Eastern Kings Exhibition Largely Attended At Souris

Souris and Eastern Kings County Exhibition yesterday lived up to its tradition of presenting an excellent rural show.

Premier A. W. Matheson in official opening of the Exhibition yesterday afternoon congratulated the exhibitors and the directors upon their splendid effort.

The Premier had high praise for the work being accomplished by the boys and girls of the 4-H clubs, observing while he spoke several young boys with a row of prize ribbons pinned to their shirts.

"I wonder," he said, "does the work of the 4-H club take the place of the rural school fair of years ago?" He recalled that in his youth as a farm boy he participated in these fairs and felt that they did a great deal to stimulate interest among the youth in things pertaining to agriculture.

"These young people hold the future of our Province in their hands and we cannot overlook the importance of encouraging them in their work," he added.

Hon. Eugene Cullen, Minister of Agriculture, said that exhibitions of this kind held yesterday were intended to improve the quality of the livestock and vegetables each year and "from the quality of farm products on display it would appear that this was being accomplished at the Souris Exhibition."

Mr. Cullen felt that a great deal could be done to improve the quality of the field crops and vegetables, not so much in methods of farming as by the selection of a more suitable variety.

"It is a shame that every year we see for sale in our grocery stores, vegetable and fruits which have been imported from various states of the American Union. 'Don't blame your grocer if he has these products on his shelves at a price much higher than you would have."

Conference On Cyprus Fails; Turks, Greeks Fear For Balkan Alliance

By ARTHUR GAVSHON LONDON (AP)—Britain, Turkey and Greece failed today to reach agreement on the disputed future of Cyprus. As their 10-day conference broke down, all three powers lined up military forces to prevent new waves of violence.

Turkish and Greek diplomats expressed fear that the conference breakdown would imperil the Balkan alliance which links their countries with Yugoslavia in a defence pact.

The conference ranged foreign ministers Harold Macmillan of Britain and Fatin Rustu Zorlu of Turkey against Stephen Stephanopoulos of Greece.

The Greeks are demanding that Cypriots be given the right soon to choose between union with Greece and a future within the British Empire.

Turks Call Parliament In Wake Of Anti-Greek Riots

By ALLAN JACKS ISTANBUL (AP)—The Turkish government reimposed martial law on Istanbul and Izmir Wednesday night and called Parliament into special session in the wake of anti-Greek riots.

Martial law was lifted for about 12 hours in Istanbul and Izmir, Turkey's two largest cities, during the night. But today it was restored and extended to Ankara, the capital.

Premier Adnan Menderes announced the action after an emergency session of his cabinet, which also summoned Parliament into a special session opening next Monday.

The outbreaks followed the dragging dispute over the future of Cyprus. British-held island bastion in the Mediterranean. The Greeks want Cyprus, which has a big majority of Greek-descended residents. Turkey, which lost Cyprus to Britain in 1914, says it must get the island back if Britain ever quits it.

British-Greek-Turkish talks in London on the issue have ended in disagreement. DANGER HEAVY Casualties in Tuesday night's violence in Istanbul and Izmir were put unofficially at more than 300.

Greek-owned property was damaged to the extent of millions of dollars. Istanbul police said 2,087 persons had been arrested, about half suspected of looting, arson, and other violence.

An official communique issued at Ankara during the day said Istanbul and Izmir were the "objects of a Communist plot and incitement."

Union Leader Predicts Tieup Will Spread

NEW YORK, (AP)—The International Longshoremen's Association (I.L.A.) closed the port of New York Wednesday in a strike that the union's leader said might spread to the rest of the U. S. east coast and into Canada.

"This is spreading very rapidly" said I.L.A. president William Bradley. "If something isn't done by Monday, we'll have the whole coast tied up."

Bradley said he had been told longshoremen in Quebec, Montreal, Halifax, and St. John's, Nfld., would meet today and that they will probably join in the work stoppage.

But at Montreal Donat Bibeault, I.L.A. Canadian vice-president, said there is no danger of tie-up in Canadian ports although vessels diverted from strikebound ports in the United States would not be handled. He said Canadian longshoremen will respect their agreement with the Canadian Shipping Federation.

The strike was the climax to months of turmoil along the 350 miles of New York waterfront. The I.L.A. said it was trying to "obliterate" the New York-New Jersey waterfront commission, a bi-state pier-policing agency.

Caught in the middle in the walkout were 170 shipping companies, with whom the I.L.A. signed a no-strike contract last January. They stand to lose a million dollars for every day the port is tied up.

The employer group, the New York Shipping Association, said it would sue for damages. It called the work stoppage a "flagrant violation" of its contract with the I.L.A.

A number of ships were stranded in port by the strike. However, the big British liner, Queen Mary, got away without delay. The walkout began as a mass meeting of Manhattan dockers, a prelude to a port-wide protest by 25,000 I.L.A. longshoremen against the waterfront commission. A waterfront commission investigator tried to invade the meeting, which was held on an open pier.

However, the I.L.A. called off the meeting and pulled longshoremen off the docks until, it said, it holds a private meeting today. "Lane's" always saying he's sorry," said I.L.A. executive vice-president Patrick J. Connolly, "but these investigators don't do anything without orders."

The walkout spread throughout the New York area of the port and to Jersey City and Hoboken, N. J. By noon, Bradley announced: "The port of New York is now tied up."

He was asked how a purely local issue—the waterfront commission's policing of New York piers—could be an excuse for a strike along the entire east coast.

Bradley replied that the dispute concerns "interference with the activities of the international union."

STRIFE SINCE 1953 The two-member waterfront commission was set up in 1953 to try to bring order to the port. Since then, the I.L.A. has been Greeks had incited mobs of young Turks to attack Greek residents and their property. The communique expressed sorrow and regret for the grave damage to property of Greek-descended residents of the two big cities and promised speedy compensation.

Greeks were not the only victims of the outbreaks. Property of the Armenian and Jewish minorities also was attacked.

Shortage Of Specialists Entering Dairy Industry

By R. J. ANDERSON Canadian Press Staff Writer LAKE LOUISE, Alta. (CP)—The National Dairy Council was startled Wednesday when told that in Canada and the United States last year, only 30 students of agricultural colleges majored in dairying. Members agreed that incentives were needed to attract such men to the dairy industry.

Dr. H. R. Thornton of the University of Alberta, rising to the challenge that the universities were at fault, told the council: "Make it more attractive for them."

"Sometimes my conscience pricks me when I tell my students about the opportunities that await them in dairying."

Dr. Thornton suggested the dairy industry could help itself by financing needy students. Scholarships would be one means.

GRANBY MAN PERSISTS Peter Nadeau of Granby, Que., head of a large Quebec co-operative, persisted: "How are we going to get students (of agriculture) to learn about the need for experts? Where are we going to get the students?"

Dr. Thornton said he didn't believe sub-collegiate (short-term) courses in dairying would help. Students interested in dairying could be aided in a full, four-year term in dairy schools. But the future had to be promising for them to go into dairy schools in the first place.

On this last day of the three-day convention, chairmen of the various discussion groups gave their reports in plenary session. Butler and his place in the Canadian economy appeared to be the most pressing problem.

Council members recommended to the executive that it seek means of reducing the price of butter to the consumer without reducing the return to the producer. Speakers earlier had said that government subsidies were the only practical means of
