especially in its Protestant form, is the ideal religion for remaking characters destroyed by sin.' Marx has taught me to become a Christian in order to make a character destroyed by sin.

And Simpson the discoverer of chloroform and other medicines? When asked what his greatest discovery was, answered this way.

-It was not chloroform. My greatest discovery has been to know that I am a sinner and that I could be saved by the grace of God!

The bible is not a scientific handbook, but, where it touches upon science it is absolutely correct and has been proven so time after time.

Science proves to my that my faith is well grounded in fact.

Surely we are not more scientific than Einstein, Simpson, or Newton. Are we?

As for freedom of speech, I am very glad to see you expressing your opinion and I hope and pray you won't think it necessary to keep it inside one certain class. What kind of a world would we have then?

I welcome criticism for strenghtens. I will be more that happy to talk to anyone who is genuinely interested in hearing about Jesus Christ and His plan of salvation. I have no hard feelings towards the writer of the article or to those who oppose my views but as you can see I cannot agree with them.

A Brighter Day

Dear Editor:

Our chapter of the Jaycees is located behind the walls of the State Penitentiary and the membership is composed entirely of men incarcerated at this facility. We recently initiated an new project entitled "A Brighter Day," which we would like your campus paper to help us make a success.

There a great number of men here that do not have friends or relatives on the outside with which they may correspond. Our brighter day program is designed to fill a void in their lives and brighten their day each day at mail call. There is nothing more discouraging than the lack of communication with the outside and receiving mail is one of the most important things in an inmates life.

We would like for you to print a few names of prisoners in your campus paper and thus encourage students to write to these men. We feel that college student are at a time in their lives just as we are, that since they are planning their future, they may be able to help some people help improve themselves. This is one of the goals of the Jaycees and we are working for the improvement of all persons involved.

Please let us hear from you regarding this request at your earliest convenience. We are listing below several names of men that would appreciate someone to write to and correspond with. We would also like a courtesy copy of your campus paper. Thank you for helping us help someone here have a brighter day.

Dear Editor:

I would like to thank all the people who supported me in the election. To my two opponents, I feel we have all won something since it was so very close. I know that both Terry and Michael will be around to ensure that I do a good job. My basic promise of hard work will be evident when I take office. Thanks again and I'll see to it that next years executive will be strong and active.

Dear Editor:

At this time, I would like to thank everyone who came out to vote for me at last Wednesday's election. I really appreciate your support and will be looking forward to meeting and talking with voters and non-voters on campus.

I would like to thank especially Allan Pickard and Ray Shalala for their help in my campaign and everyone who helped me to get elected. Again thank you.

The Guatamalan Story

Dear Sir:

As is often the case, a natural disaster - in this instance a series of devastating earthquakes - has brought a previously little known Third World country into the Canadian headlines. I would appreciate the opportunity to bring to your readers' attention some background information about Guatemala, and also OXFAM's role there, before, during and after the earthquakes.

Guatemala, a small country with a population of about six million, was once the home of the Mayan civilization, renowned for its architecture, sculpture, ceramics, weaving, astronomy and mathematics. This civilization was brutally crushed by Spanish colonization in the sixteenth century, and the descendants of the Mayans, the indigenous Indian population who make up just over half of Guatemala's present population, are now among the poorest people in the Americas.

Even before this latest blow, the mortality rates, at 16 per 1,000, were the highest on the continent. Most of the country's doctors were located in Guatemala City - in the countryside there was only one physician per 23,000 people. 75% of all Guatemalan children under five were said to be malnourished. 87% of all Guatemalans are subsistence farmers. They grow corn, beans and squash on depleted small plots. But much of the land - estimated at 62% - is currently being used, and not very efficiently, by agro-export land barons, whose plantations ship out of the country coffee, cattle and bananas.

Most of the Indians live in isolated mountainous areas, where the soil is poor. Help is only just beginning to reach many of them, and it is becoming clear that they probably suffered the most during the earthquakes. Their existence was precarious before, and it appears likely that most of the relief efforts will be concentrated in the towns.

OXFAM has been supporting long-term development projects among the Indian population of Guatemala for many years, especially in the Chimaltenango area. After this latest disaster has faded from public attention, OXFAM will still be there, supporting the fight against
