Women In Public Life Listed In B. & P. Magazine

The authoritative list of women in public life in Canada has been published in the May-June issue of the Business and Professional Woman magazine.

The following letter explains the purpose of compiling the list. This list, now in its fourth annual edition, is compiled by the Survey and Research Committee of The Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs. According to the terms of reference (set out in By-Law XI, Section C, Paragraph 8) under which this list is prepared, the purpose is to promote the status of women by focussing interest and attention upon the important part they play in the public life of Canada.

In order that some uniformity of listing and criteria for judging suitability of names might be worked out, The Provincial Representatives (who, of course, report for their respective provinces) and the National Chairman have attempted to set up standards and a system of categories. It is hoped that this will enable non-members of our organization to make use of the list more easily. It is also hoped that the publication of this list will encourage additional women to seek public office.

Respectfully submitted,
NAZLA L. DANE,
 National Chairman, (Toronto).

The following is the list from Prince Edward Island. The provincial representative was Miss

Mothers And Daughters Hold A.C.G.I.T. Banquet At Church

The annual A.C.G.I.T. Mother and daughter Banquet of the Charlottetown United Baptist Church was held in the lower church hall on Monday evening with thirty-eight guests, mothers and daughters present.

Seated at the head table were Rev. H. L. Mitton and Mrs. Mitton; Miss Laura Bain, retired missionary to India; Mrs. Walter Baker; Mrs. Trevor Hansen, president of the Dr. Zella Clark Mission Group; Jeanne Hansen, C.G.I.T. secretary; Mr. R. J. Rupert, Superintendent of the Sunday School; Gail Currie, C.G.I.T. president and her mother, Mrs. Robert Currie. Table decorations were of tulips and daffodils, flanked by blue and white tapers.

Thanks was offered by Mrs. Mitton and Mrs. C. T. Vallis led a short sing-song, followed by the introduction of guests and mothers. Toasts were proposed to the Queen; to the Church by Evelyn Manuel, responded to by Rev. H. L. Mitton and to the mothers by Rose Vallis, with response by Mrs. Harold Jenkins. Carol Ann Ward thanked the ladies of the Dr. Zella Clark Mission Group who catered for the banquet.

All those present then participated in a candle lighting service and as the light was passed from one to another around the circle each one was asked to remember the words of Jesus "I am the light of the world" and to pledge themselves to work henceforth with Him, giving time, money and prayer that those who walk in darkness may find the light of life. The service closed with the Mizpah benediction.

CHILDHOOD CHARM

A frothy sweetness, attuned to fashion, marks some of the clothes designed for little girls. The best designers never sacrifice the fresh charm and appeal of childhood in the interest of fashion. Celeste does a sheer organza dress that expresses this idea neatly. It is sleeveless, with a square neckline. Exquisite panels of imported eyellet embroidery and Val lace rim the neckline and arms, and encircle the bodice above the waist. Under the persimmon red organza is an underdress of white cotton broadcloth with a nylon tulle frill, pretty enough to fare forth on its own.

Past Noble Grand's Club Have Lovely Afternoon Tea

A very delightful and most successful afternoon tea was held in the Odd Fellows' building, Sydney street, on Saturday, May 24, under the auspices of Alpha Rebekah Past Noble Grand's Club.

The tea table was covered with an exquisite hand-drawn linen cloth and centred with a large bowl of snapdragon and carnations flanked by tall ivory tapers in silver candlesticks.

During the first hour Mrs. Ruby Houle, C.D.A. and past president of Maritime Rebekah Assembly, and Mrs. Jean Crockett, past president of Maritime Rebekah Assembly, poured, and during the second hour Mrs. Lettie Gill and Mrs. Matilda Fritzell, district deputy president. Those replenishing and serving were all past noble grands.

The guests were received by the club president, Mrs. Pearl MacKay, and ushered into the banquet room by Miss Hilda Harper, Miss Ethel Sutherland and Miss Mabel Worth.

