TEETER'S WINTER HOME

Grant winter all its boasted zest I still love summer much the best.
—Teeter the Sandpiper.

Teeter the Spotted Sandpiper means just what he says and manages to keep in summer weather most of the year. It means a lot of traveling, but Teeter likes to travel. Bobbing and teetering on the Big Rock in the Smiling Pool on a summer day he has more than once scooped at Grandfather Frog who delights in pretending to be very old and very wise.

"What good are his gogly eyes like his if they never see anything of the Great World?" asks Teeter. "Grandfather Frog may look wise, but how can anyone be wise who sits in the sun on a big green lily pad a quarter of the year and sleeps in the mud the rest of the year?"

This year Teeter had started south a little earlier than usual. He had no special reason for doing so. Perhaps it was because his family cares were over a little earlier than usual and he thought a change of scene would be pleasant. He had hatched four eggs and then watched over four lively youngsters who really needed a lot of watching to keep them out of trouble and danger.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it!

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, acrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

You see almost as soon as they were out of their shells they could run, swim and dive, do everything but fly. Like so many children they wanted to be doing things all the while. And because he had had to do all the work of raising the family, Mrs. Teeter seemed to feel that when she had laid the eggs she had done all that should be expected of her. Teeter wasn't at all sorry when the last of the four youngsters found his wings and without even saying good-by flew off to find out for himself what the Great World was like. That very day Teeter, with a happy feeling of relief because of the end of his long vacation.

He didn't start south at once. For a few days he just wandered about along the shores of the Big River. He went up the Big River before heading down to where the Big River joins the Great Ocean. There he joined some friends and they lingered for a short time.

It was there at the mouth of the Big River that Plunger the Osprey, often called Fish Hawk, brought a fish ashore on a big rock beside which Teeter was bobbing and bowing as if he was having hard work to get his balance on his slim legs. They were old acquaintances.

"I see you are on your way," said Plunger.

Teeter nodded. "I'm on my way. I don't like cold weather. I suppose you are on your way also," he replied.

"Yes and no," replied Plunger.

HERE'S PAR-TIK-LARLY JUICY SON—

North's hand, even the king, would afford an excellent chance for a slam. South said that it was very unlucky that so much "duplication" had existed in North's ace-king of hearts.

There was some justice in this observation, but if South had investigated slam possibilities in the correct way, he would have discovered the actual state of affairs and thus avoided the hopeless slam. This was not a hand for the Blackwood Convention! South was interested in North's ace, quantitatively only if North had two; if he had only one ace, the baffling problem would arise: which one?
