History Of St. Mark's Church At Kensington

By L. E. T.

The first reference to the Kensington Anglican congregation to be found in the D. C. S. reports occurs in that of 1857, where it is stated that the Rev. J. H. Read, D.D., of St. Eleanors held services on alternate Sundays at Green's Shore (Summerside) and Barrett's Cross, (Kensington), and that he hoped "ere long to erect suitable buildings in both places for the solemn worship of Almighty God; again in the same year he makes mention of the good attendance at the Cross Roads. As there was then no Church building these services were held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Glover, who not only gave the use of their house but as good Anglicans had the baptisms of their large family of four sons and four daughters duly recorded in the first Register of St. Eleanors parish. William Glover and his wife Ann Wainmough are buried in the northwest corner of the old cemetery alongside the present St. Mark's Church on the Margate Road. In the Parish Register Dr. Read also recorded the baptism of George Beairto Sims in 1853, and Joanna Glover 1855, of Barrett's Cross. Both were well known in later years in this part of Prince County—Mr. Sims as a veterinarian, and Miss Glover as Postmistress in Kensington for almost 50 years. In 1860 Dr. Read reported that "the Church at the Cross Roads aided by our respected Diocesan and this Society (S.P.G.) was progressing slowly and he hoped with the further aid of the Society it would be fit for permanent use in this year."

Consecration

In 1863 Dr. Read wrote: "The two new churches at Kensington and Summerside have been used for Divine Service and it is hoped will be ready for consecration at the Bishop's next visit." This happy event took place sometime during the year 1863 and the new church was consecrated and dedicated to Saint Mark by the Right Rev. Hibbert Binney, 4th Bishop of Nova Scotia. At some unknown date in 1862 a public meeting was called in the schoolhouse (where now stands Dunning's garage) to select

Minister's Salary

In the year 1869 the Rector of St. Eleanors and Kensington reports that: "This year for the first time, Kensington contributed a fair proportion to the salary of the minister, several new communicants have been added, and the people as he went from house to house have received him more as a son than as a minister." In the D. C. S. Report of 1873 it is stated that the Church at Kensington "has with the consent of the Bishop been transferred to New London Parish," which was then under the rectorship of the Rev. J. C. Cox. The Rev. J. W. Forsythe was then the rector of St. Eleanors, replacing the Rev. Dr. Read who had gone to Milton.

Mr. Cox said in his report for that year that he "began holding services in the small church at Kensington on the 1st of June but did not assume the full charge of that church until the middle of September, when with the desire and consent of the former rector—J. W. Forsythe—the charge was wholly transferred to the Mission of New London," since which time services have been held in the Kensington Church twice a month.

Rev. O. S. Newnham followed Mr. Cox in the parish of New London in September of 1875. In his first report to the D. C. S. he says he "has a fair attendance at the Sunday services; also at the Wednesday evening services in Kensington." He also said: "It is my impression it would be a benefit to the mission if the parsonage now at New London would be moved to Kensington."

Progress Follows Railway

About this time, in the early 1870's, the narrow-gauge railroad was being built through this part of Prince County, which meant an increase in the population of Kensington; stores, tailor shops and blacksmith shops, and other places of business were established, and the church population would also increase during these years. In his next report—that of 1876—Mr. Newnham says: "The average attendance at Kensington is 70 persons; the collections and offertory was $42, and $160 toward benefit of the mission; and he adds: "The amount of work in this large and scattered parish is necessarily labourious but with God's blessing I have enjoyed good health, and although the thought of work unable to be accomplished is somewhat disheartening, still there is much that encourages and there are many pleasing signs of good being done."

The next rector, the Rev. T. B. Reagh of honoured memory, reports in 1881 that "Kensington, which has had regular services since May, promises much in time to come. Many outside of our own Communion have aided in maintaining the Pastor while the few church people have been more than liberal." In his next report Mr. Reagh says: "Services at Kensington have been well attended; some of the friends kindly gave a carpet for the enclosure of the Communion rail, a fair linen cloth and other things besides."

However, by that time a move was on foot to build a new church in Kensington which was shortly taken visible form. There is no record in any minute book about the disposition of the old church but it is known that it was bought by Mr. Alexander Cameron, now of Elmsdale, P. E. I., and taken down and incorporated into a dwelling house on the Summerside Road. (Mr. Cameron celebrated his 100th birthday on Christmas Day, 1951). Tenders were called for the erection of the new church and a meeting was held on June 17th, 1885, to open the tenders.

