RIGHTED AT LAST

BY MARY CECIL HAY

Author of "The Arundel Motto," "Nora's Love Test," "Back to the Old Home," Etc.

"Dear Gabriel—those are the words you bid me read; but I see no interest in them, Lawrence. I might easily write such words of my own cousin Gabriel, if I chose—to any one," she added, with peculiar emphasis.

And then she turned away, muttering that the room was so warm it made her feel faint; and, putting her hand to her head, she closed her eyes one moment, turning white as death.

"The letter," observed Mr. Haughton, while he watched her narrowly, "was written to the man who calls himself Royden Keith, and it so commenced—dear Gabriel—in a lady's hand."

"I do not think so," replied Honor, in that quiet tone of dissent to which her old guardian should have been accustomed now. "We women, as a rule, use capitals in such a case. I think these words came in the middle of the letter."

"Absurd," interposed the lawyer, with impatience. "Yet even if it were so, what difference would that make? If she must call him 'dear Gabriel' in the middle of the letter as well as at the beginning, like a lovesick—"

"I do not understand the necessity of discussing this, Lawrence."

"Yes, you do—you must," he retorted; "and you would be mad to pretend that there is any loop-hole for escape from my conviction. To address the one to whom you write as 'dear Gabriel' is pretty incontrovertible proof that Gabriel is the name of the person to whom the letter is sent. You see it so yourself as plainly as I see it."

"Gabriel is not a—very uncommon name," said Honor, and Mr. Haughton's hopes rose a little, for he read the anguish of suspicion which she tried in vain to hide.

The interview had not ended there, for the old suit had been again desperately urged, and the old promise repeated, in vain; but after this he had taken no further step forward in his threatened bringing to justice of old Myddelton's murderer; and Honor rightly surmised that her old guardian was too astute a lawyer to make his accusation public until he held an unbroken chain of evidence.

Sometimes Honor and Theodora Trent met in society, but not very often, as there were limits to the circle in which Mrs. and Miss Trent displayed their graces, and even within these limits, Honor Craven's presence was eagerly sought. Except for a passing regret that old times and memories could be so ruthlessly snapped by jealousy, it made no difference to Honor when Theodora happened to be in the same assembly. She invariably spoke to her, though no longer like an old friend, as she used to do, for Miss Trent's marked glances and innuendoes could not be misunderstood. If it had been possible, Theodora would have robbed Honor of the admiration and the love she gained so easily; but being utterly impossible, Miss Trent was fain to content herself with dropping casual and infectious hints, or expressing all that looks and gestures could express. And it could hardly be that these poisonous words and glances could fall as harmlessly on every one as they had fallen on Royden Keith.

In those meetings, which were so brief, between herself and Honor, she was ever very quiet, just as she might have been if she feared to trust herself. And he, noticing that always at his coming there would fall over her face a stillness which looked like weariness, made those meetings fewer and more brief as the London season neared its zenith. Even Phoebe noticed that this silence fell upon her cousin even when she only mentioned Royden's name, and it taught the girl a new experience, and even a new wisdom.

Eczema on the Scalp

Would Itch and Burn until the Child Screamed with Agony—A Wonderful Cure Effected by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

The case recorded here is one of the worst ever brought to the attention of Toronto's best physicians, and when doctors gave up all hope of recovery, Dr. Chase's Ointment was successful in producing a perfect cure.

Mr. James Scott, 135 Wright avenue, Toronto, states:—"My boy, Tom, aged ten, was for nearly three years afflicted with a bad form of Eczema of the scalp, which was very unsightly and resisted all kinds of remedies and doctor's treatment. His head was in a terrible state. We had to keep him from school, and at times his head would bleed, and the child would scream with agony. For two and a half years we battled with it in vain, but at last found a cure in Dr. Chase's Ointment. About five boxes were used. The original sores dried up, leaving the skin in its normal condition. To say it is a pleasure to testify to the wonderful merits of Dr. Chase's Ointment is putting it very mildly."

and lavish preparations for Honor's ball, "but we thought them tremendous then, and Jane always pronounced them absurd and ruinous extravagance."

"I remember once, before a dinner party," said Honor, laughing, "I went into Kilmory and spent an hour in a box of crackers. It was Christmas time, and they looked pretty, and might provoke a laugh, I thought. I had then away when I got home, only intending to bring them out at the last moment, for fear of not being allowed to exhibit them; but of course Jane found them, and forbade me to put them on the table. Picture was the mine!"

"I remember," said Phoebe, growing dismal over even the recollection, "and I cried, and told Lawrence, and he scolded Jane, and ordered them to be put just where you chose, and you were vexed with me and hid the crackers. And don't you remember, Honor, that we found them the autumn after, and took them with us to the Statton Woods when we went to sketch; and Hervey joined us. Oh, you remember?" said Phoebe, "and he wanted to crack them all with you, and pretended the matters were true. Such a contrast to Mr. Keith, who came with him that day, and never offered to crack one with you, but all the while turned to me. It was a novelty to me," concluded the elder cousin, smiling, "because Hervey was always eager to join with you in everything; and as for Lawrence—"
