MR. AND MRS. ROBERT HARVEY
Hiscott-Harvey Marriage Is Solemnized At St. Paul's

Amid baskets of fall flowers Carol Ferne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hiscott, North Rustico, became the bride of Robert Bruce, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Harvey, Crapaud, in a double ring ceremony at 11 High Noon at St. Paul's Anglican Church, Charlottetown. Reverend F. Louis Elias, L. S. T. Rector, officiated. Leslie Hiscott, brother of the bride, and Peter Tawel, brother-in-law of the groom, ushered the guests to pews marked with maple leaves and rust satin bows. Organist, George A. Thompson, FRCO, (CHM) ARCM, accompanied the choir as they sang in procession. "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden," prior to the ceremony, and "O Father All Creating" during the signing of the register. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of white brocade, fashioned with empire waistline, long lily-point sleeves and A-line skirt. A detachable cathedral train fell gently from the empire waistline. Her five-tiered waist-length veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a headpiece of brocaded roses and lace. She wore cultured pearl earrings as her only jewelry and carried a cascade bouquet of orange delight roses and white feathered carnations. The bride was attended by Ora MacNeill, RN, as maid of honor and Genevieve Duffy, and Donna MacArthur, niece of the bride,

MARY HAWORTH Though Parents Of Five Pair Are Incompatible

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I are of different backgrounds; his, middle European, mine, melting-pot America. He is a doctor; I did not finish college. . . . After the birth of our third child he was seeing "someone else" regularly. When I found out, and he wouldn't stop it, I left him. He soon prevailed on me to return -- to gradually worsening conditions. Then he hit me so hard I was hospitalized and I left him again. This time he brought an appeal from his dad, wanting to see the children and me before my father-in-law died. . . . Again we reconciled: later his dad did die, and after the funeral things went back to "normal" for us. I was trapped with no money, and "no nothing" from my husband, as usual. Using borrowed money, I left a third time. . . . When again he sought reconciliation, he promised to do what ever I asked; and I insisted that he see a counsellor. (Already I had consulted various clergy, a clinical psychologist, a psychiatrist and a marriage counsellor.) He gave up his girl, took a residence in another community, where we are today, bought us a house here, bought furniture, sent the eldest child to private school, gave me a car and permission to write checks when I need money. He is kind, courteous, tries hard to control his temper; in short, he seems miraculously transformed. . . . So what is my complaint? Well, three years and two babies (that he wanted) later, I am at my wits' end. He has arranged to be on duty or on call six nights a week at the local hospital. Every other weekend he goes to his home town (where his girl lives) to promote collection of fees still owed him. . . . In his spare time, if any, he goes to the library, shops, visits or plays golf. Meanwhile I sit home with five children, feeling sorry for myself. . . . I am beginning to hate him for rejecting me; I feel humiliated in staying with him. However, I don't want to quit again, because of my lovely family and because he does support us and claims to love us. But do his actions confirm his claim? I feel I can't live out my life with a man who is forever trying to avoid me. . . . But am I crazy to get upset by it? S. Y. DEAR S. Y.: It is probably a toss-up as to which of you, man or wife, is the more difficult partner. . . . Your off-again, on-again, cat-and-mouse game, of leaving and returning, as your means of getting in a telling blow, occasionally, in perennial combat with your husband, suggests that you are an unstable character. A stable character usually endures to the limit, then strikes for change and proceeds from there not turning back. . . . As an unstable character, with all the emotional immaturity and moody ups-and-downs that the condition embodies, you probably are an almost intolerably fatiguing associate in double harness, whatever your maternal virtues and good intentions may be. . . . Thus it's possible that your husband long since realized that the only way he can survive the strain of the partnership and keep the marriage a going concern, for the children's sake and to fulfill his sense of duty, is by living as remote from you as he can manage, within the format of "staying married." . . . As for the two children born since your latest reconciliation, three years ago (and the babies he wanted, you say) perhaps he hoped that additional children would somehow make up to you for his cagey, defensive, remoteness; and, in any case, give you something "real" to occupy your time and energies, that he doesn't care to have focussed on him. . . . Aside from eluding your alternately raging and piteous demands to be emotionally well loved by him, his attitude toward you is generally considerate -- "miraculously transformed", you say. Which means, surely, that he is working heroically at reform. In short, "he will" to be a good husband. . . . But sweetheart love, such as you clamor for, cannot be "willed" into being, nor faked. . . . Unfortunately your self-complacating disposition to hate and belabor him for sidestepping you sexually is bound to increase his weary distaste for your society. . . . Do his actions square with his claim that he loves his family? In my view, yes, they do, insofar as he can, with real integrity, invest himself in the task of taking care of his own, to the best of his ability. . . . If you can't live with that, then that's your problem to solve, not his. And you can solve it only by After which the marriage might become true marriage, made possible by "miraculous" improvement in your personality. M. H. Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Guardian.

