Synopsis

Gary Tallman, young petroleum engineer from Alabama, misses his bus in Texas and Mona Mason, wife of a cattle rancher, gives him a lift. Gary is injured when her car crashes in a ditch and the Masons nurse him back to health. He falls in love with Mona's daughter Adelaide but, unwilling to propose until he has a job, Gary plans to leave for Mexico. Meanwhile he suspects there is oil on the Mason land and Hickey is employed to drill a well. Harvey persuades Gary to remain until tests are made. Oliver Kimball, Harvey's son-in-law, accuses Gary of being the cause of difficulties encountered in the work. Engaged, Gary leaves but returns to superintend the operations when Harvey is called away.

CHAPTER XXVI

The core drills went down the next day and came up again, bringing from deep, secret places the long gray cylinders of rock and earth that logged the structure of the world's heart, so far below. When the gray columns, the size of a child's arm, were laid out on the ground, Hickey and Gary studied them anxiously. "No showing yet," Gary said, sighing. "Nothing to do but go on down."

"O.K. Down she goes," Hickey agreed. Gary was a little worried. And he knew that Mona Lee was worried, too. It was as old Hughie Fothergill had said. An oil well was like a wife. You estimated the cost handily, and then the extras kept you in debt the rest of your life. "Don't reckon we could have passed them sands?" Hickey debated, at lunch time. "I've got a good notion to run Schlumberger on her, anyway."

but don't go overboard observing every last one to the smallest detail, and—most important of all—don't spoil the evening by worrying.

DEAR MISS DIX: I'm 17, and my boy friend is 18. We're in love, and want to marry. My family is against it. His folks are in favor of it. My father doesn't like him because he won't work.

ANSWER: Your father is right; you should drop the boy, but fast. His family's acquiescence to your marriage plans is probably due to the fact that they'd like to get him off their hands. Since you propose to live with your folks, the young man undoubtedly expects free room and board for the rest of his life. Any man who has an allergy against work will make a poor husband.

DEAR MISS DIX: My beau goes to college in a nearby town. He used to come down two or three times a week but lately he lets as much as two weeks go without seeing me. I know he's doing poorly in two subjects; do you think that could be the reason for his lack of interest?

ANSWER: There certainly couldn't be a more logical reason than the probability of flunking two subjects. Don't nag for more attention while his mind should be thoroughly settled on books. With spring exams coming up he needs to devote much time to study.

Miss Nissen cannot reply personally to readers but will answer problems of interest through this column.
