Telegraphic Odds and Ends.

A BUDGET OF GENERAL NEWS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

PARIS, July 28.—Boulanger will be a candidate in 92 cantons for the Consuls General.

QUEBEC, July 26.—It is stated that the repairs to the steamship Polynesian, now in graving dock at Levis, are to cost $90,000, but the crippled vessel will be made as good as ever, while advantage is also being taken of the opportunity to make certain valuable improvements on board, which will add to the comfort of passengers.

LONDON, July 26.—In the Commons last night John Morley attributed the fever excited by the question of the royal grants to the Government's want of frankness. He could not support Labouchere, because that gentleman implied that a message from the Queen ought never to have been presented. Morley desired to uphold the good forms and traditions of parliament. On Monday he would move an amendment raising the whole question in its broadest possible form. Bradlaugh moved the adjournment of the debate, which was carried.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., July 26.—A courier from the flooded district brings news of disaster. He says the river rose 32 feet in four hours, flooding the entire country and carrying off stores, houses, churches, fences, and crops, and tearing up trees by the roots. From Barnesville down to the mouth of the river destruction is complete. Nothing can be heard from the country along the upper waters on Sandyville. There is an immense drift pile, over a mile long, full of houses, and the bodies of sheep, horses, and cattle. Twenty-five bodies have been identified, and aid is sorely needed for people who are destitute.

CHICAGO, July 26.—Douglas J. Macrae, editor of the London Financial Times, is in this city en route for home. While in this country he has been acting as agent of a British syndicate which has been making extensive purchases of American grain elevators. As agent of the syndicate he says he has purchased 78 elevators in the Van-dusen system in the northwest. Macrae says water gas is being manufactured in England at a cost of four pence per thousand feet, and that preparations are being made to introduce the process in this country.

LONDON, July 26.—Steamship Saale reports, July 17th, four days out from New York, passing an immense iceberg, which seemed to be about 500 feet high and 1800 feet long.

TORONTO, July 26.—The news of the election of Bishop Walsh to the archbishopric of Toronto was received with joy by the Roman Catholic clergy here. They are unanimous in the belief that a better selection from among the ecclesiastics of the province could not be made. Bishop Walsh is not in London, having left a week ago to spend his vacation in Montreal and the province of Quebec.

HALIFAX, July 26.—Frank Hazelton had a miraculous escape from being killed on the warship Bellerophon. He fell from the cross-trees of the mainmast, 130 feet, struck the rigging several times, turned a somersault and landed in a small boat lying alongside the ship.

LONDON, July 26.—Two-thirds of the total number of cotton spinners have agreed to limit production to one-half the usual amount for one month.

MALTA, July 26.—The British warship Sultan, sunk here some months ago, has been successfully raised.

LIVERPOOL, July 26.—Seven thousand bales American cotton were destroyed by the burning of warehouses on Red Cross and Grundy streets.

CAIRO, July 26.—Advices from the front state that three columns of dervishes are marching to reinforce the rebels. It is believed when these reinforcements effect a junction with the main body of rebels a grand attack will be made upon the Egyptian forces.

NEW YORK, July 26.—Lawyer John Dunn was sent to state prison to-day for nine years and six months. Dunn was found guilty of having induced Cashier Scott, of the Manhattan Bank, to steal $185,000. Dunn received the greater part of the steal and advised Scott to flee the country. Subsequently Scott returned as a witness against Dunn.

SCRANTON, Pa., July 26.—It is reported that the agents of an English syndicate are making efforts to buy up all the coal leases held by individual operators in this region.

CINCINNATI, O., July 26.—Saloon keepers in this city to the number of 1,200 held a meeting yesterday, and resolved to defy the law and open their places on Sunday. The resolution will be carried into effect next Sunday.

HALIFAX, July 26.—There was a $12,000 fire at Granville Ferry, Annapolis, at midnight last night. It originated in a mill owned by Caribbean & Co., which was destroyed, together with a vessel alongside in course of construction and nearly completed. The blacksmith shop of A. D. Messenger and the carriage shop of Wallace Bohaber were also destroyed. There was no insurance on any of the buildings. The vessel was insured for $6,000.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., July 26.—Twenty-eight thousand dollars are paid out by Treasurer Thompson. Up to date only one fifth of the $500,000 appropriated has been distributed. At this rate it will be cold weather before the balance is disposed of. The homes of future Johnstown are likely to be built on high ground. The Cambria iron company is to build an inclined plane from the centre of the town to the top of the hill, three-quarters of a mile. Here five hundred acres of land can be laid out in pleasant building lots.

