Support For IWA In Nfld. To Be Sought At Meeting

By IAN MACDONALD Canadian Press Staff Writer CORNER BROOK, Nfld. (CP)—The Corner Brook District Labor Council (CLC) is expected to hold a mass meeting this week to seek rank and file support for action against the Newfoundland government's recent anti-union legislation.

The government recently passed one law decertifying two Newfoundland locals of the International Woodworkers of America (IWA) and another which Premier Smallwood said was designed to enable the government to dissolve two locals of the International Teamsters Union. Also passed were laws prohibiting general strikes and secondary boycotting.

The council which has 6,000 members—3,000 in Corner Brook—has given its support to the IWA which struck the Anglo-Newfoundland Development Company at Grand Falls Dec. 31. Since early January IWA loggers have also been leaving their jobs with Bowater's Newfoundland Pulp and Paper Mills Limited here.

IWA MEMBERSHIP CLAIMS

The IWA claims about 6,000 members in the Grand Falls area of central Newfoundland and another 5,000 in this western section of the province. A spokesman said about 1,200 A.N.D. loggers and 1,400 Bowater's loggers were receiving union welfare payments.

Many IWA pickets in central Newfoundland were reported to be employees of Bowater's contractors, who the IWA said volunteered for picket duty. Western Newfoundland is considered a stronghold and it was believed that the union will make a stand here.

A.N.D. and Bowaters have announced jointly that they will never sign an agreement with the IWA. A.N.D. has since signed an agreement with the newly-formed Newfoundland Brotherhood of Woods Workers (Ind.) which claims 7,000 members.

A.N.D. officials said Saturday there were 1,200 men working in the woods and that three of their four main woods divisions were operating at capacity. The fourth, Bishop's Falls, was to open today. It will employ another 250 men. Max Lane, temporary president of the NBWW said.

Religious leaders estimate 725,000 went to hear Graham in Melbourne and 45,000 in Tasmania. Millions more saw him on television or heard him on radio. Churchmen said the crusade has increased church attendance in Melbourne.

Church committees also are happy about the financial side of the crusade. They had feared they could not meet the expenses of $76,000 Australian ($170,240). Their fears vanished when 140,000 persons turned up to hear Graham's final sermon in Melbourne last Sunday. That not only paid off the crusade's expenses but left $60,000 over to go toward Graham's "hour of decision" broadcasts in the United States.

Graham called the final Melbourne turnout the greatest of his career. As for the entire crusade, he said: "It is the largest four-week crusade we've ever had."

The praise that showered on Graham in Australia was not confined to Protestants. Several Roman Catholic priests called him a good Christian who helped people to find God. A Jewish Journal praised Graham's character and said he had an innate goodness.

There were also critics. Most of these were letter writers to local newspapers. Some questioned the cost of the crusade. Graham had a ready answer for newspaper reporters. He said he had nothing to do with expenses of the local crusade. As for his salary of $15,000 a year, he said many ministers in the United States were paid more.

New Organization Planned By Universities, Colleges

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's universities and colleges are setting up a new organization called the Canadian Universities Foundation to administer the $25,000,000 in grants paid by the federal government annually.

The heads of 21 Canadian universities will meet here today to elect the first board of directors of the new foundation, touching off a reorganization of the National Conference of Canadian Universities.

The NCCU, which has been administering the division of the grants among Canadian universities, will turn this function over to the 21-member foundation over a period of months it will reorganize its other functions under a new name—the National Conference of Canadian Universities and Colleges.

The new NCCUC will consist of first 36 Canadian universities and colleges, the National Research Council and the Canada Council.

Representation on the foundation, apart from the five largest universities who have permanent seats, is by elections. Universities with enrollments of between 1,500 and 5,000 have elected six representatives to the foundation by mail ballot. Dr. C. B. Mackay will represent the University of New Brunswick.

Universities with enrollments of less than 1,500 lectured nine members by mail ballot. They include Rev. C. Cormier, St. Joseph's University, Moncton, N.B.; Dr. W. T. R. Flemington, Mount Allison University, Sackville, N.B.; Dr. R. Gushue, Memorial University, St. John's Nfld.; Dr. Watson Kirkconnell, Acadia University, Wolfville, N.S.; Dr. A. E. Kerr, Dalhousie University, Halifax; Rev. H. J. Somers, St. Francis Xavier, Antigonish, N.S. The chairman of the meeting Monday will be Dr. Flemington who will become chairman of the new foundation.

Holy Week Rites Opened By Pope John

ROME (Reuters)—Pope John opened the rites of Holy Week in Rome Sunday when he blessed palms and attended mass in the Basilica of St. Paul.

Sixteen Cardinals took part in the rite. A large crowd acclaimed the pontiff as he was borne into the basilica on his portable throne and the pontifical choir greeted him with the hymn Tu es Petrus (thou art peter).

After blessing the palms, commemorating the palm branches with which the people of Jerusalem greeted Christ, he distributed them among the cardinals and members of his court.

He then took part in the liturgical procession in the church. On Good Friday the Pope will visit the Basilica of the Holy Cross of Jerusalem and on Easter Sunday he will celebrate mass in St. Peter's Basilica before giving his apostolic benediction to Rome and the world from the church's balcony.
