

Commendable Caution

It is noteworthy that in the key section of his budget speech devoted to federal-provincial relations, Finance Minister Gordon cautioned Quebec that existing tax-sharing arrangements ought to be improved "but always within the letter and spirit of our constitution." And even so, Mr. Gordon made it clear that "the Federal Government is no less pressed for sources of revenue than are the provincial governments."

There was a further consideration that had a bearing on this subject, the minister added. That was the responsibility the Federal Government had in the matter of ensuring adequate production and employment throughout the country. Fiscal policy is an important means of achieving this objective. He added that Prime Minister Pearson would be outlining the Federal Government's position in greater detail at the next federal-provincial fiscal conference, to be called before the end of the year.

These statements will not be pleasing to Quebec, which has been making demands that would completely disrupt the present system of tax sharing arrangements between Ottawa and the provinces. Premier Lesage's demands are for 25 per cent of income and corporation taxes and 100 per cent of succession duties, and for federal withdrawal from joint expenditure projects in which the smaller provinces are vitally concerned. The budget makes no reference to them specifically, but what it says is interpreted by the Montreal Gazette as meaning that the Quebec "ultimatum" is not acceptable to Ottawa.

If that is the case, we shall have reason to be thankful in this part of the country. We want the benefits under the tax sharing agreements increased, not diminished. We want the joint expenditure plans continued, not abandoned. The Gazette is alarmed that Mr. Gordon should stress the Government's intention to retain wide control over the taxing powers of the country in order to influence fiscal policy decisively; we see therein one of the most commendable features of his budget statement.

Too Much Apathy

"After watching Canadian streets during the past few Victoria Days and Dominion Days," remarks the Sarnia Observer, "one comes to the unwilling conclusion that what Canada needs is not so much a new flag as an awareness of the one we have."

This is very true, and it may have a very direct bearing on the controversial "flag issue" when it comes up for consideration at Ottawa. Those who are agitating for a flag shorn of its historic traditions are not apathetic; they are campaigning all the time. Undoubtedly they will cite the indifference shown by so many Canadians to the flying of the Union Jack or the Red Ensign as evidence that these flags are unwanted symbols of the past. This is not the case, but whose fault is it?

that they are not in evidence—even on public buildings—on such occasions as national holidays? The new-flag agitators are a mixed lot. They are in agreement only in their determination to get rid of what they call "the badge of servitude" on the flags we have. More than 2,000 new designs have been registered in Ottawa. Right now a competition among artists is in progress. Up to now the designs have been mostly amateurish; but, as our Sarnia contemporary says, when some of our modern artists get going the abstract children of their dreams could, if one be adopted, see us marching to the next defense of freedom under a flag looking like a cross between a Christmas necktie and a bright linoleum floor covering. Nothing so far shown by those who believe they have the answer has the dignity, beauty, or symbolism to usurp the flag we now call ours and which has the endorsement of the veterans who followed it and fought under it.

"There is enough history, glory and tradition attached to the flag today," adds The Observer, "to warrant something more than a mere desire for change, under whatever guise it comes, to alter it to something which will mean less to most Canadians than one of the gaudy bits of bunting flown over some new nations carved from the African jungles." Yes, but let's show that we think so, in keeping it flying!

The Force Of Habit

Good luck to Health Minister Judy LaMarsh in her efforts to "kick" the smokers habit. As of last week, she discontinued a practice which got her into an embarrassing situation in Hamilton recently, where she spoke on the Government's concern with the cigarette problem.

"In the past few weeks," she told her Hamilton audience, "I have frankly been stunned by the rising wave of public concern over smoking and the resulting deluge of questions in the Commons. More important, perhaps, is the stack of incriminating evidence which is piling up on my desk of the relationship between cigarette smoking and lung cancer. I am giving consideration to the consultation with all interested groups to work out a possible program, particularly regarding the education of our youth with respect to this public health problem."

Miss LaMarsh confessed that as soon as she had sat down, she incautiously "lighted up." She had long been a "two-pack a day" person, and force of habit was strong.

"I guess perhaps I'm not completely convinced that the devastating mortality figures for men apply in the same awful measure to us girls," she told an Ottawa Journal reporter. "But that's rationalizing, isn't it? Maybe I'd better tell you I'm thinking of quitting."

That was last week. And now she's off the weed, for keeps; at least she hopes to be. We can all sympathize with her in her heroic efforts to give the kind of leadership that is expected of her. Many of us, as we reach for another flag, that there are compensations in not being in the limelight in public these days—at least not in the Health Department.

EDITORIAL NOTES

"We do a lot of interesting in our congregations for doctors and nurses, magistrates and judges, and all who are set in authority over us. They are all so socially acceptable. We should pray for garbage collectors, dish-washers, men who clean out cow stables and workers in sewage disposal plants. They probably do more to prevent disease and maintain health than all the doctors and nurses in the country."—United Church Observer.

London reports that Prime Minister Macmillan appears unfringed by the Profumo affair. "When you have been a soldier or minister of state in two wars, passed from the Edwardian era into the bubbling pot of the atomic age, enjoyed triumphs and endured defeats in government," remarks the Ottawa Journal, "you don't ruffle easily. The best politicians are philosophers as well as fighters. Otherwise they would ruffle themselves into early insanity."