The lounge and banquet room were resplendent with baskets of tulips and spring blossoms. The soft piano music rendered by Mrs. John A. MacNair, the beautiful flowers, the spring costumes and the bright sunshine outside all contributed to make this, the first social event to be held in this newly decorated building, a very festive and memorable occasion.

Arrangements for this enjoyable function were made by the club executive under the chairmanship of the president, Mrs. MacKay. The variety table, in charge of Mrs. Lauretta White and Mrs. Lul Nicholson, added much to the success of the undertaking. During the afternoon, guests were escorted to the lodge room on the second floor and many were the comments made on its lovely appearance.

MARY HAWORTH

Absence Is A Hardship

Dear Mary Haworth: My husband's work has taken him away from home for 18 months. We correspond regularly, of course, and I have taken a job to make the time pass more quickly.

Sometimes the loneliness seems unbearable; and I keep busy, wearing myself out, so that I will not think so much.

I have heard the old saying: "Absence makes the heart grow fonder." But is this true? Will things be the same after he comes back?

We have always been very close, and now it seems I am building a life for our little daughter and myself away from him. This is the first time we have been apart since we married. I seem to be living only for the day he returns—meanwhile unable to take much interest in anything.

What do you think of couples being separated this way, due to jobs, etc.? Does it make them closer, appreciate each other more? Or what? Thank you for the favor of an early reply. L.P.

ABSENCE A HARDSHIP

Dear L.P.: In the case of emotionally well-balanced, mentally mature persons, capable of forming positive and enduring attachments (not mere childish self-concerned clinging), it may be that absence of the beloved tends to make the heart grow fonder.

But even so, even amongst morally steadfast couples, it is necessary to make a real conscious effort to keep alive a sense of complete belonging. Each must contribute faithfully to a mutual fund of interests, that can be mentally shared, during long absence from one another. That is, if sympathetic understanding and mutual "other" awareness are to be maintained. This is the essence of affectional closeness.

But in honesty we must face the fact that separation, for a lengthy period, is indeed a hardship and a hazard to the average man's relationship to his wife, and vice versa. And the earlier in marriage the separation occurs, the greater the risk that they will drift apart, emotionally, and thus will feel stronger to each other—or alien in spirit—when they meet again.

CHRONIC INSECURITY

Your desperate sentiment of living only for the day your husband returns is symptomatic of personality problems, quite aside from his absence. I think, it suggests that you are bothered by

KELLY'S CROSS W. I.

The members of this Institute met at the home of the secretary on Friday evening, May 9th, when nine members answered the roll call by paying a dime. There were also present, five visitors.

The president, Mrs. Maurice Bradley, occupied the chair and conducted the meeting. The sick committee reported all sick were visited and the treasurer gave her report.

The new sick committee: Mrs. Clarence Curley and Mrs. Russell Nantes.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Frances MacDonald on June 9th. At this meeting plans will be made for the district convention.

The lunch committee are Mrs. John Molyneux and Mrs. Ambrose Monaghan. Lunch was then served by the hostess and the remainder of the evening was spent on institute work.

chronic insecurity feelings, in respect to love; and also that you have a marked dependency bias. In short, you aren't a self-confident, self-reliant, happy nature, even in the best of circumstances—so the present trial seems inordinately hard to bear.

A grown-up character in the same circumstances might have a continuing sense of living with a handicap—as if the right arm were missing—but an inner adjustment would be made. A certain stoicism would develop; and life would be going ahead, having daily significance in the here-and-now—with certain time set aside, systematically, for cultivating friendship (via mail) with the absent spouse.

It is possible that you are trying to make your correspondence with your husband a major substitute for his company. You may invest too much thought and feeling in a diffuse way, in this thread of communication—for example, making mental notes of what to tell him or recalling what he has written, during most of your waking time. In short, reveries of this type may be taking the place of meaningful interchange with friends, neighbors and relatives, day-to-day.

The remedy for heartache is, get interested in helping others; in relieving their needs; in sharing their woes. A first step in that direction is to join a church group devoted to neighborly good works. Ask your pastor for guidance. Such enterprise will tend to get your mind off self, reduce your tension, add zest to your letters—and speed the passage of time. M.H.
