10 Downing St. Undergoes Vast Interior Facelifting

By JOHN GALE

LONDON (AP)—For the last three years workmen have been clambering over every inch of 10 Downing Street—the elegant town house where a nation's history is enshrined behind an unpretentious Georgian facade.

Great structural improvements have been made, and the noise of hammering and pneumatic drilling has penetrated to quiet corners of the foreign office across the way.

At this stage of the work, the outside of the house is barely recognizable. The famous front door needs painting and the figure 10 is crudely chalked on the glass fanlight.

Inside, carpenters have torn up the floorboards to walked by the giants—Walpole and Willington, Disraeli and Gladstone, Lloyd George and Churchill. The brick foundations of the house have been extensively underpinned, the floors reconstructed in reinforced concrete, the walls renewed and a new roof put on.

A new elevator has replaced the temperamental antique which led to the state apartments on the second floor and constantly broke down. A large number of additional bedrooms and bathrooms have been provided.

READY THIS MONTH

Yet when the project is completed this month, the building will not be greatly changed externally. For with history embedded in every stone, great care has been taken to preserve its traditional appearance. The same rule has been followed inside, for paneling, cornices and silver oak floor coverings—have been restored.

Like an iceberg, the house exposes only a small part of its mass to public view. It is in fact two houses one built by Sir George Downing toward the end of the 17th century and the other a mansion of slightly more elderly vintage at the rear.

Downing, whose parents joined the Puritan exodus to North America, was a nephew of John Winthrop, the first governor of Massachusetts Bay colony. He returned to England as a Puritan preacher in 1646, became Cromwell's chief of intelligence during the Royalist wars and later ambassador at The Hague.

From The Hague, he operated a ruthless anti-Royalist spy network but changed sides just before Charle II was restored to the throne. His services for the restoration won him favor with the king and, as a mark of royal esteem he was granted a long-term lease on the Downing Street site. Using a fortune accumulated by playing off the Royalists against the Cromwellians, Downing built a square of 15 houses of which this is a survivor.

STAFF OF 50

The prime minister has a permanent staff of about 10 and most of the Downing Street frontage is now occupied by offices. This section of the premises was joined to the mansion at the rear during the three-year reconstruction carried out in the 18th century when 10 Downing was first allocated by the Crown as an official residence of prime ministers.

Sir Robert Walpole became the first prime minister to occupy the house in 1735.

Many of his successors preferred to live elsewhere. William Pitt the Younger called it a "vast, awkward house" and promptly bought a place 10 miles out of town. Both Peel and Palmerston refused to live there, but every prime minister this century has taken up residence at 10 Downing.

Whether a prime minister has been in residence or not, the Cabinet Room has been the holy of holies of British government since Walpole's day.

ROOM OF DECISIONS

In this room the cabinet met on many anxious occasions. On Sept. 3, 1939, Neville Chamberlain broadcast from this chamber to tell the nation Britain had declared war on Germany.

Here Winston Churchill presided over wartime cabinet meetings in his boiler suit, but the Churchillian bedroom on the third floor has at least as much claim to fame. It was there that Churchill dictated many of his speeches.

The reconstruction will leave the cabinet room looking much as it always has — although Churchill had the tall bookcases removed during his second administration in the 50s because he said they made the room too dark.

The work is part of a £2,400,000 ($7,200,000) scheme which also involves the rebuilding of 12 Downing Street (burned down in 1879), renovations to the official residence of the Chancellor of the Exchequer at 11 and to the Treasury Building.

Apart from the famous door with its Lion's Head knocker, there have been until now only two other entrances into 10—the garden entrance and a communicating door from 11.

Now for the first time, a side entrance has been put in so the laundry bags can be separated from the statesmen.

In the first major reconstruction since Walpole's time, Prime Minister Macmillan has been a willing collaborator. He is the only British leader this century who has agreed to move out long enough for the work to be done.

Macmillan transferred his headquarters to nearby Admiralty House after a special committee reported that in addition to structural defects, the building was in danger of obliteration by fire, beetle decay and dry rot.

Retiring prime ministers traditionally make some gift to the household. Macmillan made his early in his premiership, donating the works of Kipling to the library.

Before leaving he also sat for his official portrait painted by the British artist, Sir James Gunn.

Now with Macmillan's future clouded by the aftermath of the Profumo scandal, there seems some chance his picture will soon join those of former British premiers.

These line the whole length of the grand staircase at 10 Downing, bringing together in one striking gallery the figures who have played key roles in British public life.

Cannot Avoid R.C. Teachings

HELSINKI (AP)—The Lutheran World Federation has been told it cannot "casually dismiss the theological teaching of the Roman Catholic Church as patently false, unbiblical and unevangelical."

A study paper prepared for discussion at the gathering of Lutherans from all over the world also said:

"Neither can we deny the many and diverse manifestations of earnest piety, charity and concern for thruth in the Roman Catholic Church."

For the first time since the 16th-century Reformation, the Vatican has sent official observers to a Lutheran congress. They were present to hear the paper presented.

It was part of a new Lutheran program looking toward better understanding with non-Lutheran churches — especially the Roman Catholic.

This assembly is expected to set up a new foundation to study the Roman Catholic and other non - Lutheran churches and carry on what is called an ecumenical dialogue with them.

The new foundation would succeed a commission established at a previous assembly in Minneapolis in 1957 to prepare the ground work. The paper read today was a section of that commission's work.

Provincial Debts Show Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — The total debt of the 10 provinces and northern territories reached $4,064,891,000 on March 31 last year—a 10.8-per-cent increase during the 1961-62 fiscal year, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics has reported. The figure represents direct debt less sinking funds.

The total direct debt rose to an average $219 for every Canadian from $201 a year earlier.

All provinces except Alberta and British Columbia increased their debt during the year. New bond issues totalled $527,232,000, more than double the $200,325,000 in bond retirements.

Opening lead—jack of spades.

The night Sylvia played in her first duplicate tournament was a night to remember. She had been a member of our club only two or three weeks, but even in that short interval of time the entire membership had become familiar with at least some of her extraordinary exploits.

We had never previously seen such a player. It wasn't that Sylvia was a poor player— we had lots of them in the club — it was just that her thinking processes were so different from those of any player any of us had ever met. The mistakes she made were so far removed from ordinary human error that we quickly realized her mental quirks were, at the very least, unique.

Nevertheless, Sylvia's bizarre approach to the game brought her many a sensational triumph and it was these victories that made her the most talked-about member of the club.

A few of the members were opposed to allowing Sylvia to play in the duplicate, for fear she would spoil the game, but, on the whole, most were for the idea. They were curious to see what would happen.

They didn't have long to wait. On the very first board Sylvia became declarer at six spades. West led the jack of spades.

It is hard to explain what happened now. I don't know whether it was the tension of the moment, or the excitement of playing in her first duplicate, or what the reason was that caused her to do what she did, but the fact is that Sylvia played the two from dummy!

This astonishing play was greeted by a strange and eerie silence on all sides. West then led a club. Sylvia took the ace, cashed the ace of diamonds, played a spade to the queen, ruffed a diamond, played a spade to the king, ruffed a diamond, player a spade to the ace, and then discarded three clubs on the 13-7-6 of diamonds to make the contract.

If she had won the opening spade lead in dummy, she would have had to go down one

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X E is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
