Opening lead—king of clubs.

The play known as the double squeeze, although it may sound twice as complex as the single squeeze, is actually no more difficult to execute.

The conditions necessary for the double squeeze to operate are similar to those required for the single squeeze, the only difference being that both opponents are caught in a vise, instead of one. The terminology is different, not the execution.

The three main requirements for the squeeze remain the same. 1. Declarer must have all the remaining tricks except one. 2. A defender must have the responsibility of guarding two suits or cards. 3. There must be two-way communication when the squeeze card is led.

West took the king-ace of clubs and shifted to the jack of spades. East won and returned a spade. South then ran five trump tricks, at which point the remaining cards were those underlined in the diagram. All three conditions necessary for a squeeze position were present.

South led his last trump and West could not afford to discard the queen of clubs. He relinquished the nine of diamonds. The jack of clubs, having served its purpose as a threat card, was now discarded.

East had to contend with dummy's three of spades, and he also was compelled to discard a diamond. South then ran three diamond tricks to bring in the contract. Both defenders had been squeezed.

Examination of the play discloses that after the first three tricks South had nine winners left of the ten tricks to go, that is, only one loser. This condition is the one that first alerts declarer to the possibility of a squeeze.

Present also were two threat cards in dummy to hamstring the defense, the jack of clubs and three of spades. In addition, ready communication back and forth was available.

Against this combination of favorable circumstances the defenders were powerless to interrupt the merciless progress of the squeeze.

The play of the last trump, the squeeze card, a card many players are reluctant to release, was the straw that broke the back of the opposition.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

BEDTIME STORIES

Who Was Right?

Two folks who differ shouldn't fight.
It often happens both are right.
—Old Mother Nature.

"Folks are funny," said Peter Rabbit to Mrs. Perer, "That is, other folks are."

"Perhaps other folks think you are," retorted Mrs. Peter. "I do myself. It is funny to me why you want to leave the dear Old Briarpatch so much. Why anybody should want to leave a place of safety when there is no need for it I cannot understand."

Peter took no notice of this. He pretended not to hear it. "You ought to see Happy Jack Squirrel and his cousins at work over in the Green Forest. They don't work alike, and I don't see why. The funny part is, each thinks his way is best," said Peter.

"I guess they are like most people. How often do you find anyone who doesn't think his way is best? said Mrs. Peter.

"Folks are funny," said Peter Rabbit to Mrs. Peter.

"Do you know what Happy Jack Squirrel does with the nuts he finds?" Peter wanted to know.

"No, I don't. And I don't care what he does with them,' retorted Mrs. Peter somewhat sharply.

"He buries them," said Peter. "He buries them under leaves or in little holes he digs in the earth. He says that's the only right way to put nuts away for the winter."

Does he remember where he puts them all?" asked Mrs. Peter.

"He says he remembers near enough. He says he knows all the places that he has used for burying the nuts. And when he wants any he goes to one of these places and his nose will find the nuts for him. I think Chatterer the Red Squirrel has more sense. He puts all his supplies, a lot together, in holes in trees and logs and such places. I know of an old stump Chatterer has been using for a storehouse. He says that's the only way to put away supplies for the winter," explained Peter.

"That sounds sensible to me," said Mrs. Peter.

Peter stopped to scratch a long ear with a long hind foot. Then he scratched the other long ear with the other long hind foot.

"Happy Jack says that way is all wrong, and his big cousin, Rusty the Fox Squirrel, agrees with him. They say that supplies are not safe that way. If something happens to the storehouse all could be lost at one time," declared Peter.

Little Mrs. Peter nodded. "I should think that could happen,' said she.

"But that can't happen to him, Happy Jack said. Something might happen that might cause him to lose some, but not all. That is because they are all buried separately and scattered about. If in the winter he can't find some in one place he is sure to be able to find them in some other place," Peter continued.

"I wonder which is right; which is the best," said Mrs. Peter.

Peter shook his head. "I don't know," said he. "But I know which way I would cause if I were hunting for nuts and storing them away for the winter. Yes, sir, I know which way I would choose."

"Which way?" asked Mrs. Peter.

"The one with the least work," said Peter promptly.

PRIME MINISTER RESIGNS

PNOMPENH, Cambodia (Reuters) — King Suramarit of Cambodia has accepted the resignation of the Indochina state's prime minister, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the palace announced Monday. Prince Sihanouk's statement, according to a state radio broadcast, said the reasons for his resignation from the government were primarily budget problems.