LOOK TO THE FUTURE
HALIFAX (CP) -- CNR express freight officials opened a three-day seminar Monday to discuss express freight requirements in Canada for as far ahead as 1972. Represented at the discussions are representatives from the railway's 18 districts extending from St. John's, Nfld., to Vancouver, the Ontario Northland Railway and from the railway's European office in Wotton. Chairman of the sessions is David W. Blair of Montreal, assistant vice-president of the railway's highway services. Mr. Blair is former manager of the CNR Maritime area.

ELLEN'S DIARY

A Journey To The Fair Interrupts Our Routine

And then recently, the round of the fairwife, it has pleased us to follow happily all up the years, was broken by a call. It came to us over land and river, and Strait and Island farmland. And whether or not it was the low of a heifer, as in a gentle lullaby she hushed her calf to sleep in the strange stable they had come to, from the joys of the open range at Alderlea, we had heard, which had decided the break, we could not determine. Or was it not a wish to see how Mack was faring, he that is a comfort at home, and quite as faithful in his role of herdsman away, which had suggested our going? Or was it to meet again the one girl of the house across the lane, who attends school in that old garrison city? In any event, when an invitation came from kin-folk, who also had members of their registered herd of cattle in competition there, to join them in the trip, we came at weekend to be one among the many Islanders in attendance at the Atlantic Winter Fair.

IDA BAILEY ALLEN Tasty Mushroom Touch Really Fixes Your Hash

Good news! Today in Florida, there is a total of approximately 54 million citrus trees, plus or minus new plantings or trees removed during the past two or three years, growing on 800,000 acres. It is estimated that more than 35 million, or about 65 per cent of the total, are bearing trees.

Record Expected
The orange crop estimate for 1966-67 season is expected to hit a record of 120 million boxes. The grapefruit estimate for 1966-67 is 38 million boxes. It is impossible to estimate prices now, for, of course, they will depend on the actual amount of fruit harvested. Barring freezes, and unforeseen weather conditions, an abundance of fruit would mean low prices.

BAKED SLICES CANNED CORNED BEEF HASH (With Mushroom Sauce for Luxury Touch)
2 (16 oz.) cans corned beef hash (well-chilled)
1 large egg
1 tsp. milk
1/4 tsp. seasoned salt
1 c. fine dry not-seasoned bread crumbs
1 tsp. cooking oil
1 recipe Mushroom Sauce (follows)
6 sprigs parsley
Open cans of corned beef hash at both ends. Slide out contents, without breaking, onto a cutting-board. Slice each canful of hash crosswise into 3 sections. Beat egg with milk and seasoned salt. Brush over corned beef slices one at a time; then coat lightly with crumbs, patting them on. Spoon oil into medium-size baking pan, and heat. Then add corned beef slices.
Bake 25 min. in mod. oven, 375 degrees F., or until browned. Turn at the end of 10 min. Serve on a warm platter, the mushroom sauce spooned over and around. Garnish: parsley.

Mushroom Sauce for Corned Beef Patties: Slice 1/4 lb. fresh mushrooms profile-fashion down through the stems. In a 10" skillet, put 1 tsp. cooking oil, 1/2 c. beef broth, or water and 1/2 envelope beef-broth powder; add a whiff of powdered nutmeg. Add mushrooms, making one layer. Cover. Simmer 7 min or until most of the water evaporates. Turn mushrooms once and brown slightly. Meantime, into separate saucepan, turn contents of 10 1/2-oz. can of mushroom soup. Add 1/2 c. measure water. Cook-stir until boiling. Stir into cooking mushrooms. Serve at once.

ATOMIC-POWER TRAINS EDMONTON (CP) -- An electric railway powered by atomic energy was forecast Friday by Donald Gordon, president of the Canadian National Railways. "Diesel power is not the final answer. I don't think we'll ever see the day when each engine has atomic power but I do think we'll see the day when atomic power provides the electricity for an electric railway."
