IN MEMORIAM

SANDRA ELIZABETH WILKIE Sandra Elizabeth, eight-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Wilkie, passed away at the Western Hospital in Alberton on Sunday evening, Feb. 11th, 1951. Sandra was apparently recovering from an attack of pneumonia when she suffered a relapse. Deep sympathy is extended to her parents and little sister, Donna Carol.

The funeral from the home of her parents on Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 13, was conducted by Rev. W. G. Fitzpatrick, assisted by Rev. W. C. Wilcox of Elmsdale Nazarene Church, who read the scripture, and Rev. J. M. Sheen of Elmsdale United Church, who led in prayer. Hymns sung were "Jesus Bids Us Shine", "When He Cometh" and "Safe in The Arms Of Jesus." A solo, "Shall We Meet Beyond The River" was beautifully rendered by Mr. Hampton Home of Elmsdale, with his accompanist Mrs. John Cameron, joining in the refrain.

Funeral bearers were Lebert Pridham, Robert Campbell, Henry Oliver and Hanson Oliver. The many beautiful flowers were borne by Everett Hudson, Arnold Hardy, Edgar Johnston, Lorne Leard, Laughlin Home and Hillard Bell.

Interment was in Hillcrest Cemetery.

PRACTICAL FLY-TYING BY T. HENN; MACMILLAN'S; $2.00. The winter is passing quickly and soon the ardent and ambitious anglers of the country will begin to look over their stock of angling equipment and to watch the calendar for the opening day of the fishing season. There will be heard again, as there has been heard before, arguments over the value of this or that fly in this or that river or lake. These arguments will not be settled. They never are. And different sorts of flies will be used in the same pools by experts who look with scorn upon the lure used by his competitors. This little book, however, will bring the magic of fly tying within the scope of those who do their fishing for trout and grise and salmon. Many drawings show the comparative simplicity of tying, the structure of a proper fly and the stages in dressing it.

One thing will be noted quickly. The author advocates tying without the use of a vise, saying it will enable the angler to achieve greater speed in his work and more ease of touch. Moreover it will teach him to do his tying at any spot, in camp or by a pool. The book is full of practical hints and recipes and dressings. It deals with all the tricks of using fur and feathers and silk, and instructs the tyro as to how a fly will look after it is thoroughly wet. One feels, after reading this book, that he can make up an irresistible fly as easily as any expert.

TITO AND GOLIAITH by Hamilton Fish Armstrong; Macmillan's; $4.00. The author is the editor of "Foreign Affairs" and, as such it is reasonable to expect that he knows as much about eastern Europe as any American. At any rate he has told a most absorbing story about Stalin and Tito. It may be that he is inclined to over-rate Tito's successful resistance to Goliath, but that remains to be seen. He classes Tito's defiance of the dictator as Stalin's greatest mistake and greatest surprise, and it has become, he says, next to the atom bomb, Stalin's greatest weakness.

It is stated that Stalin's ineffective struggle with Tito has split the Communist world and profoundly affected the power position of the Soviet Union. It is claimed that this happening has opened new avenues for hope for the oppressed masses of eastern Europe and that it has changed much of the Allies' planning for the immediate future. Such optimism is needed at a time like this when such books as "The 25th Hour" are so much in vogue in France and other European countries.

The author has given an amazing and most interesting picture of the present state of affairs in Europe. He discusses the origins, the development and the meaning of the trouble between Tito and Stalin. His story reveals fascinating sidelights on the persons involved in the drama of intrigue and violence that has added so much sorrow and dismay to the aftermath of World War 2, and he paints a fresh picture of what the conflict between the giants has meant to the people back of Tito. The play of dictators in diverting the public from the real miseries they cause by staging parades and celebrations and witch hunts is pointed out, and the evils brought about by force politics and rulers without conscience is bared for the world to see. It is doubtful if there has been anything as terrible in history as the struggle going on today behind the scenes. Certainly there has not been anything as diabolical. Mr. Armstrong calls a spade a spade, and his story is a good one.

THE BOLSHEVİK REVOLUTION by E. H. Carr; Macmillan's; $5.00. The average citizen wants to know what is going on in the world and he is more or less bewildered by the conflicting stories he hears in the streets and over the radio. Mr. Carr, having this situation in mind, has decided to do a story and history of Soviet Russia that will enlighten all who wish to be enlightened. He has begun an ambitious work, a full-length history, and this present Volume I deals with the Russians during the period 1917 to 1923. It will take two more volumes to complete the work. The second will be entitled "The Struggle for Power 1923-1928." It is expected that it will be published during the present year.

In his preface the author writes: "No sensible person will be tempted to measure the Russia of Lenin, Trotsky and Stalin by any yardstick borrowed from the Britain of Macdonald, Baldwin and Churchill or the American of Wilson, Hoover and Franklin Roosevelt. The historian of Soviet Russia will at every stage of his work be more than ordinarily conscious of the exacting character of the dual task imposed—to combine an imaginative understanding of the pulchre and purpose of his dramatic personae with an overriding appreciation of the universal significance of the action.... Politically, programme of the Bolsheviks involved an attempt to bridge the gap between autocracy and socialist democracy without the long experience and training in citizenship which bourgeois democracy, with all its faults, has afforded the west. Economically, it meant the creation of a socialist economy in a country which had never possessed the resources in capital equipment and trained workers proper to a developed capitalist order. These grave handicaps the victors of October revolution had still to overcome. Its history is the record of its successes and failure in this enterprise."

Mr. Carr has produced a very scholarly and interesting book backed by plenty of references. He takes two pages to name those who have assisted him, and he has produced the first real attempt in the English language to show the world what is going on and has gone on in Russia.
