

Discount Houses Threaten End To Little Bookshops

By DARDEN CHAMBLISS NEW YORK (AP)—Bye-bye bookshops? That's the question being raised these days by many American booksellers watching the growth of the discount houses into their field.

S. C. Sheldon, manager of a book store in Pasadena, Calif., said: "The book-buying public wants more and lower prices. They want a complete and outstanding selection of books. They also want competent service from people who really know books."