QUEBEC, July 26.—A fierce thunderstorm accompanied by large hail stones, passed over St. Frederic Beauce, yesterday, causing considerable damage to crops.

MONTREAL, July 26.—Detective Grosse, of the Canadian Secret Service Agency, is at present engaged in the Mulcahy case. The latest clue seems to lead in the direction of a girl employed at one time in a down town bar room and an ex-army officer. A large number of persons, however, are becoming sceptical about the whole transaction, and are beginning to suspect that there was not even a mock marriage in a sleigh last winter.

OTTAWA, July 26.—It is understood that the additional number of fisheries inspectors in the Maritime Provinces will not in any way increase the cost of inspection, as the salaries of the six inspectors will only aggregate the salaries of the two previous officers.

MONTREAL, July 26.—At St. Hubert, yesterday, on the farm of Brossard, a laborer was driving a mowing machine when he fell from the seat and the shears cut off his right arm, severed the fingers of the left hand, and ripped down his left leg, as well as cutting off the toes. The victim is in a critical condition.

A Very Strange Story

OF A MURDER, A DEATH BED CONFESSION, AND A HUNT FOR THE BURIED TREASURE OF A MURDERED CANADIAN.

A story which rivals the fiction of even the latter-day writers in its strangeness is going the rounds of the Boston newspapers, and as it bears a semblance of probability it finds many believers. In 1856 Pierre Mignolt, according to the story, died on his farm near Brompton Falls, County of Richmond, Que., leaving two sons and three daughters and an unencumbered farm and £3,000 in cash. Leo, one of the sons, took the money to Boston to invest. There he became acquainted, almost immediately, with two young men and together they went to one of a group of rocky islands called the Brewsters, in Boston harbor, on a fishing excursion. While there Leo excited the cupidity of his companions by showing his gold and bank notes. They smashed in his head and were about taking the money when a passing sloop scared them and they pitched the body, money and all into a hole, filling it with earth. They returned to Boston, but remorse overcame them and instead of returning for the money they left for the west, where they wandered together until one was killed in Denver. The survivor went to work in the Pennsylvania coal mines, where, in 1885, he was seized with consumption. Then he went to Brompton, where on his death bed he told the story of the murder.

The Mignolts had meanwhile become poor, but in possession of a map which the dying man sent them. They saved enough money to send the surviving son to Boston this spring, when he at once visited the Island and started to hunt for the grave. The chief landmark at the time of the crime was a cedar tree, but this was now gone and it made the work difficult. He, however, proceeded to dig up the whole of the grass plateau, when he was interrupted by the now owner of the island, who asked him what he was doing. He was afraid to confess his valuable secret, fearing that some one might rob him of his own, so only gave a lame excuse. This roused suspicion, and he was ordered off the island. Dispirited he returned to Boston, and finally his funds giving out he returned home. In despair it is said that he has written to the Boston authorities asking them to prosecute the search, as he and his two sisters are in sore distress. The municipal authorities explained that they had no right to go prospecting for dead men and buried treasures on other people's property, but they have appealed to the owner, who is highly interested, and steps are being taken to make a careful search of the entire rock.

"The New Papacy."

The following letter, taken from the Toronto Globe, is published by request:—

COMMISSIONER COOMES, SALVATION ARMY, TORONTO:—

DEAR SIR,—I beg to offer you my most sincere apology for the part I have taken in the recent correspondence and exposure (so called) in reference to the Salvation Army.

I was led into the matter partly by the suggestion of a third party, and partly for self-interest; and so I may have perhaps thought at the time that I had some grounds for the statements made.

I believe, upon consideration, that, on the whole, they are groundless, and cannot really be substantiated.

I must exonerate the managers of the paper in question from any blame in the matter, as I believe they acted in good faith and thoroughly believed in the accuracy of every statement, and performed only what they believed to be a public duty in the manner best suited to their judgment.