What we're all waiting for

WHAT WE'RE ALL WAITING FOR

OTTAWA REPORT by Patrick Nicholson

What Canadian Foreign Aid Means

"When I recently described as 'niggardly' our aid to underdeveloped nations, I expected a good deal of comment. But the flood of letters which reached me served to show that Canadian people are far more generous than their government. I was most impressed with your article, 'Wanted: Niggards.' Surely the majority of Canadians cannot be so small and uncharitable as not to agree with you. But for the grace of our Lord, We could be 'existing' in Asia, not 'living in affluence' in Canada. Can you suggest anything for the average Canadian to do, besides writing to our own M.P.?"

Mrs. Luke closed by expressing a wish to be held as far sighted here. "I'm very much afraid that soon it will be too late to O.P.E.S. help — it will not be in our power any longer."

CANT WE AFFORD IT?

Several readers wrote to suggest that, since our government is accumulating a deficit year after year, we cannot afford to give away more money. "You consider giving away $48,000,000," wrote E. E. Gianfield, of Welland. "To me that is a pretty large sum. How can you figure that we should give away more?"

I replied to that letter, to try to explain some very interesting points raised by reader Gianfield. I described that Canada gives as aid to needy countries not cash, but Canadian-made goods or Canadian-grown food. The effect of our foreign aid programme is a sort of year-round "winter works program" providing jobs for Canadians.

"Suppose we save, on the same conditions, an extra $200 million each year. That money would be spent by the government in Canada and it would create more employment in Canada. Much of it would come back to the government in the form of taxes, corporation taxes, and income taxes, and would be paid by manufacturers on their products or by income tax payers by factory workers or farmers on their earnings. It would, in fact, be something like a pump-priming operation for Canada; and would not effectively reduce the size of the price tag."

THE TRUTH OPENS EYES

My explanation went on at length to explain other points, which evidently proved a complete answer. "Your letter was quite an eye opener for me." E. Gianfield replied from Welland. "Now I understand what this foreign aid means, as long as it means giving Canadian goods instead of, as I thought, giving money. I am all for it. My work days are over as I am going on 74, but I like to see our country prospering and men working. When friends grumble about all we give away, I can now tell them what it means. I appreciate the trouble you went to in writing to explain so fully to me." Other letters from readers without exception favoured the Canadian attitude of Canada as a world-wide Good Samaritan; some rightly praised the work being done in this field by voluntary organizations, such as the "Save the Children Fund," and the Unitarian programme of food and medical aid to India and other countries; and the United Nations relief programme to which Canada contributes.

It is $48 million a niggardly contribution to foreign aid? Can we afford it? That figure is approximately the same as British Columbians spent on beer last year; the same as Quebec, spent on whisky; slightly more than the federal government paid out to subsidize the storage of grain which Canadians could neither eat nor sell.

Grass, Glass And Mummies

National Geographic Society

Papermakers nowadays can't get grass, glass and filaments of fungi into white sheets of paper. A paper mill in Ceylon uses 14,000 tons of grass, glass and filaments of fungi to produce paper. The mill uses 14,000 tons of grass, glass and filaments of fungi to produce paper. The mill uses 14,000 tons of grass, glass and filaments of fungi to produce paper.

Wisconsin's Institute of Paper Chemistry has developed a glossy printing paper from the three-laminated filaments of fungi. Through most paper still comes from cloth and the woody pulp of spruce, pine, poplar, and hemlock, countries without coniferous forests have turned to other cellulose-yielding sources.

SUGAR CANE STATIONERY

An American firm, Parsons and Whittemore, leads the world in developing pulp and paper mills that use exotic fibers. Proving that almost any bark can produce paper from local sources, their engineers have built mills in India, Argentina, Egypt and elsewhere that convert residue sugar cane or bagasse into fine printing paper.

Mills in Mexico, Pakistan, France, and Russia process barks, wheat rice, corn stalks, and elephant grass. Other countries utilize sisal, hemp, and various types of bark, and pest moss.

The diversity of paper-making materials is not limited to Canada; and would not effectively reduce the size of the price tag. "Your letter was quite an Indignant About What?

Globe and Mail, Toronto

Mr. Robert Thompson, the National Leader of the Social Credit Party, made a show of rightness indignation in the House of Commons last week. Mr. Max Ferguson, a Canadian Broadcasting Corporation performer, had engaged in satire on political events, notably United States Canadian relations and Mr. Thompson was shocked that the privately owned CBC carried such a broadcast.

The obvious answer to Mr. Thompson is that we need not be so sure satire, the friend of public affairs, presenting important issues in a refreshingly new and stimulating way, is a right on vital subjects. The interesting aspect of Mr. Thompson's which used them as fuel for locomotives.

Today, quality paper can be made from any wood pulp. The United States alone uses 41,200,000 tons of paper each year, or 457 pounds per person.

The Poets' Corner

The RED ENSIGN

Treasured flag of this great nation. How we love the Red Ensign, beneath its streaming color. Smiles the land that's yours and mine.

Dear old flag that led us safely through those days of blood and cheer. Our troops and brought us victory. When the world was dark with fears.

May we ever bow in reverence. When it waves o'er land and sea; For the Union Jack means justice. Peace and love, and liberty.

Let us rally round its standard. As our fathers did of yore. Proudly mark its storied history. In the years of peace and war.

Let us keep the old flag flying. It has stood so long of time. For so many as try to change it. With our new and strange design.

Menopause Not A Worry

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen Dr. Robert H. G. Brown, a Gynecologist, makes comments on a new article discussing the importance of improvement in the menopause.

"One detail of which you may not be aware is that many belts are made of steel with holes 16 or more inches apart. This is unfortunate because the person can pull right out of such a contraction. Far better, I have been told, if the spacing is about 14 inches. This will give a good effect to the belt so it can grab the hip bones when deceleration occurs. It will also pull forward, with no damage to the abdominal organs."