Building Costs

In the light of present day building costs the tenders seem extremely moderate. The following is the list: R. McNeil, $3200; Nathan McFarlane, $2495; Clark & Schurman, $2575; John Brown, $2000; W. Crozier & J. McKinnon, $1900; Nelson Evans, $1375, whose tender was accepted, but the church people provided considerable material and labour. A tea party was held that summer to raise funds and the names of the following ladies are recorded in the minute book as taking a leading part in the affair: Mrs. Matthew Sheen, Mrs. Thos. Walker, Mrs. Edwin Paynter, Mrs. Wm. Howard, Mrs. Carruthers, Mrs. Reagh, Mrs. Gordon Tuplin and Miss Glydon. We are glad to say that descendants of some of the estimable ladies are still active in the service of St. Mark's Church. The tea party was a success and realized $450. The new St. Mark's was opened for Divine service on August 29, 1881; the Rev. T. B. Reagh was the preacher. Mr. J. E. Harris was the architect of this beautifully proportioned little church and its furniture cost $2200, and was built on the site of the first church. Mr. Harris was also the architect of the stately St. James' Anglican Church in Mahone Bay where his brother, Canon E. A. Harris, was rector.

Rectorry Built

The Rectorry as it stands today was built the following year by the same contractor and its first occupants were Rev. T. B. and Mrs. Reagh and family of seven daughters. Mr. Reagh said in his report of 1882: "The new rectorry has been completed and we have lived in it for a few days, long enough, however, to find it both comfortable and convenient, but our enjoyment is somewhat marred by the unpleasant fact that there is a somewhat heavy debt—$1500, including land, fencing and well, etcetera. The parishioners have given both labour and materials free of charge."

The building of the rectorry was of course the concern of the whole parish but it was a major undertaking, nevertheless, for the Kensington people to build their church and contribute their full share to the building of the rectorry as well within two years; but the next year they had a parish tea party and raised $750, which reduced their debt appreciably. Mr. Reagh said in his report for 1883 "that the Kensington services were bright, hearty and well attended. The new St. Mark's Church was consecrated on the 9th of June, 1888, by Bishop Courtney. The Rev. Henry Harper of Port Hill, and the Rev. C. F. Lowe of Summerside assisted in the service. There were 65 candidates from the whole parish confirmed at this time. Bishop Courtney is still remembered with affection by many in New London Parish. (To be concluded)

DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Fearing a possible fresh outbreak of the hoof-and-mouth disease in Southwestern Saskatchewan, the Federal Government has sent two veterinary officers to aid those already in the Regina area. Rubber outfit worn by government inspectors combatting the disease, is modelled here by a reporter.

his accident, they must convince him that his friends do not consider a handicap a barrier to good fellowship. This job will take every bit of tact you teen-agers can muster, but surely there could be no more worthwhile project. If the boy is allowed to continue his attitude of withdrawal and seclusion, he'll grow up to be a maladjusted adult. It will be a while before he comes to accept his condition and learns to make the best of it, but nothing will help him during this period so much as devoted friends. Of course, you will also have to be careful to avoid, at least for the time being, those activities in which your friend cannot participate. In time, he'll probably be able to do anything the rest of the gang can do, but until that happy day it will be part of your diplomatic build-up to arrange pastimes suitable for his condition.

DEAR MISS DIX: I have been writing to a boy in service and my mother won't let me talk to other boys while he is away. Is she right? DOT

ANSWER: Someone in this situation is wrong, and I'm afraid it's your mother. Judging from your letter, you are very young and most definitely should not be tied down to one boy—present or absent. Your mother should encourage you to see other friends, and spend more time on your schoolwork.

DEAR MISS DIX: My husband died two years ago and I am very lonely. I am in my fifties and have met a fine man my age who is also lonely. Here is my problem. My first husband was a foreigner and whenever we had guests who were friends or relatives of his, they would converse in their native tongue, although they all spoke English beautifully. Though I knew they weren't talking about me I felt very uncomfortable and left out. The man I would like to marry is also of foreign birth and I know I would encounter the same situation, as it has already happened on several occasions. PAULA ANSWER: The obvious solution is for you to learn the language of your husband. With such a splendid opportunity to learn another tongue, you'd be foolish to neglect the chance. While you would probably never be as fluent as your husband and his friends, you could at least learn to follow a conversation.

It's an understandable form of nostalgia that prompts people to use their native tongue when together, even though they speak English fluently. This is a pleasure you should not deny your husband and, even if you do feel uncomfortable, be good natured about it. Don't be oversensitive about superficial things.
