New Horizons Are Brought To Canadians By CP Airlines

Portugal, a relatively untouched country from a tourist's point of view, is now accessible almost overnight to Canadians wth the inauguration of Canadian Pacific Airline's direct service between Toronto, Montreal and Lisbon. The flights, which began May 30, take 16 hours from Toronto and 14 from Montreal. They will be operated twice weekly, leaving on Mondays and Thursdays, returning Wednesdays and Saturdays. The service is operateed with luxurious DC-3 Empresses of the Air.

Portugal, long considered as a gateway to Europe, can lay just claim to a tourist attraction in its beaches on the war mAtlantic Ocean, mountains and forests, picturesque inland towns and seaside villages, historic sites and religious shrines, modern resorts and the cosmopolitan amusements of large Eurpoean cities are all combined with a sun-drenched climate which appeals to all types of travellers.

CLEAR SKIES

High on the list of Portugal's attractions is its climate. Seldom does the temperature go below 40 degrees at any time of the year and the average high is 70 degrees. Generally the skies are clear and cloudless. December is the "rainy" month, if a maximum of 13 days with precipitation can be called rainy, which is what statistics show is true of an average December at Lisbon.

Ancient, Medieval and modern history have left an indelible mark on the country. The Roman Empire once help sway here. Moorish architecture from the era of the Arab rulers is still part of old sections of towns.

Tourists visiting this land, little bigger than New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island put together, unspoiled by billboard advertising and other forms of commercialism, will be thrilled by the great variety of scenery. The Algarve, the Moorish-styled province on the extreme south, with its typical Mediterranean climate and its white-washed houses differs from its neighbouring province of Alentejo, the remarkable region of cork tree forests.

The contrast is even greater the farther you go north. Minho, rich in luxuriant vegetation and folklore, Tras-os-Montres, on the extreme northeast, mountainous and curious with its many ancient traditions. The three Beira provinces, occupying the center of the country from the Atlantic to the Spanish border, picturesque with their many ranges of lofty hills; the Estremadura and Ribatejo, essentially agricultural with lovely landscapes and typical windmills a add up to a vacation you will never forget.

ARCHITECTURE

Portugal's seaboard from Caminba in the north to Vila Real de D a n t o Antonia in the extreme southeast may be described as a succession of golden sandy beaches separated or enclosed by rocky cliffs which sometimes reach to heights of three hundred feet or more. The majority of Portugese seaside resorts are within easy reach and there are plenty of picturesque castles, ancient monuments and other historic buildings for the lover of art and architecture.

Entertainment in Lisbon can be found to suit any preference. There are good cabarets, somewhat more subdued than Paris, but better than most found in the United States or Canada. The large gambling casino equipped with cabaret at Estoril is famous and popular. Anyone can enjoy playing as the stakes can be either large or small. Your passport is all you need for official admittance.

Accommodations in Lisbon, and on the cast resort area which adjoins it, are available for every taste and budget. These range from swank hosteleties to more moderate resort accommodations. On the average, a double room with bath and all meals costs about $10.00 a day. If you wish to eat out, dinne. at a good restaurant including wine costs about $7.00 for two persons. The food is generously served and well perpared. The smaller restaurants offer many regional specialities. Prices for bottled wines in restuarants average from 50 to 90 cents for a full bottle.

Visitors are given every consideration by the Portugese who welcome them cordially. They are a law-abiding, hard-working people and their police force is second only to the London "bobby." At all times, in Portugal a visitor enjoys a secure feeling of pleasant relaxation.

Everyone likes something new and this is an opportunity for Canadians to enjoy a novel and thrilling experience.

Woman Lost In Woods 24 Hours

KILLALOE, Ont. (CP) — A 20-year-old woman, stung to desperation by clouds of insects, fought a 24-hour battle with cold, darkness and fear in the eastern Ontario bush before she was rescued, provincial police said.

The woman, Mrs. Mary Wannamaker, was taken by car to Toronto where hospital authorities reported her condition as "satisfactory."

Mrs. Wannamaker was hired as a secretary by stock broker Wiliam Conrad of Toledo, Ohio, and joined a party he led into the bush last Saturday to investigate a uranium claim.

The woman began to complain of insect bites and quit the party with the intention of returning to their automobile but she lost her way.

She told police when darkness neared she climbed a tree and tried to sleep. But she fell to the ground, injuring her back.

The next day she came upon a lake and swam the quarter-mile across it. She trudged on and emerged on a highway skirting the shore.

Her attempts to get a ride from passing motorists were unsuccessful. But she was eventually found by a provincial police search party.

Conrad had notified police when they discovered the woman hadn't reached the automobile.
