(WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER.)
To the Sea Shell.

So like the rosy cheeks of village belle,
Oh, beautiful and strange sea shell,
Thy tinted folds and graceful swell Awake our admiration deep,
And bid us, held by Fancy's spell,
Thy praises sing while others sleep.

What tales might'st not thou tell,
Oh, fair and bright sea shell,
Of heavy storms and darkly lowering sky,
When foaming waves across thy bosom fly
With dull deaf roar, and rush, and angry cry,
As o'er the rocks they leap and splash;
Of scorching lightning's vivid flash,
And thunder's hollow boom and deep,
When wild it sounds its dreadful sweep Far o'er the sea with mighty crash,
And mingled with the clang so harsh and loud
Of guns, that signal through the murky cloud.

And thou hast heard the angry mood
Of ocean changed to one subdued,
When through the sunny day
The small waves gently play,
And sport around thy curious form—
Like maid's caresses pure and warm,—
And lightly lay thy golden strand,
Home of the bright sea fairies' band;
And sweetly as a mother's kiss,
In childhood's happy hours of bliss,
The waves, with little gladsome dips,
Kiss shily thy pink tinted lips,
And trembling wake long silent music low,
A mission glad fulfilling as they flow.

Thou wast the merry home and throne
And dancing hall, in ages gone
Of memory's mermaids strange and fair,
Blue eyed, with flowing golden hair,
And 'mid thy mystic folds,
And depths of purest pearl,
Their wild, sweet song still hold,
Its reign,—an echo faint and lone Of ages that have long since flown,— While ocean wavelets curl
And play around thy tinted mates,
Who never know the loves and hates
Of man, but keep the musing song and low
The mermaids taught them in the long ago.

Talmage on Extravagance.

Talmage, a few days ago, preached a sermon from the text (John xvii. 11) "As the partridge sitteth on eggs and hatcheth them not, so he that getteth riches and doth not, shall leave them in the midst of his days, and at his end shall be a fool."

And commenting on the recent failures, he said:—"Look at the pernicious extravagance. Take the one fact that New York every year pays two million dollars for theatrical amusements. While once in a while a Henry Irving, or an Edwin Booth, or a Joseph Jefferson, thrills a great audience with tragedy, you know as well as I do that the vast majority of the theatres of New York are as debased as they can be, and as damnable as they can be. Two million dollars—the vast majority of these dollars going up in a wrong direction. Ninety-five millions paid in this country for cigars and tobacco a year. One thousand five hundred million dollars paid for strong drink in one year in this country. With extravagance, pernicious extravagance, can there be any permanent prosperity? Business men, cool-headed business men, is such a thing a possibility? One thousand five hundred million dollars for rum!

These extravagances also account, as I have already hinted, for the positive crimes, the forgeries, the absconding of the officers of the banks. The store on Broadway and the office on Wall street swamped by the residence on Madison square. The father's husband's craft capsize by carrying too much domestic sail. That is what springs the leak in the merchant's money bag. That is what cracks the pistons of the autocides. That is what tears down Marine Banks. That is what stops insurance companies. That is what halts this nation again and again in its triumphal march of prosperity. In the presence of this audience to-day and the American people so far as I can get their attention, I want to arraign this monster curse of extravagance, and I want you to pelt it with your scorn and hurl at it your anathema. Look at the one fact that it is a matter of solid statistics that in this country, in the cities of New York and Brooklyn—I will narrow it down—in the cities of New York and Brooklyn, it is estimated that there are now over 5,000 women whose apparel cost them over $2,000 a year, each. Things have got to such a pass that when we cry over our sins in church, we wipe the tears away with a $150 pocket handkerchief! I show you a domestic tragedy in five acts:
Act the first—A home plain and beautiful. Enter newly-married pair. Enter contentment. Enter as much happiness as ever gets in one home.
Act the second—Enter discontent. Enter desire for long expenditure. Enter envy.
Enter jealousy.
Act the third—Enter the queenly dressmakers. Enter the French milliners.
Enter all costly plate and all great extravagance.
Act the fourth—Tip-top society. Princess and Princesses of New York and Brooklyn floating in and on. Everything on a large and magnificent scale. Enter contempt for other people.
Act the fifth and last—Enter the assignee.
Enter the sheriff. Enter the creditors.
Enter humiliation. Enter the wrath of God. Enter the contempt of society.
Enter Death and Hell. Now, drop the silk curtain. The farce is ended and the lights are out.

When Mrs. Pinaphor read that, at a cow sale in New York the other day, "a Jersey was sold for $6,000," she exclaimed: "What trifling extravagance! It's no wonder rich people are bursting up in that city!
Six thousand dollars for a Jersey! Why, a Jersey good enough for the daughter of a Queen can be bought at any dry goods store for three dollars and a half!"
