MONTREAL, May 15th—The satisfaction that comes from a cake "well done" is one of the big thrills of home-baking. And cake-baking is really fun, once you've found the way to have wonderful cakes every time. I mean SWANS DOWN CAKE FLOUR. That's the way to have cakes that please the family and delight the cook. You see, Swans Down is the cake flour that's made from the softest of winter wheat—sifted and resifted until 27 times as fine as ordinary flour. It is especially made for better cakes. And remember—men love Swans Down cakes and the girls who bake them.

There Are At Least Thirteen good reasons why the big "13-ounce" bottle of HEINZ TOMATO KETCHUP is your "best buy". Just compare it with the 11-ounce bottle of some brands—and see how little extra you pay for Heinz quality. For Heinz Tomato Ketchup is a tantalizing blend of rich, vine-ripened "Aristocrat" tomatoes, fragrant spices and the vinegar that has made Heinz pickles famous. It's sweetened with pure, granulated sugar... and vapour-vacuum-sealed for freshness. Those are just a few of the good reasons why Heinz Ketchup is such a flavour-value. Tasting it will give you the most convincing "reason" of all... so I'd suggest you do!

"Beauty Is As Beauty Does." Zipp!... and they're on or off with the greatest of ease. LIGHTNING SLIDE FASTENERS are such a good idea for summer slipcovers. Slipcovers come off in a jiffy for cleaning or washing—Lightning zippers are rustproof and wash perfectly—then, zip them on again just as quickly and as smooth as you please. And with Lightning's exclusive automatic lock to hold them snug, covers fit like upholstery. On your pillows or covers, use Lightning—there is no locking pin to stab or snag, and they can never wriggle open or creep up, even though sewn in upside down, as you must for chesterfield and chairs. Be sure to ask for Lightning Style 804 for all your cushions and slipcovers!

Don't Let A Lovely Spring Day Catch You With The "Blues". Chase them away with a glass of sparkling SAL HEPATICA before breakfast. And you'll agree—Sal Hepatica effervescent salts are pleasant to take—gentle as can be. When hubby or son isn't feeling "just right" either, suggest they try Sal Hepatica—it's been a faithful family laxative for over 60 years. Another beauty about Sal Hepatica is that you can use it safely merely as a refresher in the morning—or at night when your system feels the need of a more thorough remedy. So next time you're shopping—ask for a bottle of Sal Hepatica and send the box top or label, with your name and address, to me—Barbara Brent, Dept. M., 1411 Crescent St., Montreal, P.Q.—and I'll send you a FREE, generous size jar of MUM Cream Deodorant!

Grassless, stainless, snow-white vaginal suppositories—Zonitors are powerfully germicidal, yet absolutely safe to delicate tissues. Unholy Bond

By Cameron Dockery
CHAPTER ONE

Part Two
"It was a prematurely warm night. Janet sat at her desk by the elevator, her slim fingers adding last-minute entries to the stack of hospital charts before her.
Dr. Eynon lit his pipe and watched her a moment in silence. Suddenly he spoke—
"You take your nursing quite seriously, don't you, Miss Harris?"
"I do when I'm on duty, Dr. Eynon."
Some impulse prompted her to go on, though she knew it sounded impertinent. "You take being a doctor quite seriously, don't you?"
He looked surprised, but not offended. Before answering he ran his large hand through his thick sandy hair. "Yes, I guess I do. You see, it means a great deal to me."
He lit several matches and drew slowly on his pipe, which finally caught again. "You see, Miss Harris, I grew up in the shadow of a slag pile.
For the first time he looked directly into her eyes. They were hardly aware of it, a moment later, when the elevator stopped and Cliff Bronson stepped out.
Janet stared uncertainly at the two men beside the desk—
Cliff Bronson in a freshly starched intern's jacket, his stethoscope dangling professionally from his pocket. His eyes were puzzled and a little hurt as though discovering her talking with Dr. Eynon was like catching her in a deception. She wondered suddenly if that was what he thought. Only that afternoon she had told him that Eynon was hardly aware of her existence.
She'd have to explain that this was the first time she decided. It was the only way she could dispel that jealous light in Cliff's eyes. Then she caught herself up mentally... She wasn't engaged to Cliff; she really owed him no explanations of her conduct.
Dr. Eynon was still fooling with his pipe. He seemed completely unaware of any tension in the atmosphere.
The light over old Mr. Hartigan's door flashed on with startling abruptness and Janet rose briskly, thankful for the interruption.
As she moved down the bare, dark linoleum corridor she wondered what he wanted. Probably a mild sedative to make him sleep. Poor old man. He insisted on his rest, although it wouldn't be long before that was all he had. It was amazing he had lasted this long.

His weakened heart pumped along slowly as though each beat would be its last. Yet still he lingered.
She opened the door gently and smiled in at him.
He had switched on his bed lamp and now his wisened gnome-like face topped by feathery wisps of white hair crinkled into a welcoming grin.
"Janet, I want to make out a will."
She was startled out of her professional equanimity.
"Surely not tonight, Mr. Hartigan!"
"Yes, tonight. Right now." His bright eyes glittered determinedly. "Wouldn't it be better to wait until tomorrow, then I'll call your lawyer and he can draw up the proper papers?"
"No," he said vehemently. "Just what I don't want! J. D. is not going to approve of this will and he'd try to talk me out of it."
Satisfy him, she thought; he's a nice old gentleman and he deserves to be happy during his last days.
She crossed over to his dresser and selected some of his personal stationery. It was thick, expensive vellum, with Oakhart scrolled in gold at the top, beneath which was the family crest with gold acorns in one of the quarterings.
When she had bolstered him up with pillows and arranged the papers for him, he waved her away with a claw-like hand.
"Now you can go on about your business, my dear. I'll ring for you in about fifteen minutes."
A quarter of an hour later Mr. Hartigan's light flashed on and she went to his door. He looked up from a sheet of paper, now covered with his fragile, spidery writing.
"Now you've got to round up some witnesses for me—three of 'em. Anybody around?" he demanded querulously.
"There are two doctors out here, and myself, that makes three."
"Got to get someone else. I don't want you signing this document, Janet."
"Why not?"
