Principal Grant At Home.

The Rev. Principal Grant was, on his arrival at Kingston, presented by the Mayor with an address of welcome and congratulation from the citizens.

He had been to southern lands and knew how poor they were. He had stood beneath the palms and the coconut trees, and while he had learned that the milk in the coconut meant, he dared not sit down, as the deadly viper was lurking near.

He had been asked while away, what retaliation meant, and he replied that he could not answer for people so far distant, but there were two things he was sure of. First, Canada would settle the question of its future on the merits of the case.

Principal Grant is evidently the right kind of a Canadian. His native County of Ficton may well be proud of him as one of the ablest and best representatives of the thoughts and feelings of the people of this country.

Public Opinion in the States.

Many persons think that a man's real thoughts and feelings are often most truly expressed in his unguarded moments. If this be so, it may be that the applause with which a Boston audience received the spread-eagle Annexation talk of W. H. H. Murray was a better indication of the sentiment of the people of the United States on the point, than even the highly and carefully wrought out articles in some of the daily papers.

Reuben James.

[This beautiful poem has already appeared in The Herald, but as the production of James Jeffrey Roche, son of our Provincial Librarian, and a Charlottetown boy, as well as on its own intrinsic merits, it is worthy a place in every newspaper published in the Province.]

Three ships of war had Preble when he left the Naples shore, And the knightly king of Naples lent him seven galleys more, And never since the Argo floated in the middle sea

Such noble men and valiant have sailed in company, As the men who went with Preble to the siege of Tripoli. Stewart, Bainbridge, Hull, Decatur—how their names ring out like gold?

Reuben James was first to follow when Decatur led aboard Of the lofty Turkish galley and in battle broke his sword. Then the pirate captain smote him, till his blood was running fast, And they grappled, and they struggled, and they fell beside the mast.

Obituary.

TROUBLE comes to all—comes at all seasons. Even the Christmas feast is saddened at many a board by the angel of death. But the blessed time is full of comforting suggestions for the bereaved ones.

Personal.

Hon. James Clow, M. L. C., Murray Harbor, is at the Osborne. Mrs. A. D. Macleod, of Charlottetown, contributes her poem entitled, "A Christmas Memory," to the Christmas number of the St. John's, Nfld., Colonist.

Principal Grant has consented to visit Ottawa early in January and deliver a lecture, under the auspices of the local branch of the Imperial Federation League, on his Australian experiences.
