men, who only became eligible for benefits his year. Charlottetown itself showed less people drawing Unemployment Insurance benefits than was the case one year ago. The figures for Charlottetown as of Friday February 21st, showed 932 benefit claimants, as against 936 in February 1957, a reduction of 64. Helping to swell claimant's total for the two counties to over 4,000, were a number of people who had been working at the National Park. The arrival of the season's first heavy fall of snow in this area, put an end to the work being done at the park. A RECORD HIGH The figure of over 4,000 is a record high for the local office. It is believed that he peak has been reached since most of the fishermen filed their claims in December. Local office officials point out however, that more snow storms could adversely affect the situation and possibly put more men out of work. The very favourable weather which continued into mid-February, was a big factor in keeping the number of unemployed people down in the city of Charlottetown. Prospects for the Spring and Summer look very encouraging because of a fairly lively building program. The city of Charlottetown is already assured of several large projects, some of which are already underway, such as the new naval barracks and the Royal Bank Building. Other jobs which are slated to begin later on, are the new Baptist Church on Prince Street and the $1,300,000 extension to the Prince Edward Island Hospital. This system is used in all other commonwealth countries.