Although personally I have never made any charges of harshness against yourself, I believe indirectly this has been the construction put upon the articles in question, and I beg most emphatically to say I have ever and at your hands received most generous treatment, and it is my firm conviction that these charges would not be substantiated by any member of the Salvation Army past or present, either against yourself or any of your colleagues in Canada, or upon the Army management as a whole.

Reviewing the whole circumstance, I extremely regret the pain and annoyance of these things I have brought upon yourself, and also the reproaches that have been cast upon a worthy and beneficial corps; and I hope that, as this writing becomes public knowledge, any slight distrust as to the pure motives and bona fides of the Salvation Army that may have arisen will as speedily disappear as it has unworthily been exerted.

You are at perfect liberty to make any use you please of the above.

I am, dear sir,
Yours truly,
A. SUMNER,
Author of "The New Papacy."

Go and do likewise. If your whiskers are grizzled and unbecoming use Buckingham's Dye, and they will look as when you were younger.

A Mr. Hyde in Real Life.

REMARKABLE AND TERRIFYING SCENE IN A CHICAGO COURT ROOM.

A peculiar case of insanity is that of Harry Munzer, which came before Judge Garry, at Chicago one day last week. Munzer is about twenty-seven years of age, and never having indulged in the general practices of a city young man, his features bore a decidedly innocent but intelligent expression as he entered the witness box. For four years he had acted as entry clerk, and his manipulation of figures was considered something wonderful. He has been subject to gloomy spells at periods about two years apart, during which he would become a recluse for weeks at a time. He spoke of these.

"Just tell us about the last one," said the court.

"I feel something approaching heavily," said Munzer, "but I can take good care of myself here." Beads of perspiration stood on his brow, but he displayed no nervousness. "The queer sickness came on me again about a year ago," he said, "and this time I became much alarmed at the developments. I seemed to be approaching a state altogether different from the natural one. Anague-like feeling crept over me, beginning first in my brain. My mind did not seem to be growing weaker, but it seemed to be altering its functions materially. Presently the sight of a tool or anything with a blade would start every fibre and nerve in me to tingling, and I became afraid of myself—afraid for my friends.

"I felt an impulse growing upon me to harm or kill. I knew what I was about. I recognized the faces of my friends. I had a cool control of my mental faculties. I was not out of my head in the least, but there was a desire which seemed to be muscular as well as mental, and wholly apart from my natural volitions. My father saw only the outside of this, and I dared not explain to him the complete revolution in my being. He sent me to Lake Geneva to be treated in a private institution there and now for seven months I have been there under the constant care of several experienced physicians. They have been unable to assist me. I grew worse. I knew it and realized the dread change. Never have I lost my senses. The doctors gave me chloroform, but I fear that it has hurt my nervous system, and served to augment that fearful development rather than cure it. I now insist that I be placed somewhere so I may be watched and treated differently. The week I have been here since I left Geneva I have not been home. I will not go there. I believe that some rapid change for the worse would take place immediately should I go back. This mania would unman me and force me to do that which I have been battling against. I would kill them. I might kill myself, and yet I would know what I was about."

The story itself was not so very different from what one might expect to hear from a man who felt himself becoming insane. What terrified the jurors was the complete change in his features as he proceeded. From an innocent, harmless expression at the beginning, they changed to one of extreme cunning and malignity. As he proceeded, deep lines appeared in the cheeks, beside the nose. The corners of the mouth became drawn, the forehead wrinkled as an old man's, and his voice actually changed. The words came from the chest, and in fact the entire aspect of the man was changed. He bent forward in his chair, his shoulders stooped, and his eyes became watery. When the narrator reached that portion of his recital, where he spoke of killing, his face was sinister enough to frighten the spectators.

"That will do," said the Judge, in a husky voice. Munzer was startled at the command. He looked up wildly, then fell back in his chair, half exhausted, with a sigh. Tears fell down his cheeks. The wrinkles disappeared from his forehead, the fiendish expression left his face, and a minute more he was the young man, Harry Munzer, again with the innocent face.

The jury brought in a verdict finding him insane.
